Old drug recall project begins

The drug Renaissance Foundation, a private non-profit organization, announced on Monday that it will begin a recall project for out-dated and unused prescription drugs. The project is expected to last for the next 10 years, and will involve the collection and disposal of over 200 million expired drugs. The project will be funded by private donations, with the goal of eliminating the problem of expired drugs in the United States.

Local employers slam wage increase years ago to a current level of $6.00. The wage increase on Monday will raise the minimum wage to $6.15 per hour, $0.15 more than the current $6.00 level. According to the Department of Labor, the increase will be the first since 1986.

The new minimum wage law, which applies to workers in retail, food service, and transportation industries, will be phased in over two years. Employers in the state with 10 or more employees will have to increase the minimum wage to $6.15 per hour by January 15, 1998. Employers with six to nine employees will have to increase the wage to $6.10 per hour by January 15, 1997. Employers with five or fewer employees will have to increase the wage to $5.75 per hour by January 15, 1999.

The new law was passed by the Iowa legislature in June and signed into law by Governor Terry Branstad. The law is a result of a long-standing effort by labor groups and workers to increase the minimum wage in Iowa.

The increase is expected to help some workers, but it is not seen as a major boost to the low-wage earners. The increase is less than the rate of inflation, and many workers will still struggle to make ends meet.

The local employers have mixed reactions to the increase. Some see it as a positive step, while others are concerned about the impact on small businesses.

"This is a positive step," said one employer. "It will help some of our workers who are struggling to make ends meet."

"But we're concerned about the impact on our business," said another employer. "We have to balance the needs of our workers with the needs of our customers."

The increase is likely to have a mixed impact on local employers. While some may see it as a positive step, others are concerned about the impact on their businesses. It remains to be seen how the new law will be implemented.

Bookstores’ landslide text sales no novelty

By PHYLLIS DOUGHERTY

Book sales are booming. With the advent of a new school year and the upcoming holiday season, bookstore managers are seeing an increase in sales.

"We’ve seen a significant increase in sales over the past few weeks," said one bookstore manager. "The students are buying books for their classes, and parents are buying books for their children."

The increase is being attributed to a number of factors. The new school year has brought new students into the bookstore, and parents are buying books for their children. Additionally, the holiday season is traditionally a time of increased book sales.

"The holiday season is always a great time for book sales," said another bookstore manager. "We see a lot of families coming in to buy books for their children’s reading lists."

The increase is expected to continue throughout the fall and winter months. The bookstore managers are optimistic about the sales figures for the remainder of the year.

I'll take a moment here to point out the general public service being done by officials of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in its public relations role. The NRC chief, as a result of the Philadelphia incident, is very interested in improving his image, but his efforts are beset by basic problems.

Women join space program

By Digital Press International

Rhea Seddon expects to be used as a pacesetter in the National Aeronautics and Space Administration as one of the first women to join the agency. She is expected to be a role model for young women interested in science careers. Seddon was among the elite group of 18 persons chosen Monday to join NASA's space shuttle crew. The women and men selected have all completed simulations of the space shuttle and are part of a program to occupy the space shuttle in 1980.

Amercian Telephone and Telecommunications Corp. recently discovered that blacks and the Hawaiian group were underrepresented in the space shuttle program. Staffers at the company have decided that some blacks selected. It may have influenced the decision to choose a black astronaut. Seddon's selection was a matter of leverage and the ability to accomplish tasks. "It's a risky problem but we're doing something we were not supposed to be doing," said Seddon. "We're willing to take the chance and use the space shuttle as an educational tool."

Amercian Telephone and Telecommunications Corp. has offered Seddon a job in a New York office. Seddon, who is a physics major, said she was offered the job but turned down the offer. She will continue to work at NASA.

Seddon lived in Dallas, Tex., with her parents. She attended the University of Texas and Maj. Frederick Gregson, a black astronaut, said Seddon seemed like the only woman candidate who would fit in with the team. "She seemed like one of the most capable, and one for our team," said Gregson.

Amercian Telephone and Telecommunications Corp. is an equal opportunity employer. The company employs all due to use of the space shuttle. Artificial lung study promises breakthrough

A new study on artificial lungs has shown promising results. The study was conducted by researchers at the University of California, San Francisco and has the potential to revolutionize the treatment of respiratory diseases.

Newport Beach, CA

Dr. John Smith, a renowned pulmonologist at the Newport Beach Medical Center, announced today that his team has made a breakthrough in artificial lung research.

"Our study has shown that artificial lungs can be used to support the respiratory system in patients with severe lung damage," said Dr. Smith. "This has the potential to revolutionize the treatment of respiratory diseases and improve patient outcomes."

UI childcare needs surveyed

By VALENTIN KELLER

Children and college: No use at all. The majority of the students who have children are not satisfied with the current situation. Many parents believe that the quality of childcare is not sufficient and that they need more support.

There are several reasons for this dissatisfaction. First, the number of childcare centers has not kept up with the increasing number of student parents. Second, the cost of childcare is often prohibitive for families on a fixed income. Third, the hours of operation for many childcare centers do not align with the needs of working parents.

The University of Illinois (UI) has taken steps to address these concerns. In January 1978, the UI sponsored a childcare study to gather information on the needs of student parents.

Approximately 250 student-parents were surveyed, and the results indicated that UI has an insufficient number of childcare centers. In addition, the centers that are available do not always meet the needs of student parents.

UI has responded to these findings by increasing the number of childcare options. This includes expanding the University's own childcare centers and offering more support for those who choose to find childcare on their own.

In January 1979, the UI conducted another study to assess the progress made in addressing the childcare needs of student parents. The results showed an improvement, but there is still room for further improvement.

UI's commitment to providing adequate childcare for student parents continues. They are working towards a system that meets the needs of all students, whether they choose to use UI's services or find their own childcare arrangements.
