Farm bill will pass, Leach says

By JESS GABOUR

The Senate Agriculture Committee probably will approve the "benefit of the doubt" hammer in the new farm bill, a top aide to Agriculture Secretary John R. Leach said Thursday.

The aide, familiar with the bill's proceedings and who works for Leach, said the commission was likely to set aside $2.20 a bushel for corn loan rates.

A Senate Agriculture subcommittee was scheduled to consider the bill's provisions on Thursday, but the aide said the commission would probably not vote to approve the bill until Friday.

The aide said the bill would have a provision to set aside $2.20 per bushel for corn loan rates.

Immunity

Earlier this week the Supreme Court ruled that an Indiana judge is required to appear at the dedication of a memorial to a teenage girl without her knowledge or consent. In justifying their ruling, the justices see the interests of judicial immunity as including the interest of the justice, but their action has reversed the role of the interest and expanded the role of the principle.

The Supreme Court denied the judicial immunity principle in this case in the form of a "judicial act." Justice White, writing for the majority, asserted that the justices did not reach a conclusion and therefore was acting in his official capacity when he made the certification request, bringing under the protection of judicial immunity the issue of whether the statute is constitutional. The justices further observed that he simply was not on the court when the statute was enacted and he does not have an independent constitutional or political interest in a decision of the statute. For all these reasons, I dissent from the Court's judgment.

Dear Editor:

I would like to join the editorial discussion on the recent editorial in The Daily Iowan about the issue of student credit unions. I believe that the editorial provides a comprehensive and well-reasoned argument in favor of student credit unions.

Regarding the editorial's point about the potential benefits of student credit unions, I would like to add that these organizations can offer a variety of financial services tailored specifically to the needs of students. For example, student credit unions often provide lower interest rates on loans and better interest rates on savings accounts compared to traditional banks. Additionally, student credit unions can offer education and financial planning resources to help students achieve their financial goals.

Furthermore, student credit unions can also provide a sense of community and belonging, as they are often run by and for students. This can create a more student-centered and inclusive environment compared to traditional banks, which may prioritize profit over the needs of their customer base.

In conclusion, I believe that student credit unions have the potential to offer a comprehensive and valuable service to students. I urge the Daily Iowan to support a discussion on this important topic and to continue providing thought-provoking editorials that encourage readers to consider alternative perspectives.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

Spring launches canoestees

by WALTER HEDDOCK,

It's spring again. The arrowhead in the sky is sneaking back, and Iowa waters are free of ice at docks and marinas along the rivers.

This year, however, instead of enjoying the usual things, we can take part in a new, nature-based, outdoor activity. Iowa's Department of Natural Resources is offering canoeing trips along the Upper Iowa River.

Canoeing skills are on the rise. According to Iowas, the increase in participation is partly due to the flood of 2008, which made the rivers accessible and encouraged people to try this new activity.

Dozens of groups have organized canoe trips, and many more are planning to do so soon. The Upper Iowa River offers a variety of experiences, from calm, slow-moving sections to more challenging stretches.

To prepare for your first canoe trip, make sure you have the right gear. This includes a life jacket, a hat, and sunscreen. It's also a good idea to bring snacks and plenty of water.

The cost of renting a canoe can vary depending on the location. However, it's a great way to experience Iowa's natural beauty and get some exercise at the same time.

So, get ready to paddle along the Upper Iowa River and enjoy the outdoors in a new way.
A charming bit of wit, sentimentality

It had all the appearances of a small-scale, somewhat accidentally happening, wittingly selected, musing, looking toward the edge of the thin film for those who want to see. However, they were waiting for a serious piece, but a piece of badly written, and inappropriately and intentionally The Classics, Inc., production of the 18th century set for the Senior's show. It was refreshing to see a classical period piece done in Iowa City, where much of the material has been seen on many stages in the past, in both college and local theatre.

A charming blend of wit and sentimentality. The School for Scandal, by Richard Brinsley Sheridan, was performed in 1976 on Black's Theater. It is still in 1976, but about a gang of grief-stricken, tepid, and who play together in defense and against the grandmothers of their society. It is particularly amusing when one remembers that the French Revolution followed shortly after this good-humored romp of the wise.

For an indifferent audience participation with the plot, a less fastidious audience enjoying the wit and Dialogue. The character of Lady Buckminster (Beck Richardson), the leader of "the scoundrels' convention," gives the play a sort of punch. Although the action is slow and dull at times, the characters have served as an example to the other performers the sense of a certain combination is needed. Lady Lister (Leslie Proctor) showed a pleasing adroitness in her movements, while Mrs. Piver (Ann Lamoreaux) although much less effective in her abilities at times, proved to be a powerful force in the production. The character was managed to carry off his egotism, and Mrs. Piver pulled it off with an amazing amount of quirk and dash in her delivery and actions to add more subtlety movements.

The School for Scandal is The School for Scandal for its fourth production. The group, a great community organization that was formed January, is financed by some of the Avon members on the board of directors.

It was put together because there's very little in terms of classical drama started here." explained Barry Over, head of the drama department, "The group this year has added a new member, who is a director and teacher.

Nine players return from last year's Major League Baseball season, but Hagedorn said, "And that's our biggest worry." It's always a challenge to put shifts into high gear this time of year, said Hagedorn, who is counting on a strong start in the season opener April 8 and 9 at the University of Illinois, in Champaign.

"I'm not expecting too much from our team this season," said Hagedorn. "The players are not very experienced around the greens, and we're simply staying loose in anticipation of the season opener." She also said that Hagedorn will be in town tonight to talk about her upcoming season in Hawkeye Softball.

Hagedorn's team will be playing against the University of Illinois, who has won the conference title the past two years. The Illini are expected to be strong this season, and Hagedorn knows that her team will have to work hard to come out on top.

"We need to improve our hitting and fielding," she said. "But we have a good enough pitching staff to make up for some of our weak spots."

Hagedorn is optimistic about the upcoming season, but realistic about her team's chances. She said, "I think we can have a good season, but we need to work hard and play well to get there."
