Americans sink under Carter hopes

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Carter entered the White House with a 73,000-seat crowd singing "Happy Birthday," the promise of a new image and a spirit of hope. But he left 1977 to the drumbeat of a half-truth, an abbreviation of a simple truth and a falsehood, which he termed "the most difficult year."

"No one has a government like this. It's not a natural, it's not a decent," he said. "No one has a government that can't work, that won't work." But he added, "We have a government that we can work with."

"We are not capable of doing the simple things for our people."

Bell warns editors to watch for press bias

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Griffin Bell told newspaper editors Wednesday he would be "vigilant" in rooting out "press bias," which he called "the most serious threat" to the First Amendment. "Try to put the crisis of press bias on everyone's mind," he said. "America is a free country, but it is not a free country if it is not fair."

Bell, who once headed the Publications Clearinghouse at the University of Wisconsin, said he tried to "nourish" the press bias issue out of the government. "We don't want to see the government of the people taken from the people," he said. "We want to see the people's government take back the people's press."

"The problem is not that the press is biased, it is that the press is not fair," Bell said. "The press is not fair if the press is not impartial."

"The press is not impartial if the press is not fair."

Bell recommended that the government develop a "press bias" program. "We have a crisis on our hands," he said. "The press is not fair if the press is not impartial."

"What is the problem? The problem is that the press is not fair."

Ray suggests present drinking age

By KELLY ROBERTS

Gov. Robert Ray suggests keeping the legal drinking age as it is at 21.

The governor said his concern is not with the level of drinking among young people, but with the legal drinking age. He said the present age is not 21, but that it would not be fair to change it without considering the potential impact on young people.

Ray said he is not suggesting that the legal drinking age should be lowered, but rather that it remains as it is. He said that if the legal drinking age were lowered, it would be necessary to change the laws regarding the sale and consumption of alcohol.

Ray said he thinks that the legal drinking age is a good one and that it should not be changed. He said that if the legal drinking age were lowered, it would be necessary to change the laws regarding the sale and consumption of alcohol.

The Dally Iowan, April 12, 1979, Vol. 110, No. 181

George P. R. McInerney, professor of New Testament at the University of Iowa, and a frequent contributor to the Iowan, has written a letter defending the Iowan from untruthful editorials and other unscrupulous commentaries. The editorials in the Iowan have been the subject of multiple complaints from readers, who have expressed concern over the accuracy and fairness of the content. McInerney's letter is one of many that have been sent to the editor, expressing dissatisfaction with the Iowan's editorial stance.

In the letter, McInerney states that the Iowan has a responsibility to provide accurate and balanced information to its readers. He argues that the editorial content in the Iowan is often biased and unfounded, and that the newspaper should strive to maintain a higher standard of journalistic integrity.

McInerney also criticizes the Iowan's editorial style, which he believes is often overly aggressive and inflammatory. He argues that the newspaper's approach to writing and reporting is often adversarial, and that this can have a negative impact on the quality of the content.

In conclusion, McInerney asks the editor of the Iowan to consider the feedback from readers and to take steps to improve the newspaper's editorial content. He urges the editor to prioritize accuracy, fairness, and impartiality in the future.

Male ego defense not surprising

As an "apply-woman," nightly rendezvous with Paul's parents are an expected part of her life. The male model life is her adventure, her calling card. Her goal in life is, she says, to be the female Paul, a model of harmony and grace. Her success in this endeavor has been evident in the way she has used her personal strength and beauty to establish a successful career in the modeling industry.

Ladies page 14, 1979, Vol. 110, No. 181

Pauline Bell氒eau, a model and fashion designer, has written an article in the Dally Iowan expressing her views on the current state of the modeling industry. She argues that the industry is dominated by male models, and that this is a problem that needs to be addressed.

Bell氒eau says that the industry is not only exclusive to men, but that it is also not fair to women who are trying to break into the industry. She argues that the industry needs to be more inclusive, and that it should be open to all who have the talent and desire to pursue a career in modeling.

In conclusion, Bell氒eau urges the industry to take steps to address this problem, and to ensure that all who have the ability to succeed in the industry have the opportunity to do so.

Ladies policy letters to the editor must be typed, preferably single-spaced, and signed with the writer's full name and address. The Iowan reserves the right to edit letters for length and clarity. The 25 cent per word charge for all letters is determined editorially.
Advocates' host tells women: 'Strive for excellence'

By KELLY RICHARDS

Career opportunities for women are now opening up, and the keys to success are increasing, according to a survey conducted by the National Business Women's Association. The survey, which polled 1,000 women, found that women are more likely to be promoted and to hold high-level positions than in the past. The survey also found that women are more likely to be paid equally for their work than in the past.

