Carter's speech wows Venezuelan audiences

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Jimmy Carter's three-day visit to Venezuela brought two public exchanges with Venezuelan President Luis Herrera Beltrán, each plugging much of the capital city.

Emergency power generators were activated in La Candelaria, the presidential palace, where Carter was staying, on Tuesday evening.

A spokesman for the Cuban Embassy in Washington said reports of power failures were completely unfounded.

Carter and President Andres Perez expressed hope over new bilateral agreements on the two-day summit, which was set to begin Tuesday night.

Two agreements dealing with oil and energy and a third agreement on cooperation in the fight against drug traffickers were signed.

A third agreement to exchange technologies and 'innovative experiences' was signed.

The agreements will be signed in the presence of the U.S. and Venezuelan presidents.

State health plan back in House

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The House defeated a proposal to create a state health plan and a bill to provide more assistance to state health plans.

Carter, speaking at the White House, said the proposed bill would provide more help to states in the fight against drug trafficking.

The bill, which would provide more assistance to state health plans, was defeated by a vote of 252 to 168.

The Democrats, led by Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., have been pushing the bill for months, but it has faced opposition from Republicans and some Democrats.

The Senate has already passed a similar bill, but it has not yet been considered by the House.

Local officials exempted from interest bill dilution

Conflict of interest bill diluted

DES MOINES (AP) - Some local officials have been exempted from a strict state interest disclosure law, a decision that has opened the door to concerns about ethical standards.

The decision came at a time when a conflict is a key issue for local officials, especially as they grapple with the impacts of the recession and rising costs.

The conflict of interest bill was proposed by the Iowa Legislature and signed into law by the governor in 2009. It went into effect Jan. 1, 2010.

The bill requires that all local officials file a disclosure statement annually, listing all outside interests that could influence their official duties.

The law was written in part to address concerns about the influence of special interests on local government decisions.

Local officials have argued that the law is too burdensome and that it places an undue burden on their time and resources.

The law also allows for the creation of a conflict of interest board to review cases where local officials have potential conflicts.

New plan spares bowling lanes

BY TINA ORMSGILL

A plan to expand the Union Bookstore by extending it into the bowling lanes of the IMU is being considered, according to a statement by the IMU administration.

The IMU is under consideration to accommodate the store.

The expansion proposal is the latest in a series of proposals to provide additional space for the bookstore, with plans to open a new location on the West End campus.

The bookstore has been struggling with low input, cost

BY MARK DAVIS

Despite a loss, interest, local officials say, is growing in the plan to expand the bookstore in the IMU.

The proposal, which calls for a new location, raises several questions about the feasibility of the project.

The IMU administration is considering several options, including leasing space from local businesses.

The proposal, according to a statement by the IMU administration, would involve the purchase of a building near the IMU campus, which could be used for expanded bookstore operations.

The IMU administration said that the proposal is in the early stages and that more information would be released as the project progresses.

Student Senate is looking for qualified interested students to serve on all-university advisory committees.

These are important positions that require a strong commitment from students, especially as they consider how to become involved in an area of concern.

Applications for the following all-university Senate offices may be obtained in the Student Senate Office, IMU.

- Cultural Affairs
- Student Advisory Committee
- Student Services
- Student Health
- Parking and Transportation

Year in prison for convicted cops

HOUSTON (UPI) - A federal judge Tuesday sentenced four former police officers to eight years of probation and a $5,000 fine for their role in a 1981 police brutality probe, the latest of a series of misconduct cases that marred the Houston Police Department's image in recent years.

The four officers, who were convicted last year of violating the civil rights of a black man, were sentenced to six years in prison, the maximum allowed under federal law. The judge said the officers had acted with intentional cruelty and indifference to the man's rights.

The case is one of several police brutality probes in Houston that have led to convictions and imprisonment. In 1982, three Houston police officers were convicted of brutality and sentenced to prison.

Beware of winter of '81

NORTH WHITEFIELD, Maine (UPI) - Chrysler cars turn 180, with up to 60 inches of snow forecast for New England, followed by weeks of constant sub-zero weather, will begin a decade of rather cold winters, a Maine weather sage said Tuesday.

Bradley Adams, president of the New York Lithographers and Photographic Union Local 17, and the membership voted 177-25 last week to walk out just 12 years after the union was founded.

"The proposal was so shocking, the contract negotiations are over in a week," he said.

"We are starting a new contract," Adams said.

The winter is so severe that the weather in the lake area is expected to be the same as in the winter of '81, Adams said.

"I want to congratulate you on the history-making event in the history of the union," Adams said.

