

Cuban troops' entry into Angola blamed on CIA's 'stupidity'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The CIA's "blundering stupidity" in conducting a secret war in Angola led directly to the entry of thousands of Cuban troops on the side of the pro-Soviet faction, a disaffected former spy said Sunday.

John Stockwell, chief of the CIA's Angola task force, has secretly written "In Search of Enemies," a book about the Angola operation that was published without official permission. He discussed the conclusions of his book on CBS' "60 Minutes" program.

"We were running a secret war," Stockwell said, with the CIA helping UNITA and FNLA, the two Angolan factions defeated by the pro-Soviet MPLA in a three-way civil war in 1975 and 1976. The MPLA was aided by up to 20,000 Cuban troops.

"Had the CIA not existed, had the CIA option — the violent option — not existed in Angola, we wouldn't have had the escalation of war and we wouldn't have had Cuban soldiers entrenched in the country with great credibility, looked upon as heroes of the people of Africa," Stockwell said.

"And this is because of the blundering stupidity, if you will, of the CIA's paramilitary operation."

Intervention by the CIA and the South Africans provoked the Soviets and the Cubans to enter Angola in full force, Stockwell said. While the Cubans could boast of their massive aid, the CIA had to wage war on a tight budget.

"It was (Secretary of State Henry) Kissinger's desire to bluff the Soviets," said Stockwell, "when he couldn't follow through and they knew it."

Stockwell said he was assigned to head the Angola task force in July 1975 and stayed there 17 months until he resigned, fed up and bitter.

He learned, he said, that the CIA

"was incompetent. That we were not very good at running a covert war. That such covert wars don't work. That we were dishonest. That we were willing to lie about it to keep it going, to con the American public, to manipulate the Congress in order to keep playing our games."

Stockwell said the 40 Committee — the subcommittee of the National Security Council that oversees intelligence operations — banned the CIA from having its personnel in actual combat operations.

"There certainly were trainers and advisers inside Angola up very close to the front lines helping to plan battles," said Stockwell, adding that CIA agents shipped arms to the two factions, hired mercenaries and established supply routes.

William Colby, who was CIA director at the time, says: "We did our training, we did our advising from neighboring countries, not from Angola."

Asked specifically whether there were CIA agents on the ground training and advising in the country, Colby said: "There were some people that went in to see what was happening for intelligence collection, to see what was actually happening. But they just went in and came out. They weren't on the ground, they didn't stay there."

Told of Colby's denial, Stockwell replied: "All I can say is that our cable traffic and our memoranda have abundant references to CIA officers training and advising in Angola."

Stockwell said the CIA got out of Angola after it gave Mobutu Sese Seko, president of Zaire, $1.4 million to transfer to the two factions allied with it. And Mobutu, Stockwell charged, "pocketed this money."

OPEC announces '78 crude oil price freeze

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will freeze crude oil prices for the rest of 1978, OPEC Secretary General Ali Jaidat said Sunday.

Jaidat told reporters "an increase was not even discussed" at an informal two-day meeting of OPEC oil ministers that ended late Sunday.

After the meeting, Jaidat said there would be "no price increase for the rest of the year."

He also said there would be no move away from the dollar as the world's sole oil-pricing unit, though an Iranian delegate said the conference had looked over a proposal to price crude through a basket of international currencies.

Saudi Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani denied a foreign press report that he had told the conference that market forces would dictate a freeze in oil prices for the next three or four years.

"There might have been some misunderstanding of what I meant by an oil surplus," Yamani told a news conference. He did not elaborate.

The press report had said Yamani told the oil ministers an expected crude surplus made a price increase inconceivable.

The remarks by Oil Minister Sheikh Abdul-Aziz bin Khalifa al Thani came during a break in the informal policy conference.

Asked whether OPEC would find a pricing substitute for the dollar, Sheikh Abdul-Zazit replied, "No, the dollar is now stronger than before."

Approximately 25 persons calling themselves "pro-life individuals" picketed the Emma Goldman Clinic, 715 N. Dodge, on Saturday. The picketers, who asserted that they were not affiliated with any organization, said one of the purposes of the demonstration was to counsel women not to have abortions.

Anti-abortion protesters picket clinic

Terming legalized abortions "The American Holocaust," 25 people marched and picketed outside the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women at 715 N. Dodge St., Saturday to protest the clinic's policy of performing abortions.

The group's members, calling themselves "pro-life individuals" who were not representing any organization, charged the clinic does not provide women who are considering abortion with adequate information on the psychologically harmful effects of an abortion and on the possible complications that might occur after an abortion is performed.

Art Gilloon and Jan Smith, speaking for the group, said, "We are also marching in support of the right to life of the unborn and for a human life amendment to the Constitution, to reverse the Supreme Court decision which started this whole mess of abortion on demand."

Gilloon, a UI law student, said the group's purpose in demonstrating at Emma Goldman was to counsel women who were coming to the clinic for an abortion not to go in.

"We feel if we can keep one woman from having an abortion, our protest has been worthwhile," Gilloon said.

Gilloon said they attempted to talk to three women who entered the clinic but the women did not respond. "They ignored us and walked briskly by," he said.

Smith, an instructor from Cornell College in Mount Vernon, said she recently spoke with a woman who had an abortion performed at the Emma Goldman Clinic four months ago. "She had the abortion but she regrets it now. She wishes she had heard the pro-life side before the abortion proceedings," Smith said.

Smith said the woman told her that the clinic "treated the abortion as routine and provided her with no information on fetal development or the potential dangers and long-term effects after having an abortion."

Gayle Sand, associate director of the Emma Goldman Clinic, denied the protesters' charges that the clinic's informed consent procedures are inadequate.

"We explain the potential complications and counsel women about the possible psychological effects like any other minor surgical operation," she said.

"We make sure each woman is fully informed prior to an abortion proceeding. It is an important part of our counseling program," Sand said.

She said the clinic had six abortions scheduled for Saturday, and three medical doctors perform approximately 25 abortions per week.

"The women who seek abortions here come from all over Iowa, from rural and urban backgrounds, and range from young to middle-aged," Sand said.

"We informed them (the protesters) of our property lines and (told them) not to come on our property or they would be charged with criminal trespassing and we told them not to harass women who were coming for abortion proceedings," Sand said.

She said any woman who comes to the clinic for abortion information or counseling will not be harassed.

"I think it's unfortunate they chose to do it on a day we are having abortion proceedings. Obviously, they are anti-choice people. They feel they have the right to press their morality on the rest of us," she said.

"We've been doing abortions for five years and we plan to continue for the next five years. We are pro-choice, not pro-life."

OPEC sources said hardline members of the 13-state cartel pressed for either a compensatory price hike or a switch in the pricing mechanism to compensate for the recent decline in the dollar.

The sources said Saudi Arabia and other moderate OPEC members had headed off such moves.

Jaidat declined to go into details of the discussions and said no decision from the weekend conference would be announced.

"Certainly you don't expect resolutions from an informal gathering," he told reporters.

He did say a six-state committee grouping Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Iran, Iraq, Algeria and Venezuela had been set up to look into "long-term issues."

Earlier, Qatar's oil minister ruled out replacement of the dollar as the world's oil-pricing currency and said the cartel had agreed on overall strategy for the next five years.

Fun and art were the words of the day Saturday in City Park during the Potlatch arts festival. The day-long affair included poetry readings, rock music, a stage show and "new games."

In the News

Briefly

Jets
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church, a top member of the Foreign Relations Committee, publicly appealed to President Carter Sunday to avoid a "bruising" showdown with Congress by modifying his $4.8 billion warplanes sale to Israel, Saudi Arabia and Egypt.

Hours before Church appeared on CBS' "Face the Nation," knowledgeable sources indicated to UPI that such a modification was already in the works and may be presented Monday to the committee when it meets in closed session.

Vital assurances are needed, Church said, before the committee can go along with the sale that would send 60 F15s to Saudi Arabia, 50 F5E s to Egypt plus 75

F16s and 15 F 15s to Israel.

Right now, he said, a "clear majority" on the panel opposes the sale. The fate before the full Senate is less clear, he conceded.

Meanwhile, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin reiterated Sunday his view that any sale of warplanes to Saudi Arabia and Egypt would be "very dangerous to Israel."

Rhodesia
SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — A key black-nationalist organization Sunday threatened to pull out of Rhodesia's shaky transition government unless a black minister fired for demanding affirmative action is "immediately reinstated."

Bishop Abel Muzorewa's United African National Council put off a final decision for a week to give the bi-racial leadership time to reconsider its dismissal of co-Minister of Justice and Law and Order Byron Hove.

But UANC second Vice President

Ernest Bulle warned that unless Hove is given his post back, "I think it is quite clear that they (the UANC) will not stay in the government."

A UANC statement also warned the other members of the Executive Council that is trying to guide Rhodesia to full majority rule by Dec. 31 to stop ganging up on the highly popular Muzorewa.

Muzorewa says he was not party to the decision to fire Hove — although the other two blacks on the council dispute this — and a special committee was formed to investigate the dispute.

Iran
TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Student demonstrations against the government broke out in at least four cities in Iran over the weekend and police arrested three people in Tehran for distributing illegal pamphlets and an underground newsletter published by dissidents.

About 200 student demonstrators took to the streets in Shiraz and battled with police who tried to break up the group.

One policeman was wounded and a movie theater and a bank damaged in the rock-throwing melee.

Authorities closed the university in Isfahan when demonstrators demands that students expelled earlier be allowed to return to classes.

In Kerman, where classes were suspended a week ago, police broke up a demonstration attempt by students who have collected outside schools without entering the buildings.

