The Senate voted to end debate Wednesday and allow a vote on a bill that would restrict the abortion procedure of dilation and evacuation to when the fetus is less than 12 weeks old. The vote came after a week of intense debate that included emotional speeches from lawmakers on both sides of the issue.

The bill, dubbed the Partial Birth Abortion Ban Act, passed with a 51-49 vote, giving the necessary two-thirds majority needed for passage. The bill now heads to the House, where it faces much more opposition.

Senator Joseph Biden, a Delaware Democrat, argued that the bill would deny women their right to choose. "This bill is a violation of a fundamental right, a right that all women should have," he said.

But Senator Orrin Hatch, a Utah Republican, said the bill was necessary to protect the unborn. "We need a bill that says that abortion is not a constitutional right," he said.

The vote came just days after a similar bill was introduced in the House, but that measure failed to advance.

The Senate also passed a resolution calling on the Supreme Court to reconsider its 1973 decision in Roe v. Wade, which legalized abortion nationwide.

The House is expected to vote on the resolution as well, but it's unclear if it will pass.

Senate cuts off welfare funds for abortions

May 10, 1978

The House has voted to cut off welfare funds for abortion, a move that could further restrict access to the procedure for poor women.

The bill, which passed with a 218-212 vote, would deny federal dollars to any state that uses welfare funds to pay for abortions. It was introduced by Representative Jack Kemp, a New York Republican.

Kemp said the bill was necessary to protect the taxpayer and the values of those who oppose abortion. "We can't afford to pay for abortions with taxpayer dollars," he said.

But Representative Barbara Boxer, a California Democrat, called the bill "an attack on the rights of American women." She argued that cutting off abortion funds would only force women to seek unsafe and illegal procedures.

The bill now goes to the Senate, where it is expected to face strong resistance. Many senators have pledged to vote against the measure.

House says D.C. should vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Thursday overwhelmingly rejected legislation that would have ended a constitutional political relationship between Congress and the District of Columbia.

The measure, which would have allowed Congress to make laws for the district, was rejected by a vote of 332-65. The measure had been introduced by Representative Joe Clark, a Pennsylvania Democrat.

But Representative James Oberstar, a Minnesota Democrat, said the measure was needed to ensure that Congress has control over the district's budget.

"The District of Columbia is part of the United States, and it's time for the federal government to take responsibility for it," he said.

The measure was strongly opposed by Representatives Eleanor Holmes Norton, a Washington Democrat, and Ronawaii Perlman, a New York Democrat, who both said it would undermine the autonomy of the district.

Ray misused, senators say

DESI MOINES (1717) — Sen. Earl Willey, D-Des Moines, said Thursday the Senate has been misled about the circumstances surrounding a controversial proposal to send a resolution of no-confidence to the governor's office.

"The governor apparently hasn't changed his story," Willey said. "The original story was that he did not act at a council meeting in January to issue the resolution of no-confidence to the Senate. Now, it turns out. Jernigan did call the meeting.

"Every. appointment to the commission was forwarded to the Senate for confirmation. Now, it seems this resolution was being considered by the department of State then and, even if it was a piece of trash, it's a piece of trash being considered by the department of State then.

"It's the governor's job to screen the candidates that come to him from this panel. He's failed to do it.

"I was at a council meeting in January, and the governor advised me to stay seated, to be careful.

Parentage Act establishes fatherhood rights

By P.AUL FRANZ

Defining the legal relationship between a child and its father is adding another dimension to protecting the rights of the unborn. The recent news operations of two Iowa towns indicate the pressures toward the edification of both sides. The new law has been controversial, with some politicians declaring it a "violation of constitutional rights." A birth during a technically sound marriage does not necessarily invalidate a man's or woman's legal claim to a child's paternity. If they are married, they are entitled to a legal judgment in favor of the father. If they are not married, then the father's rights are limited to those established by the law of that state or by local custom. Family law is a complex, ever-changing area of the law, and the rights of children are often difficult to determine. In some states, the law is more protective of the rights of the father, while in others, the rights of the mother are given greater weight. In general, the law attempts to balance the rights of the parents and the best interests of the child. It is important for parents to understand their rights and responsibilities under the law.

Women: Rapist's fault; men: Victim to blame

For instance, a woman who is raped by a man is entitled to seek damages from the man, while a man who is raped by a woman is generally not entitled to seek damages from her. This is a result of the legal principle of "responder theory," which holds that the party who benefits from the action of another is responsible for the results of that action. In the case of a rape, the woman is the party who benefits from the act of the rapist, and therefore she is the party who is responsible for the results of the act. In the case of a man who is raped by a woman, there is no party who benefits from the act of the rapist, and therefore he is not the party who is responsible for the results of the act. This principle is based on the idea that a person should not be held responsible for an action that they did not benefit from. It is important for people to understand their rights and responsibilities under the law.

