Sociology students plan sit-in

The ad

A student demonstration by some sociology department graduate students is scheduled for sometime this week as a protest against the silencing of a political issue.

"This department offers a unique opportunity to engage in political activities," said one graduate student. "The department has not provided an adequate forum for discussion on this issue." The demonstration is expected to take place Monday evening, with the number of participants still to be determined.

The IFC has been criticized for its handling of the sit-in, which was held in protest against the university's decision to remove the group's recognition.

Gov't can expect resistance from miners

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The administration must expect a "strong" of resistance from a mining union under a Treadwell-type strike, the Workers' Party's leader said Monday.

"We've got the same thing going on in the mining industry," said Walter Reuther, head of the United Mine Workers, when he was asked if the administration would have to fear resistance from a miners' strike.

"We're going to have to deal with the situation. We're going to have to deal with it whether we like it or not," Reuther said.

The books, including classics by Paris, Milan, and Fried, were compiled in 1868. When the city of Chicago was incorporated, the library was at a loss for a place to store the books. A group of citizens, led by a man named Thomas A. Welch, formed a committee to find a place to house the books.

The committee found a vacant building at the corner of Second and Dearborn streets. They negotiated a lease with the building's owner and moved the books into the new building. The library was then open for business.

To be determined. The universe is a vast and mysterious place that contains billions of stars, billions of galaxies, and billions of planets. It is impossible to know everything about the universe. Even scientists, who are experts in understanding the universe, can only learn so much about it. The universe is constantly changing, and new discoveries are being made all the time. So, it is likely that our understanding of the universe will continue to evolve in the future.
Small Iowa towns may get more federal funds

Iowa City men. "It's Income sharing allocations and community revenue-sharing payments," Leach said. "This gives the city a special advantage in meeting their special needs." "Historically, Iowa has done very well in receiving community-revem-sharillg funds with other federal government programs," Leach said. "Two years ago, we were the highest in the state, but since then, the trend has been in a decline." He said it is too early to tell how changes in the Department of Revenue will impact the city. If the GAO releases its final report later this month, the council will hold public hearings at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. on April 7 to determine how the community wants to handle community-revenue-sharing funds again.

Marijuana: solution to unfavorable trade balance?

From Kentucky comes first suggestion of a different way to overturn the unfavorable American trade balance. Indeed, Governor James Ramsey of Kentucky has gone so far as to invite British and Canadian producers to organize more controlled production of the drug. This is a serious suggestion that deserves consideration. It is not likely that any one country, or a number of countries, will be able to produce enough marijuana to satisfy all the world's demand. But it is possible that the United States, with its large and diverse population, could produce enough to meet about half the world's demand. This would allow the United States to export marijuana, and thereby earn valuable foreign exchange.

The first step would be to legalize marijuana production in the United States. This would allow the United States to enter into international negotiations with other countries, such as Canada and Great Britain, about the terms of a possible international trade agreement. The United States would then be able to negotiate a fair and equitable price for marijuana, and thereby earn valuable foreign exchange.

The second step would be to encourage the production of marijuana in the United States. This could be done by providing financial incentives, such as tax breaks and subsidies, to marijuana producers. The United States could also provide technical assistance, such as research and development, to marijuana producers.

The third step would be to export marijuana to other countries. This could be done by trading marijuana for other goods, such as oil or minerals. The United States could also sell marijuana to other countries, but this would require a change in international law.

In conclusion, the United States could do a great deal to improve its trade balance by legalizing, producing, and exporting marijuana. This would allow the United States to earn valuable foreign exchange, which could be used to pay for imports. It would also allow the United States to reduce its dependence on foreign oil and minerals.

the bill was introduced in Congress by Senator John Doe, a Democrat from West Virginia. The bill would have made it a federal crime to use marijuana, with penalties ranging from a fine of $5,000 to a prison sentence of up to 10 years. The bill was supported by many political leaders, including the President, who stated that it was necessary to "protect our communities from the dangers of marijuana use." The bill was opposed by many others, including marijuana activists, who argued that it would create a new class of criminals and lead to increased police violence.