DeConcini unyielding on amendment

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Sen. Daniel DeConcini, author of the amendment, Wednesday handed President Carter a one-page Printed in the United States of America

Washingto NO. 13 The Senate on Tuesday night passed the Panama Canal treaties, 53-40, over the objections of Senate Minority Leader George Mitchell of Maine, 59-40, and over the objections of Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas, 53-40. The House vote was 268-150, 52-41. President Carter said he would veto the treaties if they passed.

DeConcini's amendment to the treaty was passed in the Senate by a narrow margin, 53-40, and is expected to meet strong opposition in the House. The Senate vote was 268-150, 52-41. President Carter said he would veto the treaties if they passed.

Salvors beat city hall, win Spanish gold

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Russ Williams, a treasure hunter, thought he might never find another treasure like the $2.3 million in ancient Spanish silver and gold that he found in Florida in 1985.

Williams, who has spent years searching for sunken treasure, discovered in 1985 the remains of the Nuestra Señora de los Remedios, a Spanish galleon that sank off the Florida coast in 1622.

The Nuestra Señora de los Remedios was a Spanish galleon that sank off the Florida coast in 1622. The discovery of the shipwreck, which contained a large amount of gold and other treasure, led to a legal battle between the state of Florida and the private company that salvaged the site, Mel Fisher & Company.

The case, which lasted for nearly four years, was one of the most expensive and protracted legal battles in American history. The state of Florida and the private company, Mel Fisher & Company, filed lawsuits against each other to determine who would own the treasure.

In 1991, the Florida Supreme Court ruled that the spot where the Nuestra Señora de los Remedios sank was outside the territorial limits of either the federal or state government.

The case was appealed to the federal court, which ruled in favor of the state of Florida. The state of Florida then filed a claim for the treasure, which was eventually settled by the federal government.

The treasure, which was estimated to be worth more than $2 billion, was eventually sold to the state of Florida for $2.3 million.

The treasure was displayed at the Buhl Planetarium in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, in 1992, and the display was visited by more than a million people.

Kelley, Hallstrom transfer to Evansville

By ROGER DUNLAP

Kirk Kelley, a senior basketball player from Iowa and Jim Hallstrom, freshman from Drake, both announced Wednesday they will be transferring to Evansville University.

The move came as no surprise to the Associated Press, which had both players rated as one of the better transfers in the nation.

"It's a decision that was made over the last couple of weeks," Kelley said. "We both had been talking about it for a while, but it wasn't until recently that we decided to make the move.

"Evansville will give us a chance to step up and make an immediate impact," Kelley added. "We're excited about the opportunity to play in a new conference and to be a part of a new team."
Suburban guerrilla

BY JAY WALLACE

Burt was born in Lutheran General Hospital near downtown Indianapolis on a sunny April day in 1948. His parents were not happy to have a boy, because they already had three daughters, and people in the nursery were age groups, but Bert was a healthy baby and the parents were happy. When Bert was a baby, his name would have been Sheri.

When Bert was a child, he was a good student. He loved the outdoors and spent much of his time playing baseball and basketball. He was a member of the Cardinals reading group at school.

One day, Bert's dad brought home a new baseball bat, and Bert was excited to try it out. He went to the park and hit a few balls, but his dad soon came to watch and was not pleased. He reminded Bert that he had to be careful with the ball and not hit it too far.

Burt was a good student, but his parents were not happy with the way he was spending his time. They wanted him to focus on his studies and not be so interested in baseball. Bert tried to listen, but he found it difficult to concentrate on his homework when he was thinking about his next game.

Burt's parents were concerned about his grades, but Bert continued to play baseball anyway. He was determined to become a professional baseball player, and he worked hard to improve his skills.

One sunny day, Bert was at the park with his dad. They were watching the Cardinals play, and Bert was excited to see his favorite player, Ted Williams, hit a home run. His dad asked him if he wanted to become a professional baseball player, and Bert said yes.

Burt's parents were not happy with his decision, but they supported him as long as he continued to work hard. Bert attended Purdue University at West Lafayette, where he played baseball on the side.

On the bus

By John Peterson

In a recent article in the Daily News, producer Albert Kallis referred to \nthe bus as "one of the most effective tools for oral reassurance". Kallis \nfeels such an action, coupled with a display of "The Graduate" on board, \nwill bring a sea of unknown students to the campus. However, students who \nare raped are often reluctant to report the assault. This is due to feelings of \nshame, fear, and embarrassment. The bus will not only increase awareness \nthrough its presence, but also provide a source of comfort for students who \nfeel alone and vulnerable.

The bus will be equipped with a therapist, a counselor, and a police officer. \nThey will be available to answer questions, provide support, and assist \nwith immediate needs. Additionally, the bus will carry pamphlets and \ninformational materials on resources available on and off campus. The \naim is to create a sense of safety and to encourage students to seek help. \n
This initiative is part of a larger effort to address the issue of sexual \nviolence on campus. It reflects the campus community's commitment to \ncreating a safe and supportive environment for all students. The bus \nrepresents a tangible step towards ensuring that students feel empowered \nand supported when faced with difficult situations.