The Iowa act now on books

The Iowa act on books was signed by Gov. Harold Batterson on March 27. The act is a uniform parentage act, which establishes the rights and responsibilities of parents and children in a variety of situations. The act establishes the rights of parents and children in cases of legitimacy, illegitimacy, and adoption. It also provides for the establishment of paternity by proof of birth. The act is a significant improvement over the previous law, which did not provide for the establishment of paternity by proof of birth. It is important for people to understand their rights and responsibilities under the law.

Republicans

Nearly 300 delegates from Iowa districts met on Saturday in Coralville for the Republican state convention. The convention is the first step in the process of selecting delegates to the Republican National Convention, which will take place in August. The convention is a critical part of the Republican party's efforts to select candidates for the presidency and to develop a party platform.

The convention, scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. on Saturday, will also feature a number of events to attract delegates and party members to the convention. These events will include a variety of activities, such as a presidential debate, a speech by a prominent Republican, and a trip to a presidential library. Nicaragua gives deadline to rebels

The warning came in a communication signed by Capt. Agustín Abarca, Sandinista military commander in Leon, and broadcast on local radio sta- tions. The Sandinistas said their request had been made to prevent further bloodshed, but neither they nor the National Guard had been satisfied with the intermediaries appointed by the United Nations Human Rights Commission.

The deadline was set for 11 o'clock Sunday morning, March 12, and the Sandinistas warned that military action would follow if the government did not accept their demands.

The rebels, who have been fighting to topple the regime of President Anastasio Somoza, have set up a series of roadblocks and are involved in sporadic clashes with government forces.

The rebellion, which began in mid-February, has caused widespread suffering and the destruction of many villages.

Rhodesia interim rule secures black majority

SOUTH AFRICA (UPI) - Rhodesia's white regime and black rebels have signed an agreement to govern the country jointly, the Rhodesian Prime Minister, Ian Smith, said. The agreement was reached at a Six-day meeting attended by leaders of both sides, and is expected to end months of fighting.

The agreement provides for a four-member council to be appointed by the two sides, with each side having two members.

The council will be responsible for the day-to-day running of the country, and will be replaced by a new government when elections are held.

The signing of the agreement is seen as a significant step towards a political settlement in Rhodesia, where fighting has been going on for several months.

‘Julia’ reflects on writer’s life:
She fishes in lake of sainthood

By George Eliot

From the beginning, it is Julia that plays; at the beginning, she is nothing but a plaything. She is nothing but a plaything. But she begins to reflect and understand and wonder, and then she begins to live.

Julia’s life, as presented by the writer to her readers, is a symbolic one, a parable of the human condition.

As she grows
older and wiser,
Julia becomes more conscious of her existence, and more conscious of the meaning of her life. She begins to question the purpose of her existence, and to seek answers to these questions.

Julia’s life is symbolic of the human condition,
and of the search for meaning and purpose in life.

Michigan State puts lock on title

Michigan's 23rd straight victory yesterday was the 12th in a row by the No. 1 team. This win clinched the Big Ten title, and the final game of the regular season is only a formality now.

The Hawkeyes, who entered the season as one of the most promising teams in the nation, have been unable to keep up with the Spartans throughout the season. Michigan State's victory further solidifies its place at the top of the Big Ten standings.

Michigan State's dominance was exemplified by its ability to control the game from start to finish. The Spartans' defense held the Hawkeyes to just 33 points, while their own offense scored 76. Michigan State's leading scorer, forward Kelvin Haskell, scored 22 points, helping to secure the victory.

The Hawkeyes, on the other hand, were unable to find the rhythm they had enjoyed in previous games. Despite having a strong showing in the first half, they were unable to sustain their performance in the second half, allowing Michigan State to pull away.

Michigan State's victory solidifies its place at the top of the Big Ten standings, and the team is now looking forward to their upcoming games, where they will face some of the conference's toughest opponents. The team's coaches and players are already preparing for the March Madness tournament, which they hope to dominate.

The Hawkeyes, on the other hand, will be looking to regroup and rediscover their form in the upcoming games. With just a few weeks left in the regular season, they have a lot to prove and show that they are still a force to be reckoned with in the Big Ten conference.