A report from Babol, in northeastern Iran, said 22 students arrested earlier for illegal demonstrations were charged in a criminal court Sunday.

Draft
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Armed Services Committee, concerned by the all-volunteer army's failure to attract enough recruits, has told the Pentagon to begin studying other ways to do the job, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said Sunday.

Attrition rates have risen sharply, the committee report said, and reserve-force levels are dangerously below emergency requirements. Even an immediate resumption of the mothballed draft system would take precious months to build up troop strength, it said.

Nunn, chairman of the manpower and personnel committee, said 40 per cent of the enlisted personnel — 240,000 in fiscal 1977 — were unable to complete their first term of military service.

Kennedy
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is a clear first choice for president among Democrats in the latest Gallup Poll published Sunday, but the Massachusetts lawmaker insists he is not going to be a candidate.

Fifty-three per cent of the Democrats polled by the Gallup organization preferred Kennedy to just 40 per cent for President Carter, the candidate whom Kennedy has pledged to support in 1980.

Seven per cent of those questioned in the Kennedy versus Carter scenario were undecided about their choice two years from now. The poll was taken between March 31 and April 3.

"I'm heartened by the response," Kennedy told the New York Times, "but I'm not going to be a candidate."

"Polls go up and go down, and do so quickly," he added.

The Gallup Poll noted that only once before in the 43-year history of the survey has an incumbent president eligible for election run second in a showdown test of strength.

Weather
Another gloomy, cold day is in store to begin this week of weeks. The weather has been so charming recently that one local observer has suggested changing the nickname of our sometimes fair city to the London of the Prairies. Today should live up to that moniker: highs in the 50s, rain and drizzle, and winds out of the northwest. Cheerio, no?

Has Begin hurt Mideast efforts?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin has stirred American sympathies for Israel with his speeches recalling the Holocaust, the battle for independence and the lesson that only "a fighting Jew" will win respect and peace.

But his U.S. tour, just concluding, also has raised a troubling question: Has it help or hurt the effort to revive Middle East peace negotiations?

Begin has a biblical, almost mystical view of what Israel should and will become, provided it gets the right support from the United States.

He insists the occupied West Bank territories — which he always calls by their biblical names, Judea and Samaria — belong to Israel by historic right.

The Arabs disagree. So do the United States and the U.N. Security Council.

That disagreement led to the breakdown of the talks begun so promisingly by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's visit to Jerusalem last fall.

It, along with other policy disagreements also brought U.S.-Israeli relations so low that, in late March, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance felt compelled to state publicly that the United States was not trying to overthrow Begin.

Analysis

In the wake of his ceremonial visit, however, the atmosphere of U.S.-Israeli relations seems to have improved remarkably even though neither side has budged in its policy views.

The ice seemed to break when President Carter hosted Begin at the White House last Monday in honor of Israel's 30th independence day anniversary, and, in an emotional speech, pledged unwavering U.S.

support for Israel, "not for 30 years, but forever."

It contrasted sharply with the cold exchanges they had in March, when their Washington summit dissolved in disagreements, and it seemed to transport Begin into a state of euphoria.

Leaving Washington, he chided an Israeli journalist aboard his plane, Yoel Marcus of Haaretz newspaper, who had written that he should be wary of visiting the United States at this time.

"There may be a breakthrough," he told Marcus in Hebrew, within earshot of four other Israeli reporters. "I am very optimistic."

The next day, Marcus talked to him alone and asked the basis for his optimism. He said Begin looked puzzled and replied: "Breakthrough? Did I say that? Optimistic? I don't think I used that word."

Later, the prime minister apologized to the entire traveling press contingent for having used the word "breakthrough." He said it was misleading.

Apparently, he had recovered from the emotional mood generated by the reconciliation with Carter.

Begin, a mesmerizing speaker himself, constantly promoted his government's policies at emotional events commemorating Israel's founding and the Nazi massacre of 6 million Jews. The question is, how much of the emotion reflected support for him and his policies, and how much was for the idea of a strong Jewish homeland and the prevention of another Holocaust?

Says Begin: "I came as the representative of Israel. The warm feelings were for Israel, that's natural. I expounded my policies, and I found a positive echo."

Perhaps he is right about the "echo."

But no one can really say whether the applause he drew was for Begin the leader of Israel or Begin the Holocaust survivor.

One possible danger in all this is that he might interpret America's welcome to mean the U.S. public solidly supports his tough negotiating line.

If that should happen, his 30th anniversary tour will further complicate the U.S.-Israeli stalemate.

Begin hosts birthday parade

NEW YORK (UPI) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin concluded his eight-day visit to the United States Sunday by joining hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers at a parade held in honor of his nation's 30th anniversary.

Begin sat with New York Gov. Hugh L. Carey, Mayor Edward Koch and Sens. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., and Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., at a heavily guarded reviewing stand.

Except for a band playing across the street and reporters and photographers, the public was barred from coming closer than a block from the dignitaries.

"Israel will never give up," Begin told thousands attending a Salute to Israel festival in Central Park after the parade.

He said the Jewish state is willing to negotiate — not just dictate — a peace agreement with its Arab neighbors to end three decades of conflict in the Middle East.

"Let us sit down and negotiate peace," Begin said. "Terms of peace cannot be dictated to Israel, terms of peace will be negotiated with Israel."

Hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers lined Fifth Avenue for almost 30 blocks to view the parade that featured marching bands and colorful floats built by various Jewish organizations and school children.

One float, fashioned to look like a giant white cake with pink and blue trim, said "Israel, the land of milk and honey."

Meanwhile, several pro-Palestinian groups planned counterdemonstrations to coincide with the Israeli salute.

A group, calling itself the Palestine Action Coalition gathered seven blocks south of the parade to march to the offices of the World Zionist Organization. Their demonstration started peacefully and the route of their march route did not interfere with the parade.

In addition, a group called the Coalition of Concerned Progressive Jews planned to hold a protest along the Fifth Avenue parade route to oppose Israel's hard-line negotiating stance.

Earlier in the day, in an interview on NBC-TV's "Meet The Press," Begin reiterated his objections to President Carter's proposed $4.8 billion package sale of jets to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

He said the planes should be sold "only to Israel."

"In September 1975, we got a clear commitment from the U.S. to Israel, for F 15s. That commitment should be carried out. We object to it being tied to a package," Begin said.

The prime minister said his nation was opposed to any sale of jets to Saudi Arabia, which is to receive 60 of the fighters, because "they can reach Tel Aviv in 27 minutes. We object because of the great danger to our national defense."

Following the parade, Begin was scheduled to speak at a Salute to Israel festival in Central Park.

The prime minister planned to leave New York for Israel Sunday night.

Helmeted ultra-leftist radicals clashed with shield-carrying riot police Sunday during a march through downtown Tokyo calling for actions to block the rescheduled opening of the new Tokyo International Airport in Narita.

Narita airport faces 'war'

TOKYO (UPI) — Leaders of ultra-leftist groups vowed Sunday to block with "unlimited guerrilla warfare" the rescheduled opening of Tokyo's new $2.6 billion airport at Narita. Six persons were injured by rocks thrown by radicals at a protest demonstration and rally in Tokyo.

Leaders of ultra-leftist groups, including one responsible for the destruction of the airport's control tower March 26, pledged to "blast the inauguration with unlimited guerrilla warfare" and "take all means to occupy the airport and block its opening" on May 20.

Police said an estimated 7,000 protesters gathered from across the nation and demonstrated through Tokyo streets despite a drizzle and cold temperatures. About 3,000 riot police were deployed as a precaution against violence but police said helmeted radicals hurled stones at the security forces near the end of the march, injuring five policemen and a reporter.

Violence has long prevented the opening of the new international airport, about 40 miles east of Tokyo, which was completed six years ago. Authorities finally set April 1 for the opening but were forced to cancel the inauguration of services after firebomb-throwing radicals broke into the control tower and destroyed millions of dollars worth of sensitive instruments during clashes with riot police March 26.

At Narita, an alliance of radical groups led by former farmer Issaku Tomura said it will stage anti-airport operations beginning May 18 to prevent the airport from opening.

The airport, built by the Japanese government to help ease congestion at the present international airport in downtown Tokyo, has been the target of persistent attacks by opponents since its construction began 12 years ago.

Police said about 13,000 riot police have been placed on round-the-clock guard at the airport since the March 26 attack. They said security will be bolstered before the May 20 inauguration with the deployment of more riot police supported by armored vehicles and police dogs.

An Iowa City man was killed Saturday morning in a one-car accident after he lost control of his vehicle and struck an embankment.

Randall Lewis, 31, of 1003 Lakeside Manor was traveling westbound on Highway 6 at approximately 12:10 a.m. when he lost control of his vehicle on a curve, striking an embankment. According to the Highway Patrol, Lewis was thrown from the vehicle and pinned underneath it when it flipped over. He was pronounced dead at the scene of the accident.

A 23-year-old man on work-study release from Riverview Release Center was arrested early Sunday morning by Iowa City police and charged with sexual abuse in the third degree.

Michael Phillip Howard was arrested by police at 6:45 a.m., in connection with an assault that occurred three hours earlier at the Project Hope Halfway House, 1005 Muscatine Ave.

Howard is accused of allegedly tying up an Iowa City woman who was at the halfway center and raping her. The woman escaped and ran to a nearby apartment building, where she obtained help, police said. Howard is being held in the Johnson County jail on $25,000 bond following an appearance before the Johnson County Magistrate Sunday.

