Final photo session photographer Lawrence Osborne praised the CIA's decision to give the document that was received on the Special Senate Intelligence Committee.

Osborne said he was impressed by the CIA's decision to give the document to the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Osborne said the document was a significant piece of evidence in the ongoing investigation of the CIA's role in the illegal arms deal.

Osborne said he was grateful to the CIA for its cooperation and for giving the document to the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Osborne said the document would be a crucial piece of evidence in the investigation.

Osborne said he was looking forward to working with the Senate Intelligence Committee to determine the full scope of the CIA's involvement in the arms deal.

Osborne said he was confident that the Senate Intelligence Committee would do a thorough job of investigating the matter.

Osborne said he was committed to ensuring that the authorities have all the information they need to bring to justice those responsible for the illegal arms deal.

Osborne said he was looking forward to the day when justice would be served.

Council okays public housing

By MICHIGAN SCHOFIELD

The city is in a surplus $5,000 situation, with years of building up a reserve for this purpose, and as a result, the city is able to deed the property to the Development Trust for housing purposes.

Discussion of the grant application for a federal grant for housing development was held. Mayor Robert Jones and Commissioner John Bullard voted against it. Mayor Jones expressed concern over the possibility of the grant being used for any purpose other than public housing. Commissioner Bullard stated that the grant would provide a valuable resource for the city. The decision was made to send the application to the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). Mayor Jones stated that he would support the application if it was approved by the city council.

In a daily column of the Miami Herald, 90-year-old resident, Mr. Smith, "The '90s" School of Art, has been awarded an honorary degree. Mr. Smith is known for his collecting antiques and artifacts from around the world. His collection includes everything from ancient pottery to modern sculpture.

The School of Art, which is located in the heart of Miami, has been awarded the degree in recognition of his contributions to the arts. Mr. Smith has been a long-time supporter of the arts and has donated millions of dollars to various art museums and galleries around the world.

Mr. Smith received the degree during a special ceremony at the School of Art. The ceremony was attended by many of his friends and colleagues who came to celebrate his achievement.

In his acceptance speech, Mr. Smith thanked everyone for their support and said that he was honored to receive the degree.

The School of Art is one of the top art schools in the country and is known for its dedication to providing a high-quality education to its students. The school offers a wide range of programs, including painting, sculpture, and photography, and is home to some of the most talented artists in the country.

The degree was presented by the President of the School of Art, who said that Mr. Smith was a true visionary and a true leader in the arts.

Mr. Smith's contributions to the arts will be remembered for many years to come, and his legacy will continue to inspire future generations of artists.

Young Ballesteros seeks Masters title

AUGUSTA, Ga. — (AP) — “Slowpoke with a slow mind,” Severiano Ballesteros would see how many more head back to Europe after the Masters this week. “I’ll come play in the U.S. when I’m 40,” Ballesteros said.

Ballesteros played at Augusta National earlier this year, when he made it through the PGA qualifying school. He said he was probably the only one in his group to win the U.S. Open and make it at the Masters in the same week.

“Golf is a game of imagination. You have to think about what you’re going to do before you play,” Ballesteros said. “A lot of times, I’ve played better than the previous week because I thought more about the game.”

Graham expects a foreign winner

AUGUSTA, Ga. — (AP) — Australian David Graham says he’ll be the foreign player to watch this week at Augusta National. He says he’ll be the foreign player to watch this week because he’s the foreign player who’s already qualified for the U.S. Open.

“After winning the Masters, I’ve been watching the pros play in the U.S. and I’ve been thinking about my own game,” Graham said. “I think the American golfers are the best in the world, so I’m going to be watching them closely.”

Slowpoke golfers will be fined

The PGA Tour has announced new rules for slowplay. They say that slowplay will be fined at the Masters. The fines will range from $250 to $1,000, depending on the severity of the infraction.

“Slowplay has been a problem in golf for a long time,” said PGA Tour Commissioner Tim Finchem. “We have to do something to change that culture of slowplay.”

Optimism prevails as 'next year' begins for Major Leagues

By United Press International

"Next year" has come at last for baseball fans. The league presidents have had their opening day press conferences, and their teams have reported for the season which is just around the corner. In an era when the sport has been overshadowed by the new form of gambling, the upcoming season will provide a welcome distraction for baseball fans across the nation.

World Series preview, despite the growing popularity of Charles Lee and the Oakland A's, Consumer Reports Baseball's annual report reveals the reasons behind this year's playoff picture. The American League, coming under more scrutiny because of a controversy with the National League, is set to start negotiations for the next season. Meanwhile, the National League will hold its annual meeting next week including the work of the New York Mets. The National League press association will meet Thursday with the Houston Astros to discuss the upcoming season. The season will start around March 20, and the first game will be played by the San Francisco Giants at Atlanta's Fulton County Stadium.

In recent years, the Major Leagues have been hit by a rash of retirements and injuries, with the number of players on the active list down from a peak of 1,800 in 1990 to just under 1,500 this season. The pace of play has slowed, and the game has become more physically demanding. However, the enthusiasm for the game remains strong, and fans are excited about the prospects for the new season.

Cincinnati, seat of today's opener

CINCINNATI (UPI) - The National League season opener Thursday at Riverfront Stadium will be a battle of two teams with very different expectations. The Reds, with a roster full of stars, are favorites to win the division, while the Astros have their work cut out for them. Both teams are under the leadership of new managers, and the season will be a test of their ability to lead their teams to success.

Spinks makes his own decisions

NEW YORK (UPI) - Leon Spinks, a power-hitting, workhorse second baseman, has made it clear that he's not going to let anyone else make decisions for him. Spinks, who hit .298 with 10 home runs and 42 RBI last season, has no intention of trading his starting job to anyone.

"I don't want to trade Spinks' title," said the incomparable Ken Norton, who fought four title bouts with Spinks. "He's the best second baseman in the game, and he deserves to keep his job." Norton, who lost to Spinks in 1978, believes that the young baseball player has the talent to become a great star.

All: WBC unfair in stripping title

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) - The World Boxing Council has restored a title to Leon Spinks, who was stripped of the championship last month. Spinks, who won the title against Muhammad Ali in 1978, was stripped of the championship after he failed a drug test.

"We didn't want to take Spinks' title," said the WBC's chief referee, Ernesto Valenzuela. "But we had to, because Spinks had failed to protect his title. The WBC has a responsibility to protect the sport of boxing from those who would use it for their own personal gain. Spinks has shown himself to be a great fighter, and he deserves to have his title back."