The bill was eventually defeated in the Senate, but it served as a catalyst for increased national debates about marijuana policy. The debate continues to this day, with supporters and opponents of legalization on both sides of the issue.
Police seek Flynt witnesses

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bizarrely dressed man attacked a federal courthouse in Washington on Tuesday, killing a Secret Service agent and wounding two others before being shot by police, authorities said. The attacker was later arrested.

The shooting occurred at the entrance of the courthouse, according to the Secret Service. The agent who was killed was escorting a civilian into the building when the attacker opened fire, the agency said.

The attacker, who was described as wearing a dark shirt and pants, was later taken into custody by police. The agency did not release any further details about the attacker or the nature of the attack.

The incident is under investigation by the Secret Service and the Metropolitan Police Department, the agency said. The Washington Metropolitan Police Department confirmed that it was responding to the shooting and that the suspect was in custody.

There were no immediate reports of any other injuries or damage. The Secret Service did not immediately respond to questions about the attack.

The Secret Service said it has activated its crisis management plan and is providing support to the Metropolitan Police Department. The agency also said it has increased security measures at its facilities.

The shooting occurred just days after the inauguration of President Joe Biden, who is scheduled to address Congress on Wednesday. The Secret Service has been working to ensure the safety of the president and members of Congress.

The attack comes less than a year after a man opened fire at the Pentagon last November, killing one person and wounding three others.

The Secret Service did not immediately provide details about the suspect or the motive for the attack. The agency said it would release more information as it becomes available.

The shooting occurred shortly after the conclusion of the inauguration ceremony, which was held at the U.S. Capitol in Washington, D.C.

House passes tenant-landlord bill

DEB MODER (D-Ft. Dodge) - Comprehensive legislation that would define the rights and responsibilities of both renters and landlords was passed 7 to 2 in the House Tuesday. Rep. John Paulsen, D-Decorah, floor manager of the bill, said the measure represented a balanced approach favoring neither the landlord nor the tenant and would change the law in the state.

The 7-page bill, called the Landlord-Tenant Act, has been described as a bill of rights for tenants and landlords and is the first change by the legislature in two decades in an attempt to balance the rights and responsibilities of both.

In the Senate, a similar measure was approved 24-14.

new product liability standards

A producer liability bill in the Iowa House of Representatives, which opposed a letter of opposition by insurance advocates and legislators, was approved by the House Commerce Committee this year, according to an office of the House Commerce Committee.

The insurance advocates and legislators opposed the letter of opposition for the second time in 1989. The House Commerce Committee was previously reversed by the House this year.

The House Commerce Committee voted to approve a producer liability bill, which would make it more difficult for manufacturers to avoid liability for damages caused by their products.

Rhodesia admits raid, conflict with Zambia

LOUGAR, Bulawayo (UPI) — Rhodesia admitted on Wednesday it had carried out a raid on Zambia, which has threatened military action in retaliation.

Zhakare, a Rhodesian defense official, said the raid took place on the night of March 6 and that Rhodesian forces had captured and released Zambian soldiers who were trying to enter Rhodesia.

The admission came after Zambia said it had discovered an arms cache and other evidence suggesting that Rhodesia was planning an attack. Zambia had also claimed to have shot down a Rhodesian aircraft.

Zhakare said the Rhodesians acted because they had received intelligence indicating that Zambia was planning an invasion. He said the Rhodesians had killed a dozen or more Zambians and taken prisoners.

The admission was an about-face for Rhodesia, which had denied any involvement in the Zambian conflict and had called the Zambian actions a provocation.

The development came as pressure mounted on Rhodesia to end its brutal repression of the black majority and to negotiate a peaceful settlement to the conflict.

NCAA pairings criticized

LITTLE ROCK (UPI)- Basketball coaches whose teams received low national rankings in the first round of the NCAA basketball tournament were critical of the system.

"It's a thankless job," Eddie Sutton of Arkansas said. "It's almost as though the NCAA is saying, 'Here's your team, now make us look good.'"

"It's a great job, but one that's not a very good one," Steve Mather, basketball coach at Michigan State University, said. "You've got a lot of people who've been doing it for a long time, but you've got a lot of new guys who've never done it before."

"We're not going to criticize the NCAA, but it's a difficult situation," Mather said. "We're doing the best we can with the system we have."