A call for assistance from the manager of the Moody Blue, 1200 S. Gilbert Court led police to make two arrests there late Friday night. Dean Lumpa, 19, of West Branch and Dean Gates, 19, of West Liberty were arrested at 10:15 p.m. Lumpa was charged with disorderly conduct and Gates was charged with interfering with official acts. Both were released on their own recognizance after appearing before the Johnson County Magistrate Saturday.

A car-motorcycle accident Thursday afternoon resulted in injuries to an Iowa City man.

According to police, vehicles driven by Agnes C. Kurz, 309 Church, and Barry Hutchings, 716 N. Dubuque, collided at the intersection of Church and Dubuque streets at 4:15 p.m. Hutchings was treated at UI Hospitals and released. He was charged with not having a motorcycle license. Kurz was charged with failure to yield.

Blackout

More than 20 buildings on the west side of campus were without electricity Sunday afternoon when problems in an electrical line at the UI Basic Sciences Buildings caused a power outage.

An official at the UI Power Plant said the electricity went out at 10:12 a.m. The location of the problem was not discovered until 5:00 p.m. and power was restored to all buildings except the Basic Sciences Building at 5:55 p.m. The official said the UI Hospitals were not affected by the power black-out, but peripheral buildings including the Hospital Schools and the out-patient buildings were without power. He said power-plant workers worked through the night to correct the problem and the power was expected to be restored to the Basic Sciences Building by noon today.

The official said he did not know what caused the problem in the electric line. The afternoon meal at the westside residence halls was served by candlelight.

Campus Security reported that there were no injuries of any kind as a result of the blackout. The power-plant official said, "We just had a lot of complaints."

Courts

A $1 million lawsuit filed against the State of Iowa by an Iowa City man was dismissed Friday in Johnson County District Court. The dismissal resulted from a settlement in March.

Ernest Triplett, who pleaded guilty to murdering an 8-year-old Sioux City boy in 1964 filed suit against the state on July 26, 1976, asserting he was given large dosages of powerful mind-altering drugs at the Cherokee State Mental Hospital that affected his decision to plead guilty to the murder.

A compromise and settlement was reached between the state and Triplett for $50,000 on March 20, with an agreement that the $1 million lawsuit be dropped.

Berkowitz expected to plead guilty to six charges of murder

NEW YORK (UPI) — David Berkowitz, a moon-faced young man who claimed he was a slave to demons speaking through a neighbor's dog, is expected to plead guilty today to the six Son of Sam slayings.

The defendant, arrested outside his Yonkers, N.Y., apartment last August after police traced him through a parking ticket, goes on trial in Brooklyn state Supreme Court for the murder of the last victim, Stacy Moskowitz.

Sources close to the case reported an unprecedented plan to let judges from the boroughs of the Bronx and Queens sit in the Brooklyn courtroom and accept pleas to the other five murders.

The sources said the plan — a first in New York criminal trial history — has the approval of Justice David Ross, administrative judge for the city's state courts.

Berkowitz, a 24-year-old Army veteran with a vacant smile, has said he committed all the murders during the Son of Sam's year-long reign of terror and wants to change his current plea of "not guilty" to guilty.

Under the plan, Berkowitz would first enter a plea before Brooklyn Justice

Joseph R. Corso. He would then enter pleas before the other judges to the three murders in the Bronx and two in Queens.

People admitted to the 260-seat courtroom for the trial — including 150 members of the news media — will have to pass through metal detectors at entrances to the courthouse, the trial floor and the courtroom itself.

Berkowitz, who was earning $256 a week sorting mail at a Bronx post office at the time of his arrest for the 44-caliber killings, was found competent to stand trial on April 24 by Corso.

The judge set today for the start of the trial for the murder of Moskowitz, 20, who was gunned down as she sat with Robert Violante, 20, in a car parked along a quiet Brooklyn Street.

Violante was wounded in the attack and lost an eye.

Moskowitz was shot on July 31, 1977, two days after the anniversary of the death of the first Son of Sam victim, Donna Laurie, 18, who was gunned down as she sat with a girlfriend in a car in front of her Bronx apartment.

In tape-recorded conversations with court-appointed psychiatrists made after his arrest, Berkowitz spoke of demons who ordered him to kill through a neighbor's dog.

Transcripts of the tapes were released by state Supreme Court Justice John Starkey, who conducted hearings last fall to determine whether Berkowitz was competent to stand trial.

Berkowitz told the psychiatrists, "It becomes a matter of routine, go out, you know, clean the 44 I had, go out hunting, the spirits are walking...and when they say, 'Hey, here we want them,' just a matter of shooting them and blowing up their bodies, you know, blowing a hole in people."

Starkey found Berkowitz competent to stand trial, but then removed himself from the case when he was criticized for openly discussing issues on which he might later have been called upon to make a ruling.

Corso took over the case and initially found Berkowitz incompetent. The suspect has been held in a cell at Kings County Hospital since then.

Closing drive pushes Iowa Legislature to elusive end

DES MOINES (UPI) — Will this be the week?

In the minds of any members of the Iowa Legislature, there isn't any question that the next few days had better be it for the 1978 legislative session.

The highly touted rush toward adjournment slowed to a crawl amid a backlog of still uncompleted priority legislation. But overall, the closing weeks of 1978 have differed little from similar efforts in previous years.

The key, legislative leaders know only too well, lies in creating a psychological drive to end the session, even though the chances of actually making

Wichita to vote on gay rights repeal effort

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — Bombarded by television propaganda, door-to-door canvassing and newspaper letters, the voters of Wichita will finally have their say Tuesday on whether to repeal the city's homosexual rights ordinance.

The eight-month-old ordinance, an amendment to the city's civil rights code, prohibits discrimination in housing, public accommodations and employment because of sexual preference.

Both the pro-homosexual Sedgewick County Homophile Alliance and the anti-homosexual Concerned Citizens for Community Standards expressed confidence in the outcome after last-minute campaigning.

"We've got support from all kinds of people in this community," Robert Lewis, co-director of the Homophile Alliance, said in an interview. "It's enough support to guarantee us a place in the community even after the election."

But the Rev. Mike Schepis, chairman of Concerned Citizens, said Friday the homosexual cause "has been set back" by the huge amounts of publicity.

"I just can't see the Wichita community being willing to accept this as a legitimate alternate lifestyle," he said.

initial target adjournment dates are slim at best.

The seeds of that psychological campaign were planted last week, as a major House-Senate deadlock was broken, but despite the public pronouncements of a possible weekend adjournment, veterans knew the actual end of the session would not come until this week at the earliest.

Why does adjournment continue to elude the grasp of the legislature?

Because in spite of their leadership's arduous efforts, legislators are unable to mount the drive needed to adjourn in a single week. In the past, the only successful way to build that crucial momentum has been to drive the legislature to the brink one week, adjourn for the weekend, then return on Monday — fully expecting to be there until week's end.

Assistant House Majority Leader Donald Avenson, D-

Oelwein, calls it the "fatigue factor," in other words, adjournment isn't possible until members have become so tired, that they pass bills from chamber to chamber and to the governor with little debate.

House Majority Leader Jerome Fitzgerald, D-Fort Dodge, says he has set Wednesday at 3 p.m. as the lower chamber's new target adjournment time. In the Senate, a more pessimistic Majority Leader George Kinley, D-Des Moines, offers a prediction of mid-to-late in the week.

Access road

Just north of Burlington Street, separating the UI Library and the Physical Plant, a ravaged access road leads toward the EPB parking lot. Hundreds of cars negotiate this gravel road daily, making it one of the most-traveled of campus byways even though scarcely wide enough for two cars. The road is a convenient and necessary shortcut, reducing the noon and rush hour congestion that clogs traffic leaving EPB and the library.

Perhaps because of its heavy use, the road remains in perpetual disrepair. Only cars equipped with the suspension of an armored personnel carrier traverse the road comfortably. Some of the larger bumps provide a better view of Iowa City than the pressbox at Kinnick Stadium, and small colonies of homeless students, displaced by urban renewal, have moved into several of the larger chuckholes, living in abandoned autos that owners have been unable to retrieve.

It's not that the road is thoroughly neglected. On the contrary. Several times a year UI maintenance crews — or some other well-intentioned agency — attack it with roadgraders, bulldozers and dumptrucks with tons of gravel to smooth over the bumps and fill in the holes. These efforts are ineffectual; each rain carries away the gravel, or it simply sinks back into the earth, leaving behind deeper holes and reinforced bumps.

The condition of the access road is certainly not the UI's most pressing problem, but the road is a useful and efficient means of reducing traffic on Madison and Washington streets, and it needs a permanent surface to ensure continued usefulness. The UI spent $70,000 for pedestrian signs, many of them misspelled, to guide visitors around campus. Paving or blacktopping the EPB access road would be a much more reasonable expenditure.

Chutzpah

You have to give the new head of the FBI, William Webster, credit for audacity and flair; for sheer chutzpah he has surpassed Daniel's one-upmanship with respect to the lions.

Speaking to the American Newspaper Publisher's Association, Webster criticized the Freedom of Information Act because it endangers police confidential sources. The man must have realized he was in the lions' den, for journalists have been raising the same hue and cry for years, only they have been annoyed by repressive measures sought by people such as Webster and the law enforcement crowd in an attempt to destroy the confidentiality of journalists' sources.

Skirting, for the moment, the issue of whether journalists or police officials have the right to maintain and protect nebulous "sources," let us look at what the head honcho of the forces of law and order is doing. He is asking the publishers to believe that what is right for his subordinates is wrong for members of the public. He suggests that what is a valid tool for one job, cannot be applied to another, although it is a tool that has shown results.