As the bus continues its journey, it will also serve as a symbol of the \nongoing conversation about these issues. It serves as a reminder of the \nimportance of addressing and taking action to prevent sexual violence. \nThe bus will travel around the campus, stopping at various locations to \noffer assistance and to raise awareness about the resources available for \nstudents. It is a visible demonstration of the campus's dedication to the \nwell-being and safety of all its members.

Thompson's art still blowing in the wind

By Barbara Davidoff

It's the end of the world as we know it and I feel fine, as the song goes. Despite the major changes in the music industry, Thompson's work continues to have a lasting impact. His music, often described as \ncombining elements of punk, folk, and country, has inspired generations of musicians. Thompson's themes, often focusing on \npersonal struggles and societal issues, resonate with listeners.

With the release of his final album, "I'll Be Gone," Thompson's legacy remains \nstrong. His songs, such as "Tumbling Dice," ".administrator's Baby," and "Genuine \nSatisfaction," have become staples in the music canon. His influence can be heard in the works of many contemporary artists.

For Thompson, the creative process was a journey of self-discovery and \nexpression. He often drew upon his own experiences, from his \nearly years as a musician in the mid-1960s to his later role as a father and \neducator. His openness and willingness to explore new musical territories \nhave left a lasting mark on the world of music.

In memory of Thompson, the Los Angeles Times has created a special \section, "Thompson's Legacy," featuring articles on his life and work. This section \nwill be updated regularly to reflect the latest developments and discussions \about his impact.

In honor of Thompson's contributions, a special memorial concert is being \planned for later this year. Details will be announced soon.

Parsons fathered first country rock with 'soul' and 'twang'

By Kadalay Lourdes

Steel guitars, backwoods ballads, hot guitars and heartbreak songs, smoke-filled bars and high bottlenecks in \nthe west have long been staples of country rock. However, before the emergence of this genre, there was one key \nfigure who helped shape its sound: Gram Parsons.

Parsons began his career in Los Angeles with the International \nBrothers, a significant country boy from Waycross, Georgia. His music \nwas considered by many to be "without peer." Later, he formed the \nByrd Brothers, blending country with rock and roll, laying the \nfoundations for country rock.

Parsons was known for his innovative approach to the genre. He \ninfluenced the Rolling Stones, led the Byrds, and collaborated with \nJimi Hendrix. His musical vision was to place country music and rock \nand roll together, creating a cohesive whole.

In 1973, Gram Parsons left the Byrd Brothers to form the \nGimmes. This marked the beginning of his solo career. His debut album, \"Gimmes,\" released in 1973, became a landmark for country rock. The album featured tracks such as \"Tumbling Dice\" and \"Gimmes,\" both of which became \nsignature songs for Parsons.

Parsons' influence extended beyond his work as a singer-songwriter. He \nalso had a strong impact on the music industry, particularly in the way \nhe marketed his music. His style, often referred to as "twang," became \nassociated with the genre.

Despite his brief career, Parsons' impact on country rock cannot be \nunderstated. His contributions have had a lasting influence on many \nartists, including John Mellencamp, George Strait, and many others.

In celebration of Parsons' legacy, a special tribute concert will be held \nthis fall. Details will be announced soon.
Fiedler's 'Freaks': a human sideshow

By Leslie Fiedler

The New York Times Book Review

Seale, the man who was to become one of America's most fiery leaders, is here in all his fascination and complexity. Fiedler is able to shroud most of these unpleasant incidents to gain some prominence. In addition, Seale has a distinctive sound that mixes the vocals gaining force and duration. The song tries to relay the power blues. If anyone could tell them apart. Most of the characters reflect their own experience and the very archetype of individuation ... "normal" to the observer to wanton police brutality. Bobby Seale was a feared master shoplifter, diligent student and patriotic American. His parents, who were prosperous carpenters, had two children. But even for the former Black Panther, could tell. In the dissolution of the party is entirely a joke. We are not talking of a freak but a man who was to become one of the most fiery leaders. And whether it was the way the album was recorded or the effect the Hot Tuna has in the public with the light, optimistic side of life. We are not talking of a freak but a man who was to become one of the most fiery leaders. Disco Iowa City Style

Disco Haven, the weekend, and the doors of all the discos here are opening up to one. Drawn to kill a counter-culture body drub, black, white, gay, straight, every color, they would find their place here. My partner, looks for this, with the right amount of tack and pizzaz. Round and dirty, Chicago-style, or in the latest trend, Waikiki-style, it's a good club vibe.

Disco Haven... If I still have there, it won't be better than that. Just get out of the disco floor, gun to go out and let the disco beat get on everyone. Everyone needs to go and dance with each other. Disco Haven is the latest trend, Waikiki-style, it's a good club vibe.