"I expect the winter of '81 to be one of the worst on record," he said. "At this time, we are prepared to take the necessary steps to ensure the safety of all employees."
Sharply higher food prices predicted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pork prices are expected to soar 10 per cent from last year's level, according to an industry forecast Wednesday.

The industry said the increase is due to higher feed costs, which have jumped due to increases in the price of grain. The forecast also predicts a 5 per cent increase in the cost of beef and a 3 per cent increase in the cost of chicken.

Immunity of judges unscathed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Supreme Court on Wednesday ruled that judges are immune from liability in most cases, a decision that could have a major impact on the legal system.

The court ruled that judges are insulated from liability in most cases, including those involving alleged misconduct, because they are immune from suit under the doctrine of judicial immunity.

Mobs threaten murder if Moro not freed soon

ROME (UPI) — Mob leaders in Italy on Wednesday threatened to murder the Italian prime minister if he does not release the Italian followers of the Red Brigades.

The leaders said they were tired of waiting for the Italian government to release the Italian followers of the Red Brigades, who are being held in jail without trial.

The Italian government has said it is considering releasing the followers of the Red Brigades, but the move has been met with criticism from the Italian public.

Jane Cooper: poetic survival

By MARIE FROCH

All as I was, I was..." Cooper is a woman poet. Her first book of poetry, "NOMAD," was tentatively entitled "Whoever Has Been Used in the Manufacture of This Poetry," a classic poem about her early twenties. During the time she was young and uninvolved, she felt that she was not writing for an audience, but rather for herself. It is only recently that she has begun to work on the piece, and so far, she has not fully expressed herself. She wonders how many women who are writing, and who are not, are not writing in their work, and if this poem is written in the early 1940s. "Whoever Has Been Used in the Manufacture of This Poetry," is not enough to be a poem, yet it is not enough to be "Whoever Has Been Used in the Manufacture of This Poetry," because it cannot be rewritten. It can be said that Jane Cooper's book is one of the greatest voices of her time, and perhaps more important, it can be said that it is one of the greatest voices of her time.

Cops might bust skateboarders if spillrwadness gets too much first

By Joe Baran
Sun-Times

Skateboarders beware! According to Iowa City Police Chief Harvey Miller, the department is cracking down on Iowa City skateboarding to prevent possible danger. You know, for one thing you may not be wearing a helmet.

However, Iowa City and UI police deny that there is an official crackdown. For one thing, the police are not aware of any official crackdown.

For some time now, the problem has been growing as more and more young people have been skateboarding in Iowa City. Many of them are not wearing helmets and some are not obeying traffic rules.

In an interview, Chief Miller said that the police have been receiving complaints from citizens about skateboarders.

"We have had a number of complaints about skateboarders, not wearing helmets and driving recklessly," Chief Miller said. "We have also received complaints about them obstructing traffic and causing noise disturbance."

According to Chief Miller, the police have been increasing their presence in areas where skateboarders are concentrated. They have been giving out warnings and citations to skateboarders who are not obeying traffic laws.

"We are trying to get the skateboarders to understand the importance of wearing helmets and obeying traffic laws," Chief Miller said. "Our goal is to prevent injuries and improve safety for all road users."

The department is also working with local schools and communities to educate skateboarders about the dangers of skateboarding and the importance of safety.

"We are encouraging skateboarders to take advantage of the many opportunities for skateboarding in Iowa City," Chief Miller said. "There are skateparks in the city and a variety of other locations where they can practice their skills."

The department is also working with local businesses to create more opportunities for skateboarding. For example, some businesses are allowing skateboarders to use their property for skateboarding.

"We are trying to create a balanced approach that welcomes skateboarding while also ensuring safety and civic responsibility," Chief Miller said.

Meanwhile, skateboarders are voicing their concerns about the crackdown.

"We understand the need to ensure safety," said Skateboarder Jake Brown. "But we also feel that the police are being too heavy-handed."

Brown said that he has been skateboarding in Iowa City for several years and has never had any problems with the law.

"I think the police are just trying to look tough," Brown said. "But I don't think they are really concerned about safety."

The issue of skateboarders skateboarding in Iowa City is not a new one.

In recent years, the problem has gained increasing attention from both the police and the community.

A few years ago, the department introduced a skateboarding policy that prohibited skateboarding on public property without a permit.

"We had a lot of complaints about the problem," Chief Miller said.
"We needed to do something to address it."
Record by Dresselhaus paces tracksters' win

By CATHY BROWN-COHEN

The Hawkeyes' annual outdoor meet at the University of Iowa was a triumphant one for the women's track team as they swept all of the top places on the final day.

The women's team finished first in the overall standings, with 125 points, followed by Drake with 58 points and Iowa State with 55 points.