The implication is that journalists cannot be trusted, on the one hand, in citing unnamed sources; law enforcement officials, on the other hand, can be. That is absurd, they come from the same mold. Each individual is as trustworthy as he is, no class is trustworthy as a class.

The Freedom of Information Act was passed because the people and their representatives did not have enough confidence in the law-enforcement and bureaucratic sectors of the nation. The only people who have challenged the validity of the sources of journalists are those who found an incidence of a source-based story that was threatening or potentially damaging to themselves. Yet journalists have been thrown into jail for having such sources and refusing to name them.

The police want to have their cake and eat it too. Ask Webster if he feels a police agent should be thrown into jail for not revealing his/her sources. And the police are even proud of their sources being known criminals, the same offense they seek to use as a justification for jailing a reporter.

Webster does have somewhat of a point in arguing that the Freedom of Information Act might dry up some sources; that is probably true. Losing these sources might force the minions of the law to work a little harder to nab that crook. It might also cut down on malicious tips leading to the harassment of citizens, a practice altogether too common in the keeping of the peace, as it is euphemistically referred to. It might even help prevent the police from feeling that they are any better or deserve more power than the public they serve.

Sources are part of the game, both for the law-enforcement crew and for journalists. There is an inherent danger in members of either group placing too much importance on information from sources, or too much credibility in one who refuses to show his/her face or be publicly named. Source journalism has led to the occasional journalistic coup, as many arrests and the occasional conviction have arisen from tips by unnamed underworld sources. However, many a fiasco has resulted as well, in both fields. One should take a source-based story with a grain of salt or three; and no warrants should ever be issued on the basis of an anonymous tip.

But to separate the two and claim that one group has the right while the other does not is ludicrous. Webster wants his people to be privileged. He forgets who the law officials serve — the people. There is no excuse for a law enforcement official to seek to withhold any information from the public, that is simply insubordination on the part of our own employees.

What's sauce for the goose, Mr. Webster, is sauce for the gander.

Parimutuel horseracing encourages animal abuse

To the Editor:
Animal abuse is an inherent part of parimutuel betting. Horse racing is a system that channels instinct and anatomy into the pattern most likely to succeed in the money game. The animals are bred to be exploited for profit. To guarantee and accelerate that profit, cruelty becomes economic necessity.

Money is making the mare go and reigns supreme in the racing industry. With the greed and indifference of state legislatures, owners, trainers, drug sellers and profit-minded tracks, the number of races in the United States is soaring as additional states legalize be on the track. They do nothing to discourage the use of drugs that are illegal. The New Jersey Racing Committee noted that permissive use of Bute for racing "has been used to the detriment of competing horses, particularly thoroughbreds. The numerous incidents of break-downs in states where Bute is permitted is the evidence that sore and in some cases crippled animals are doctored for the purpose of racing where in many instances the horses were not fit."

Joseph Boyd Jr., member of the New York State Racing and Wagering Board, says: "The alarming increase in the number of breakdowns in states with controlled medication programs suggests abuses are occurring."

Warren Schroeder, executive director of the National Association of State Racing Commissioners, says: "Everybody knows that what a sore animal needs is rest, but that's getting to be a luxury the game can't afford."

Noted female jockey Mary Bacon put it more bluntly at the New Orleans State Fair Grounds: "They're burying our horses. You should look at the horse graveyard... I have ridden for many years, and I think one drug covers another. I know of horses that can't walk in the morning, but run in the afternoon."

Horse racing has become a shabby, corrupt sport, fraught with swindle and cruelty. It will be opposed in Iowa by citizens who are sick and tired of the use of animals as merchandise to make a buck in this manner, tax revenue or not.

parimutuel betting, new tracks are built, the number of racing dates increases and the season becomes year-round.

More legs are snapping, more knees are popping and more ankles are shattering on America's tracks than ever before. The demand for horses to fill expanding meetings, the high expense of maintaining the animals and the desire for more profit result in incredible and uncontrollable abuse. Young horses are forced during training and early racing to extreme exertion and physical stress before they are mature. Horses are hurried toward big races and kept in action after they get there. Excessive racing and fatigue result in injury and unsoundness. Unsound horses are allowed to run. Many lesser tracks could barely operate unless sore or aged horses were "medicated." Drugs are administered to crippled or sick horses that would otherwise be unable to race. Squeezing a few more bucks out of an ailing animal is the name of the game.

Medication programs do not lead to quality racing in any state. They simply encourage the racing of horses that are cheap or too unsound to

Big green turd

To the Editor:

Dear Mr. Albert:
I am writing you in response to your editorial entitled "Senate." I submit your editorial is based on many untruths. "The question at hand" is not denial of funds to the Voices of Soul. It is rather a series of questions which, when answered, will determine if the Student Senate should fund the Voices of Soul. I base my following questions on information I gathered while attending the budget hearings Thursday evening and Friday morning.

1. Why was last year's investigation into the possible misuse of funds by the Voices of Soul not completed and submitted to this year's senate, so they would be "prepared" to properly view the organization?
2. Why didn't members of the Voices of Soul fill out the forms in question as did the 51 other organizations? (Interestingly, these forms request itemizations which would answer questions asked in the investigation.)
3. If members of the Voices of Soul were unclear about how to fill out these forms, why didn't they attend the workshop set up specifically to teach people how to fill out budgets?
4. Why, when recommendations were made, didn't members of Voices of Soul approach members of the budget committee to clear up problems prior to Thursday night's meeting? (The members of WRAC spent the entire week clarifying their budget with the senate.)

Yes, Mr. Albert, it is true the purpose of any government is to serve its people. I agree that singling out one organization for vindictive and petty reasoning is wrong.

Good government is based on people who will protect the interests of everyone, people who ask the unspoken questions, which in this case 90 per cent of the student senators were too gutless to ask.

Good government is based on people who, with threats of being called tyrant, anti-American or racist, will still direct their energies toward seeking justice and truth.

Good government is based on courageous people as are exemplified by Senators Don Doumakes and John Mueller.

I submit the shameless and pathetic thinking is on your part, Mr. Albert. First of all, in your castrating attitude toward men in a situation at which you were not present. Secondly, in your acceptance of information about that situation that is nothing more than biased hearsay, not worthy of journalistic endeavors. And thirdly, in your action of using your editorial power to influence the public before talking to the other side of this controversy and thereby ascertaining your own opinion.

Yes, we could pretend there isn't a big green turd in front of us and maybe if we ignore it, it will go away. We can cover it with boxes labelled "racism", we can put up smoke screens of "tyranny" around it, we can even surround it with alternative structures of government (as you suggested); but it is still green, it is still a turd and it is still there!

Ritual noise

To the Editor:

In her Digressions of April 28 "Pseudo-conversations obstruct vital communication", Theresa Churchill condemned the use of various ritual utterances so common in everyday social intercourse: e.g., "how are you" or "how's it going?" She termed such verbal exchanges "pseudo-communication," and charged that they are an obstruction to meaningful communication.

S.I. Hayakawa addressed the use of this "presymbolic language" (his term) in his book, Language in Thought and Action. In chapter five, "The Language of Social Cohesion," he argued that these exchanges are necessary for the initiation and maintenance of communication. To the literal-minded, he advised:

"To understand the presymbolic elements that enter into our everyday language is extremely important. We cannot restrict our speech to the giving and asking of factual information; we cannot confine ourselves strictly to statements that are literally true, or we should often be unable to say even, 'Pleased to meet you' when the occasion demanded. The intellectually persnickety often tell us that we ought to 'say what we mean' and 'mean what we say' and 'talk only when we have something to talk about.' These are, of course, impossible prescriptions." Churchill and Hayakawa were in agreement that much of "pseudo-conversation" or "presymbolic language" is really noise-making; however, they differed widely in their estimations of the value of that noise. I feel comfortable with Hayakawa's justification of the ritual greetings and responses. I'll not feel guilty the next time I ask, "How's it going?"

Private utilities have no incentive for conservation

By FRANCES HOGAN

On May 3, Sun Day, one of my teachers gave a lecture on "why we need big power plants." In the discussion that followed, the teacher stated that since utilities were profit-motivated, certainly they would be able to generate the most power for the least cost. As many heads in the class, in fact, most heads in the class, nodded in agreement, I realized that maybe a lot of people don't realize how that figure on their monthly utility bill is computed.

Unfortunately, an Investor-Owned-Utility (IOU, for short), which private utility companies in the United States are, makes the most profit and the biggest dividends for its shareholders by doing just the opposite of what all those people in my class assumed. As regulated monopolies, IOU's are guaranteed a fixed rate of return (i.e., profits) over and above their capital investment and operating expenses. Because IOU's are guaranteed a profit, they have no incentive to cut costs or operate efficiently. In fact, the very opposite is true. The more money they spend, the greater their profit and the bigger the dividends to the shareholders.

Simplified somewhat, the system works like this: Suppose the state public service board guarantees a utility a 10 per cent rate of return on its capital investment. If the utility spends, say, $100 to operate a plant (this includes salaries, administrative costs, plus advertising, lobbying and public relations), and another $100 as a capital expense, its total expenditure is $200 and its rate-payers must pay large enough utility bills to cover the $200 expenditure plus 10 per cent, or $20, to be divided up among the shareholders.

