Jaworski reports on Korea-gate

WASHINGTON (AP) - Leon Jaworski, who led the investigation into the Iran-contra affair and the Korea-gate scandal, said Thursday that he will not testify before the Senate committee that is preparing to issue a report on Korea-gate.

The report Jaworski, special counsel to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was described as "concurrent," including "many of the same information and applicable legal principles," to help the committee determine whether any perjury or obstruction of justice charges should be submitted to a private reading meeting Sunday. Jaworski said he would make the necessary as much as we place it.

Talmadge. Brooke

Washington (AP) - The Senate Ethics Committee voted Thursday to investigate Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., and Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., for their roles in the committee's investigation of the Iraq war.

The Ethics Committee is investigating whether Talmadge and Brooke failed to report their involvement with contractors who were helping to build the military base in Iraq.

Morton Brown, a lawyer for the committee, said the investigation would be conducted as soon as the Senate adjourns.

The Ethics Committee has jurisdiction over the actions of senators and their staffs.

House

Willsburg, Ohio (AP) - The House Ethics Committee has voted to investigate Rep. Bob Ney, R-Ohio, and Rep. James Traficant, D-OH, for their roles in the congressman's fight over the appointment of a new speaker for the House.

The Ethics Committee's investigation is expected to focus on whether Ney and Traficant violated any House rules or ethics.

The Ethics Committee has jurisdiction over the actions of House members and their staffs.

Off the pedestal

There are a lot of inconveniences in the decision of what to exclude from public libraries. Bizarrely, and for no good reason that I can think of, current public libraries were supposed to be "neutral" in the sense that they were not supposed to be, for example, in favor of the extension of nuclear arms. This is not a legal requirement, but it is generally taken to be a moral one.

One legislator, in the grand tradition of speaking very carefully about what public libraries should or should not include, stated in the Illinois State Senate: "We should not have a public library that would have as its purpose the promotion of scientific communism."

The ideal public library is one in which the public can come and find information. This means that the public library should be neutral in its presentation of ideas, both political and scientific.

The great danger of the future is that the public library will become a tool of the government, and that the goal of the public library will be to promote certain ideas and to suppress others. This is why the public library must be independent of government control.

The public library should be a place where people can come and find information about all ideas, regardless of whether those ideas are popular or unpopular, good or bad, true or false. The public library should be a place where people can come to learn, and not just to be entertained. The public library should be a place where people can come to think, and not just to be passive consumers of information.

The public library should be a place where people can come to learn about the world, and not just about what the government wants them to learn. The public library should be a place where people can come to think for themselves, and not just to accept the opinions of others.

The public library should be a place where people can come to learn about the past, and not just about what the government wants them to learn about. The public library should be a place where people can come to think about the past, and not just to accept the opinions of others about the past.

The public library should be a place where people can come to learn about the present, and not just about what the government wants them to learn about the present. The public library should be a place where people can come to think about the present, and not just to accept the opinions of others about the present.

The public library should be a place where people can come to learn about the future, and not just about what the government wants them to learn about the future. The public library should be a place where people can come to think about the future, and not just to accept the opinions of others about the future.

The public library should be a place where people can come to learn about the past, present, and future, and not just about what the government wants them to learn about the past, present, and future. The public library should be a place where people can come to think about the past, present, and future, and not just to accept the opinions of others about the past, present, and future.

Iowa City is a place where bookstores always seem to open late. The sun may have set by the time they open, but people are looking for a place to spend their time. Bookstores are often the go-to place for Iowa City residents, providing a place to read and learn.

Being a bookstore owner is a unique experience. In addition to selling books, they also provide a place for people to gather and discuss their favorite reads.

Wallace rethinks: Allen to Senate

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace Thursday apologized Marvyn Bondi, director of the Alabama Guard, to fill her husband's seat as an interim basis. The apology would allow for the fill of the seat when it expires.

The governor said he was not consulted on the decision to fill the seat.

"I said I would not campaign on the governor's announcement that she would run in November, and said it could not work before Wallace announced his intentions. In his appointment, he was not a 'friend' and a 'genuine lady and a strong person,'" said Roskam.

Woodin leaves Guard under cloud

DES MOINES — Two of five Iowa National Guard officers who were placed on military flight to Arizona and Nevada by the Guard's current commander, these officers would appear before a hearing board June 7 to determine whether Roskam and Kessler were involved in the actions.

No reason for the resignation was given for the officers, who were on a special assignment to the Guard.

Woodin, who has more than 20 years of service, was appointed interim Adj. Gen. in August 1998.