Thus, it is in the best interest of the utility to spend money on capital improvement and to operate as expensively as possible. Suppose the utility decided to increase its generating capacity by building a new plant. Since the more it invests the more it can take in, the utility decides to invest in the most expensive generating plant possible, which right now is a nuclear power plant. Suppose this plant costs $500. The utility then ups its budget for lobbying and public relations because of public opposition to nuclear power. Operating expenses, which were once $200, are now more than $800. But the state utility board still guarantees the utility a 10 per cent return — so now the profit becomes 10 per cent of $800 instead of 10 per cent of $200 and there is now $80 to divvy up between the shareholders instead of $20. The utilities are guaranteed a profit no matter how wastefully they invest money, no matter how inefficiently they generate and distribute electricity.

A good example of this is the Jamesport nuclear reactor, which the Long Island Utility Co. (LILCO) was building because, LILCO said, it would be needed in the 1980s to meet LILCO's projection of electricity consumption at that time. In 1975, as part of their participation in the State of New York's hearings on the Jamesport nukes, Suffolk County contracted an engineering consulting firm, Dubin-Mindell-Bloome Assoc., to prepare its own analysis of LILCO's power needs and to prepare a proposal of how an energy conservation-solar energy program on Long Island could be carried out. The "Dubin Report" became a hot item in the hearings since Fred Dubin concluded that LILCO had grossly overestimated the amount of electricity people would be using in the 1980s. Dubin said that given current (1975) trends, the Jamesport nukes would not be needed until about 1990, and, if the conservation programs were carried out, the two nukes would not be needed ever! LILCO countered this by saying that they (LILCO) were the "experts" and that Dubin was an amateur who didn't know what he was doing.

Well, on Jan. 24, 1978, three years after Dubin's report, LILCO announced that it was suspending all construction activity on the Jamesport nukes. The reason? LILCO had "overestimated" the electricity demand. It turns out that Dubin-Mindell-Bloome Assoc., the "amateurs," were right. In fact, Dubin's predictions were even a little too high. What does this mean for LILCO's customers? Well, between 1975 and now, LILCO has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars building the Jamesport nukes. LILCO's customers must pay those costs plus the percentage of profit on those costs that LILCO is guaranteed by the New York State Public Service Commission. So LILCO shareholders make lots of money and the average citizen foots the bill for costs that should have never been spent.

Missouri voters recently decided they will not allow their utility to charge them for power plants until the power plants are operating and providing Missourians with electricity. This defeat of CWIP (Costs While In Progress) ensures that the Jamesport goof and resulting cost to rate-payers won't happen in Missouri. If LILCO had known that it couldn't make money off the Jamesport nuke unless it was really needed, its power demand estimates probably wouldn't have been so much greater than the estimates of the two private companies that were hired, at different times, to evaluate the future demands of LILCO customers. Construction on the Jamesport nukes would never have started and LILCO customers would not be paying for a plant they will, in all probability, never use.

In fact, one statistic tells something very significant about IOU's. The average rate paid by a person whose town owns its utility (public utility) is two-thirds of the average rate paid by a person whose town is serviced by an IOU. Seattle, Wash., is an example of what a public utility can do. Not too long ago, Seattle voters voted "NO" on a proposal to invest in nuclear electricity and, instead, decided to implement a program of conservation and alternative energy use. So far, the conservation program is working well and Seattle rate-payers aren't having to pay the high cost of a nuclear generating station.

Under the IOU system, there is no economic impetus for a utility customer to conserve energy. I remember during the 1973 energy crisis when then-President Nixon asked the American population to conserve energy. My father really rallied. He turned off everything in sight all winter, constantly scolding and nagging my two sisters, my mother and myself. Apparently, my dad wasn't the only one. Dallas, Texas, where we lived, cut its energy consumption by almost one-third. What did they get for that patriotic rally? Dallas Power and Light, an IOU, complained about how much its profits were cut and got a rate increase to make up the difference. So the next winter, my parent's utility bill was as high as it had been the winter before they began conserving energy, even though they were using even less energy than the winter Nixon asked them to be more frugal. Now my father says he will never try to conserve again, because what does he get out of it? Not exactly the most noble of attitudes, but who can blame him and the thousands of Americans like him who have been burned by the guaranteed profit system of IOU's?

'DOD hid nuclear-war plans'

By United Press International
Daniel Ellsberg revealed Sunday at the Rocky Flats, Colo., nuclear-weapons protest a United States general-war plan calling for the bombing of Soviet and Chinese cities, as well as military installations.

GOLDEN, Colo. (UPI) — Daniel Ellsberg, the man who released the Pentagon Papers, said Sunday that the Defense Department's top brass concealed nuclear war plans from Presidents Dwight Eisenhower and John F. Kennedy.

Ellsberg, interviewed at a demonstration against the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant, said the Strategic Integrated Operational Plan, or SIOP, called for dropping hydrogen bombs on every major city and military installation in the Soviet Union, China and other Communist nations.

Ellsberg revealed the information as part of his campaign. "I live in the reality that every president has considered using nuclear bombs," he said. "I was in a unique place with unique information, and it revealed to me that humans are not to be trusted with nuclear weapons."

The SIOP was drawn up by the Joint Chiefs of Staff in the Eisenhower administration and, in typically grisly Pentagonese, was called "wargasm."

"It set up one operation for all circumstances of war involving the Soviet Union," said Ellsberg. "If the SIOP were activated, we would have hit every city in the Soviet Union and China in addition to all the military targets."

"The nuclear bombs were already prepared and were on a 10-minute alert status."

Kennedy and Defense Secretary Robert McNamara assigned Ellsberg to study U.S. war plans. "I, having read the SIOP, spoke to Kennedy and told him and the secretary of Defense to read it. It had never been read outside the Pentagon. The very name was made to make sure people were not interested."

Ellsberg was ordered to rewrite the SIOP. "Kennedy and McNamara were horrified," he said. "The real danger of the 1961 SIOP was that the president would assume that it was just Russia we were bombing in general war. The JCS had no other plan ..."

Ellsberg said he drew up a new plan, giving the president "options" like deciding not to bomb China or Eastern European countries. His arguments were used by aides to Defense Secretary James Schlesinger in 1975 as justification for a new targeting plan called "counterforce."

The Joint Chiefs of Staff accepted Ellsberg's revisions, he said, because he had coached McNamara to ask if Eisenhower had seen the SIOP. The answer was no, he said, and rather than admit that, the brass accepted the plan.

Every president between Harry Truman and Richard Nixon considered using nuclear weapons, Ellsberg said.

He said Truman and Eisenhower both discussed use of nuclear warheads to end the Korean War. Eisenhower, Johnson and Nixon each weighed use of nuclear bombs during the Vietnam War.

He said Kennedy was opposed to the use of nuclear devices.

"The Vietnamese received direct threats from Nixon that we were ready to drop nuclear bombs on them," he said. "The (December 1972) V52 bombings were a demonstration that the election was over and Nixon was ready to carry out the threat."

Nixon has said those bombings led Hanoi to be more serious in peace talks.

Ellsberg and 27 other demonstrators were removed from the Rocky Flats tracks Friday, but planned to return Sunday. He said the activists known as the Rocky Flats Truth Force, will return regardless of arrests until May 27, the date of a nationwide demonstration before a United Nations conference on disarmament.

Soviets softening on cruise missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet Union has withdrawn some of its opposition to U.S. jumbo jets armed with cruise missiles, the Washington Post reported Sunday in a "leak" coinciding with the Pentagon's push to get $40 million for the planes.

"The Soviet Union has withdrawn its categorical objection to the United States' stuffing wide-bodied civilian transports full of cruise missiles," the Post said. It quoted "administration officials," but made no other identification.

Soviet negotiators, said the Post, wanted the planes "built from the ground up as a missile carrier rather than converting existing passenger planes." That would make them verifiable, or visible to spy-in-the-sky satellites.

That position would bolster Defense Secretary Harold Brown's case that $40 million be spent on studying the use of existing transports such as the Boeing 747 or Douglas DC10 to cruise missile carriers.

"There are a lot of guys on the Hill who aren't sure we need that much money just to study converting two planes that are already in existence," said one administration lobbyist.

The House Armed Services Committee dropped Brown's request for the study. Brown wrote Chairman John Stennis of the Senate Armed Services Committee late last week, urging him to replace the entire $40.1 million, but sources say the panel is unenthusiastic.

"The Pentagon just hasn't done the work," said one Senate source. "They haven't told us how the missiles would be carried, how the carriers would be defended from Soviet intercepter planes, whether they will have electronic gear to protect them from enemy missiles, any of that stuff."

"I don't think our committee will give them that money unless they explain it better."

Even an administration lobbyist admitted, "I think the Air Force just sent this one up without doing the homework. It wasn't a very good request."

Since President Carter decided last year that he would not build the B1 bomber and would rely instead on cruise missiles, the small group of experts have been arguing how they would be used once the Air Force's present B52 bombers get too old to carry them.

On one extreme are the enthusiastic supporters of jumbo jet carriers that, they argue, could stay safe outside the well-defended Soviet mainland and fire their light and accurate missiles to targets in Russia.

The other extreme, mostly conservative, believes Carter made a mistake in eliminating the B1 bomber and should revive the $100 million plane.

Mariley Metz, a sophomore from Hillcrest, ate 45 hard-boiled eggs in 30 minutes Sunday at the annual Hillcrest Egg Eating contest. She is shown here munching on the last and most difficult to swallow egg with just seconds remaining. Not only did Metz win over 16 other contestants, she unofficially broke the world record of 44 eggs in 30 minutes, set in 1956. Runnersup included Jim Hamann, who ate 25, and Ken Beal, who won the "Golden Barf Bucket."

Blacks' wages show increase

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Black workers in the United States, particularly black women, have made large strides in recent decades toward wage equality with whites, two researchers said in a Rand Corp. study released Sunday.

For black men the gains have been gradual but significant, while gains for black women have been "persistent and dramatic," James P. Smith and Finis R. Welch said in the study supported by a grant from the National Science Foundation.

Smith and Welch, economists at the private, nonprofit research institution, found that by 1947 black men were earning half the wages of white men. But by 1975 that ratio had reached nearly three-quarters.

At the same time, they found, black women who were earning only one-third the wages of white women in 1947 were nearly equal in earnings by 1975.

Several factors contributed to the gains. They included affirmative action programs, a general improvement in economic conditions in the South, the adoption of full-time jobs and the elimination of domestic service as the main occupation of Southern black women.

But the two researchers said that despite the improvement in black male wages it will be 30 to 40 more years before earnings of black men now entering the labor market catch up to wages of whites.

The basic reason for the narrowing of the wage differences, Smith and Welch said, is that blacks and whites are becoming more alike in the skills that produce higher wages.

They noted rising educational levels of blacks and improvements in the quality of their schooling.

Black males began a work career with 3.7 fewer years of formal schooling than white males in 1930. By 1970, however, the difference was 1.2 years.

Black women gained in this respect even more, the study said. In 1930, black women had 2.6 fewer years schooling and 0.4 fewer years in 1970.

The difference between blacks and whites in days of school attended, which was substantial in the earlier decades of this century, had virtually disappeared by 1964. Overall the researchers found education accounted for 47 per cent of the increase in earnings for men and 33 per cent for women.

They said they found little evidence to support the theory held by some economists that blacks as a group are relegated to dead-end jobs. Instead, they found that blacks and whites with comparable education levels receive similar wage increases over their work careers.

Increased government employment and affirmative action programs were listed among reason for wage gains among black women, particularly.

"The magnitude of the employment inroads made by black women suggests that they are the most likely recipients of any beneficial effects of affirmative action," the economists said.

If quotas are enforced and include both race and sex as criteria black women have an advantage by filing two quotas "for the price of one," they said.

Migration from the South to the North was also listed a primary factor in wage gains made by blacks, and business cycle variations accounted for short term changes in relative economic status among blacks.

Republicans court NAACP support

CHICAGO (UPI) — Republican National Chairman Bill Brock courted the nation's black leaders Sunday, saying Congress should approve a measure proposing a 33 per cent reduction in tax rates for all Americans.

Speaking at the NAACP's summit conference in an effort to polish the GOP's tarnished image in the eyes of black voters, Brock said Republicans have recently backed proposals that would benefit blacks more than the programs supported by President Carter and Democrats in general.

"The Republican Party in the last 15 months has offered sound legislative programs based solely on the need to alleviate the burdens of Americans struggling for a better life for themselves and their children," Brock said.

"What my party lacks is the vocal firepower of America's civil leaders as well as its political leaders," he added. "Our programs which impact directly on poor blacks and poor whites alike have lacked both the vocal support and the credit from major opinion leaders outside the Republican framework."

The proposed 33 per cent tax cut would produce 4.5 million new jobs by the end of 1980.

In Saturday's session, Eleanor Holmes Norton, chairperson of the United States Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, signaled a growing split between civil rights organizations and the Carter administration by her comments on the Bakke reverse discrimination case pending before the Supreme Court.

Norton said the civil rights movement would not suffer a major setback if the government loses the case.

Straining at the tape, Iowa co-captains Jim Docherty and Joel Moeller finished 1-2 in the 1,500-meters as the Hawkeye trackmen defeated Northwestern 89-54.

Pershing, 'Doc' pace rout of Northwestern

By CATHY BREITENBUCHER
Staff Writer

Without the help of strong competition, Iowa's Steve Pershing took nearly six seconds off his personal record with an 8:54.5 victory in the 3,000-meter steeplechase as the Hawkeyes pounded Northwestern 89-54 Saturday in their last dual meet before the Big Ten championships. The defending Big Ten champion was one of eight seniors competing in their last meet on the Iowa track.

Pershing's time was just a half-second off the qualifying standard for the NCAA meet. "I'm really pleased with the time since I had no one out there to help me," Pershing said. Second place went to Dennis Gawlik of Northwestern, who trailed Pershing by some 15 seconds. Rich Fuller was third for Iowa in 9:29.3.

Jim Docherty was a double winner, picking up a 3:47.6 victory in the 1,500 meters and cruising to a 1:56.8 win in the 800 meters.

His 1,500-time was again within two seconds of the national qualifying mark. "This is just like last year," he moaned. "It's all coming down to the Big Ten meet. Every week I get close, and every week it gets more frustrating. Sure there's always next week, but pretty soon there won't be a next week."

In the 1,500, Joe Paul set the pace for teammates Docherty and Joel Moeller with a 58-second first quarter. The pace slowed to 62 seconds in the second quarter and 63 in the third. Docherty and Moeller, sprinting the last lap, left Northwestern's Doug Peterson in the dust.

Moeller was timed in 3:47.7, with Peterson in 3:56.0.

Docherty and Moeller also ran the first two legs of Iowa's winning mile-relay team. The co-captains combined with Andy Jensen and Mike McDowell for a 3:20.5 victory. McDowell and William McCallister broke into the conference leaders list with their :47.6 and :47.8 timings in the 400 meters.

Ron Oliver nosed out Northwestern's Mark Sturwald in the 100-meter high hurdles. Both were clocked in :14.7. Oliver also placed second in the 100 meters, a tenth of a second behind teammate Tom Barclay, who was clocked in :10.7.

Barclay, McCallister, Royd Lake and Charles Jones teamed for a :41.5 victory in the 440-yard relay.

Tim Dickson powered down the homestretch to edge Northwestern's Will Kearney to pick up a :56.6 win in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles. Dickson was also third in the high hurdles.

Oliver and Jensen were second and third in the 200 meters in :22.5 and :22.6 behind the Wildcats' Tony Wilkins, who was timed in :22.2.

Fuller was third in the 800 meters in 2:02.5, while Bill Santino was second in the 5,000 meters in 15:05.8, behind Gawlik of Northwestern in 14:58.7.

On the field, Curt Broek used the wind to help him clear 16 feet in the pole vault, while Iowa swept the high jump. Pete Hlavin cleared 6-8 to lead the Hawkeye trio, with Andy Knoedel going 6-4 and Al Schoer 6-0 as Drake Relays champ Bill Hansen, still nursing a sore back, watched from the stands.

Dan Waddelow took second in the long jump with a 21-6 1/4 leap and third in the triple jump with a 44.4.

Dan Shortenhaus was second in the discus with a throw of 134-11 1/2, with Jim Cahalan third with a 131-8 1/2 toss. Cahalan was also second in the shot put with a 48-9 1/2 heave, with Andy Michaelsen third with a 47-4.

Women fourth in Big Ten

Freshmen Amy Dunlop, Colleen Gaupp and Denise Kintzel turned in stellar performances to lead the Iowa women to fourth place in the Big Ten championships contested Friday and Saturday at Northwestern.

Dunlop set a conference record with her :63.2-second victory in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles. "She ran a fantastic race," commented Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard. "She was even with a Purdue and Illinois runner with 110 meters to go, and she broke away on the last hurdle."

In the 100-meter high hurdles, Dunlop recorded a :14.55 to qualify for the national AIAW meet later this month in Knoxville, Tenn. "It was a super race," Hassard said of her fifth-place finish.

Gaupp, who had already qualified for nationals, lowered her own school record in the 100 meters with an :11.81 clocking in third place.

Both Dunlop and Gaupp were members of the 400-meter relay squad which finished second to Michigan State in :47.4, but more importantly, recorded a national qualifying time. Led off by another freshman, Marianne Mattingly, the team was anchored by Maureen Abel.

Kintzel missed national qualifying by a mere six points in the pentathlon with her 3,394 total in second place. "She needed a 2:15.4 (in the) 800 meters and she ran a 2:15.8," Hassard said. "But that's an excellent time. There was no one within 10 seconds of her."

Kintzel ran :16.29 in the hurdles, threw the shot 27 feet and high jumped 5-1 on the first day. "Denise slipped on the wet surface on her first attempt at 5-2, and that made her too careful," Hassard said. Kintzel's long jump of 16-9 locked up second place and put her within striking distance of the qualifying mark.

Sue Moreno improved her season's best in the shot put by nearly two feet with a 39-2 toss, just an inch shy of a personal record, to place third.

The Hawkeyes scored well in the relays. In addition to the 400-meter squad, the 880-yard medley team was third, the mile relay was fourth and the two-mile foursome was fifth.

The medley team, fourth last week at the Drake Relays, finished behind Michigan State and Wisconsin. Dunlop, Gaupp, Abel and Lisa Lundquist were timed in 1:48.2.

The performance of the mile relay was critical, Hassard said, because Minnesota and Illinois, both chasing the Hawks in team standings, had strong teams entered. Lundquist anchored in :57.9 to give the team of Dunlop, Sue Gripp and Abel a 3:58.4 clocking.

The two-mile squad of Michele Connelly, Teresa Feltes, Gripp and Sue Marshall was timed in 9:51.0.

Wisconsin took the team title with 174 points, followed by 1977 champ Michigan State with 155. Ohio State placed third with 68, with the Hawks scoring 54 points in fourth.

"I never expected us to take fourth," Hassard said. "And OSU was only 14 points ahead of us. We had only seven points on Friday and we were in sixth place. We really made a big step forward this weekend."

Rounding out the team scoring, Purdue was fifth with 44, Illinois sixth with 43, Minnesota seventh with 41, Michigan eighth with 10 and host Northwestern last with 0. Indiana does not have a women's track team.

Softball team loses at state

By JOHN WALKER
Staff Writer

The Iowa softball team went to the AIAW state tournament with high hopes of winning the title, but Grand View and Briar Cliff ended those hopes, and the Hawkeyes' season, with 6-0 and 2-1 victories.

Cindy Johnston of Grand View held the Hawks to just two hits, a third inning single by Lynn Oberbillig and a fifth inning single by Mary MacAreevy. Freshman Mary Swenson hurled four innings for Iowa before surrendering to Peg Augspurger. Grand View touched Swenson early in the first inning, scoring four runs on three hits, two walks and one Iowa error.

In the consolation bracket against Briar Cliff Saturday, Iowa was plagued with the same inability to hit the ball.

"We were going against one of the slowest pitchers in the world," Hagedorn said of the Briar Cliff pitcher. "Coming from a pitcher who was fast to one who was slow upset the kids' timing. And they never got the bats going."

The Hawks did, however, find enough holes in the Briar Cliff defense for six hits. Three of the hits came in the sixth inning, which scored the Hawks one run. Augspurger received a walk and Kris Rogers, Bev Davison and Oberbillig bunched three singles together to bring Augspurger home.

Auspurger was the losing pitcher, striking out five and giving up only five hits. Hagedorn praised the junior right hander's efforts.

"She's finally back to where she should be," Hagedorn said. "After being up in the first part of the season and then down, she finally came back to peak at the right time."

The two losses set the Iowa record at 19-11 for the season, the most victories by an Iowa team. The victory column may increase a little more next season because the team is dominated by freshmen and sophomores, a fact which makes Hagedorn optimistic.

The softball team loses only two players, but both are big losses: catcher Lynn Oberbillig and Julie Foltz, a right-handed pitcher who Hagedorn said, "went out in style after starting the season middle-of-the road."

'Lucky' Watson captures Nelson

DALLAS (UPI) — When Tom Watson needed a bit of good fortune the past few days, it just happened to be there.

His approach shot went sailing over the green at the 16th hole Saturday, but it hit a spectator and bounced back toward the pin. And when he needed a little luck on the final hole Sunday, after hitting a wild second shot, he got it in the form of a perfect lie.

"I guess," said Watson, "that it was my week."

And it certainly was. Watson made the key birdie putts when he had to down the stretch Sunday, made a scrambling par at the 18th hole, survived a battle with hometown favorite Lee Trevino and won the Byron Nelson Golf Classic by a single shot.

Watson thus became the 17th golfing millionaire, the $40,000 first prize boosting his career earnings to $1,013,226. He also moved into the top spot on the 1978 money list.

His closing round 66 gave him a 72 hole total of eight-under 272 and began a move toward what he hopes is a victory in this year's U.S. Open.

Trevino was one of the four golfers who started the day a shot behind Watson, and he also put together a 66 for a seven-under 273 total and second place money — $22,800.

Three shots further back, at 276, came Don January, Jeff Sneed, Dave Stockton and Joe Inman. Defending champion Ray Floyd shot a 67 Sunday to finish alone at 277 and at 278 were Andy Bean and Jim Dent.

Fibak-Okker win WCT

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Wojtek Fibak and Tom Okker hammered the weary third-seeded team of Bob Lutz and Stan Smith 6-7, 6-4, 6-0, 6-3 Sunday to win the $200,000 WCT-World Doubles Championship.

Fibak and Okker, the top-seeded team last year but only the fifth seed this time around, knocked off the first and fourth-seeded teams in addition to Smith and Lutz en route to the $80,000 first-place purse.

Service difficulties by Smith and Lutz, who survived a grueling three-set match with second-seeded Fred McNeil and Sherwood Stewart that went to almost midnight the night before, propelled Okker and Fibak to victory.

Lutz was broken three times and went to deuce on two other occasions in his nine services while Smith was broken four times and went to deuce once in ten services.

Smith and Lutz, who won the inaugural doubles championships in 1973, share $40,000 for their runner-up finish.

"Wojtek should move here," said Lutz, "he's certainly won a lot of money here."

"We didn't seem to have the spark left," said Smith, who along with Lutz forms the number two ranked doubles team in the United States.

Hawks 'slip' past 'Cats twice

By MIKE O'MALLEY
Staff Writer

Iowa relied on the five-hit pitching of Rich Carlucci and Mike Boddicker to slip, slide and skid its way to a waterlogged 3-1, 5-1 doubleheader sweep over Northwestern Saturday at the Iowa stadium.

With gray skies threatening, Carlucci moved his record to 8-1 in the opener, then watched Boddicker & Co. scramble to complete the second game when clouds dumped a steady stream of rain on the field in the nightcap.

"It's so difficult to play on a day like today that it's tough to evaluate the games. Both teams really did a good job. It could have been a fiasco," said Iowa baseball Coach Duane Banks, who saw his club run its record to 8-5 in the Big Ten and 27-16 overall. Northwestern, once 4-0 in conference play, dropped to 6-8 and 17-14-1 overall.

The Hawkeyes were limited to only two hits in the opener, but made the most of their opportunities, aided by four walks, to scratch out three runs.

Iowa jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning when John Mahoney tripled and came home on Jerry Blixt's towering sacrifice fly that brushed Northwestern centerfielder Mike Ouska against the 400-foot mark in dead-center field.

Carlucci got insurance runs in the third when first baseman Del Ryan slammed his seventh home run of the year to left-center with Jeff Lueders aboard after a walk.

"Three runs is about all Carlucci needs the way he's been pitching," Banks said of the junior righthander, who improved his Big Ten record to 4-0 and saw his conference earned run average dip to a sparkling 0.69.

Northwestern touched Carlucci for an unearned run in the fifth on Frank Goldak's walk, a single by Kurt Bruksch and a passed ball charged to Blixt.

Carlucci slammed the door the rest of the way, however, retiring the last eight batters to finish with five strikeouts and three walks.

In the nightcap, galoshes may have been more appropriate footwear than spikes as players skidded around the slippery infield. Standing water in several spots kept players on their toes (and occasionally on their backsides) as the footing became particularly treacherous after a third-inning downpour.

Mahoney slapped three straight singles to lead a ninth-inning Iowa attack behind Boddicker's nine strikeouts.

Northwestern grabbed a 1-0 lead in the second on an unearned run when Boddicker (5-4) wheeled around for a pickoff play and threw the ball into center field to score Ouska, who had doubled.

Boddicker then tamed the Wildcats while the Hawkeyes scored a single run in the third inning and tallied twice in both the fourth and fifth.

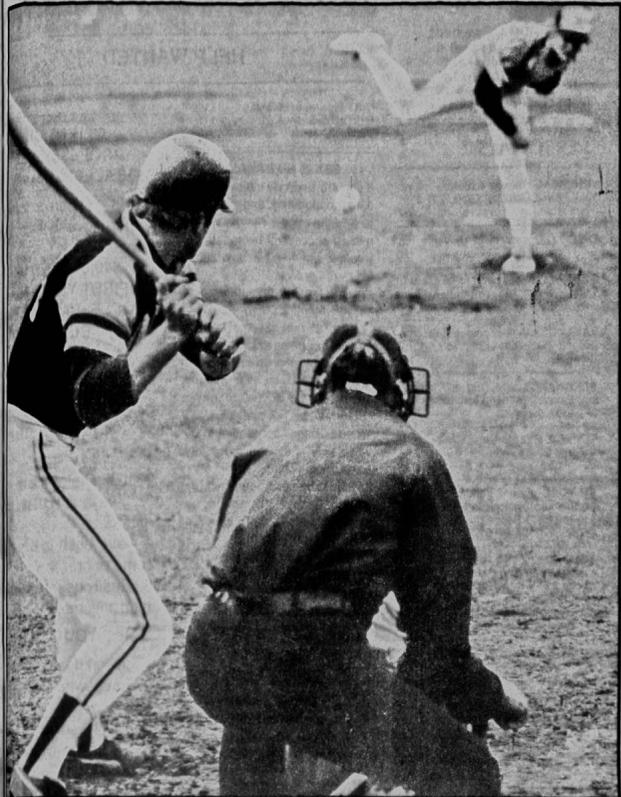

Mahoney blooped a single to open the third, advanced to second on Lueders' infield hit, then came home when Ed Lash's sacrifice attempt was thrown away by losing pitcher Mike Sjoerdsma (2-5).

Mahoney got things going again in the fourth with a two-out single, then advanced to second on Sjoerdsma's wild pitch. After Lueders drew one of seven Iowa walks in the game, Mahoney came home when second baseman Dave Brown threw wildly to Goldak at first on Lash's infield hit. Lueders advanced to third on the error and scored when Wildcat third baseman Brett Carver got his turn to ignore Goldak, heaving Ryan's grounder into the Iowa bullpen.

Dick Peth, Dave Hoeksema and Jeff Jones stroked consecutive basehits in the fifth to make it 4-1 before Mahoney completed the scoring with another single to chase home Hoeksema.

Following a break for final exams, Banks' club, pinning its hopes for a post-season tournament bid on a strong weekend finish, hosts Michigan State and league-leading Michigan in doubleheaders Saturday and Sunday at the Iowa stadium to end the regular season.

"We've got to win second place to get any consideration," Banks commented. "Michigan State is a good hitting team and I don't think anybody can catch Michigan for first. It's going to be a dogfight for second."

The Daily Iowan/John Darrico Jr.

Everyone's poised for action as this pitch makes its way to the plate. Iowa batter Jerry Blixt gets ready to step into the ball, the umpire leans in to make the call, and Northwestern pitcher Carl Shellenbach watches the flight of his delivery.

Luzinski's power propels Phillies

By United Press International

The Philadelphia Phillies continue to win with "Polish Power."

Greg Luzinski belted a pair of homers and drove in four runs for the second straight game today to pace the Phillies to an 8-1 victory over the New York Yankees and complete a sweep of their three-game series.

Luzinski hit a two-run homer in the third inning, tied the score with a solo homer in the fifth and added a sacrifice fly in the seventh inning. Richie Carter and Bob Boone also homered for the Phillies.

The Mets had 16 hits, including four by Bobby Valentine.

In other National League games, Pittsburgh downed Los Angeles 6-4, San Francisco edged Chicago 2-1, St. Louis beat San Diego 8-4 and Montreal edged Cincinnati 19-5 then 4-2. Houston at Atlanta was postponed.

The Pirates literally ran the Dodgers ragged as they stole 11 season-high eight bases en route to their victory. Dave Concepcion and Phil Garner each scored in a pair of runs as Pittsburgh handed Tommy John his 100th loss of the season in five innings. Reggie Smith hit a two-run homer for the Dodgers.

Vida Blue allowed four hits in 8 1-3 innings and Willie McCovey drove in both runs in the Giants' victory over the Cubs. Blue, with ninth inning relief help from Randy Moffitt and Gary Lavelle, notched his fourth victory in five decisions.

Garry Templeton's two-run single capped a four-run fifth inning that enabled the Cardinals to defeat the Padres. The Cardinals had 16 hits, including a home run by Keith Hernandez, in helping Bob Forsch to his fifth victory in seven decisions. Gene Richards homered for San Diego.

Montreal banged out 20 hits, including home runs by Tony Perez, Andre Dawson and Ellis Valentine, to rout the Reds in the opener. Perez, Warren Cromartie and Gary Carter each had three hits while Joe Morgan and Dave Concepcion homered for the Reds.

In the nightcap, a pair of errors by third baseman Larry Parrish enabled the Reds to score three unearned runs in the sixth inning and hand Ross Grimsley his first loss in six decisions. Cincinnati's Pete Rose saw his consecutive game playing streak end at 678 when he sat out the nightcap. Dawson homered for Montreal in the second game also.

76ers down 3-1

Hayes sparks Bullets' romp

LANDOVER, Md. (UPI) — Elvin Hayes, basically a non-violent fellow, didn't really ask for the war of words, elbows and shoves he is presently waging with the Philadelphia 76ers. But he's pleased that he's been able to do most of his talking with points and rebounds.

"That's what you have to do to beat them, put the ball in the hoop. You can't worry about talking out there, but you have to let your game talk for you," said Hayes, who scored 35 points Sunday to lead the Washington Bullets to a 121-105 NBA playoff victory over the 76ers.

The Bullets lead the best-of-seven semifinal series 3-1 and have a chance to wrap it up Wednesday night at Philadelphia. Hayes has no doubt they will.

"San Antonio was supposed to run by us and we made them slow down and bring the ball up. Philadelphia was supposed to run by us, and we've made them do the same thing," said Hayes. "So far, the Bullets have been doing all the running."

The Bullets ran the 76ers ragged during the last four minutes of the first half, scoring 17 straight points, 11 of them by Hayes.

Philadelphia, with some accurate outside jump shooting, had taken a 48-37 lead with 4:24 left in the half. But Philadelphia came completely unraveled late in the half as the Bullets reeled off 17 straight points—11 of them by Hayes.

So complete was the domination that 76er Coach Billy Cunningham was forced to call a timeout 1:10 before halftime. Philadelphia never caught up, but pulled within two midway through the third quarter, 64-62. Then Bob Dandridge, who finished with 27 points, and Kevin Grevey, who had 18, picked up the scoring load as the Bullets spurred to a seven-point lead, 81-74, after three quarters.

Philadelphia was within six, 91-85, with 8:18 remaining, but could get no closer as the Bullets hit every shot they needed.

Hayes also contributed 19 rebounds to the Bullet effort, and Mitch Kupchak, starting in place of injured center Wes Unseld, pitched in with 19 points.

Julius Erving led Philadelphia with 24 points, followed by George McGinnis with 22 and Lloyd Free with 17.

Philadelphia, behind McGinnis, dominated the first quarter and led 28-23 at its conclusion. Erving took over in the second period, scoring 10 straight points in one stretch as the 76ers appeared ready to cruise into halftime with a hefty lead.

But they weren't to score in the last 4:24 of the half as the Bullets took advantage of their turnovers and ran their fast break to perfection.

Hayes hit a layup, then Grevey hit a jumpshot, before a three-point play by Hayes and two more Hayes baskets tied the game at 48-all.

Then Dandridge hit a basket after Hayes started a fast break with a rebound and another steal led to a basket by Charles Johnson with 1:14 remaining. A turnaround jump shot by Hayes with 21 seconds left completed the 17-point run and gave the Bullets a 54-48 halftime lead.

Sonics blast Denver on late Brown flurry

DENVER (UPI) — Guard Fred Brown scored 13 fourth-quarter points and helped stave off a late Denver rally to lead the Seattle SuperSonics to a 121-111 playoff victory over the Nuggets Sunday and even the best-of-seven Western Conference championship series at one game each.

The third game in the NBA playoff will be held Wednesday in Seattle.

Brown, held to only 11 points in the first three quarters of play, scored 13 of Seattle's 38 fourth-quarter points as the Sonics jumped to leads of as many as nine points.

Guard Dennis Johnson, playing with a painful dislocated finger on his shooting hand, finished with 22 points and teammate Gus Williams had 21, including 13 in the third quarter. Also scoring in double figures were rookie forward Jack Sikma with 19 and center Marvin Webster, who had 14 and made two key blocks late in the game when Denver was threatening to rally. John Johnson had 13 to close out double-figure scoring for Seattle.

Center Dan Issel led the Denver scoring attack with 29 points, including 11 in the final period, while teammates David Thompson and Anthony Roberts each had 22 in a game played before a sellout crowd of 17,838.

Fouls played a major role in the game, just as they did in the first contest of the series when a total of 64 were whistled, including 38 on Denver.

In Sunday's game, 60 fouls were called on both clubs, including 34 on Denver. The SuperSonics hit 35 of 49 free throws, while Denver was 21 of 26 from the charity line.

The Nuggets led by eight at the end of the first period, 38-30, but the SuperSonics, behind the play of Brown and an overwhelming advantage in free throws, turned the game around in the second period and left the contest at halftime with a 61-56 lead.

The Nuggets' last lead came with 8:09 remaining to play when Issel put in a rebound shot to give Denver a 91-90 advantage. The Sonics responded with a shot by Webster 19 seconds later and never trailed, although Denver pulled to as close as one point.

With 5:05 left in the game, the Nuggets made another rally when Bobby Jones, who was hindered early in the game by fouls, scored a three-point play to bring the Nuggets to within two, 102-100.

The Sonics then scored the next six points, helped by two blocks by Webster.

On a shot looking through the clear backboard, Seattle's Paul Silas, dark uniform on the left, misses a layup during the Sonics' 121-111 NBA playoff victory over the Denver Nuggets. Denver center Dan Issel (No. 44) goes up for the rebound while players from both teams watch the action.

Affirmed's Derby victory doesn't end Alydar rivalry

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — The score is Affirmed 5, Alydar 2 — but at least one trainer besides John Veitch thinks the rivalry is still going.

Despite Affirmed's 1½-length victory over Alydar in Saturday's $239,400 Kentucky Derby in 2:01 1-5, trainer Lou Rondinello, as well as Veitch, feels the two chestnut colts remain evenly matched.

"I think Alydar had a legitimate excuse in the Derby," said Rondinello, who saddled Darby Creek Road to a fourth-place finish. "Jorge Velasquez said he couldn't get hold of the track — and riders like that don't make excuses when they get beat."

Saturday, Affirmed was superbly ridden by 18-year-old jockey Steve Cauthen, who held the gleaming golden colt in third place through most of the race and then took command around the second turn in striding to victory, his fifth in as many starts this year for earnings of $887,027.

Alydar, who was the sentimental 6-5 favorite, was more than eight lengths back going into the stretch and despite a gallant drive could not catch Affirmed. Believe it, who finished third, swerved out slightly and brushed Alydar at the eighth pole but Veitch said that was no factor.

"The only instructions I gave Jorge were not to be more than three or four lengths off the pace when they turned for home," said Veitch. "He was pretty far back at that point and that's when I started to get worried. But those things happen."

But Affirmed's trainer, Laz Barrera, who also won the 1976 Derby with Bold Forbes, wasn't buying Velasquez' excuse.

"Look, if he no get hold of the track, he no finish second either," said Barrera, the two-time Trainer of the Year. "The only thing he no get hold of is Affirmed."

When asked about the finish of the race, when Alydar seemed to be gaining on his colt, Barrera said: "If they ran around the track again, Alydar still would not catch Affirmed." Barrera, born in Cuba, was upset prior to the race when his colt was not made the favorite despite his flawless record in California.

"I heard the guy who made the line on television, and he said he made Alydar the favorite because he was impressed with his Blue Grass victory and Affirmed trained in California," said Barrera. "California is in the United States, not Russia. Swaps come out of California, like a lot of good horses."

The two will meet again May 20 in the Preakness, the middle jewel of the Triple Crown at Pimlico Race Course.

Jockey Steve Cauthen waves to fans while Affirmed is honored in the winner's circle after winning the Kentucky Derby by a length and a half Saturday at Churchill Downs in Louisville.
