The week after charges of "illegal activities" at Weeg appeared in the

Tuesday, Oct. 1, edition of The Daily Iowan, the university's newspaper, the school's administration announced it was investigating those allegations.

The announcement, which was made public in a press release, came just days after the story was published.

"The university is aware of the allegations and is working to determine if they are true," the press release stated.

The release also said that the university would not comment further until the investigation was complete.

A university spokesperson confirmed that the investigation was still ongoing.

The investigation was prompted by a report in The Daily Iowan that alleged that Weeg, a student-run radio station, had engaged in "illegal activities." The report included quotes from students who said they had witnessed such activities.

The allegations included that Weeg had been involved in "illegal" activities as a way to generate revenue for the station.

The report also alleged that Weeg had used university resources for personal gain, and that the station had not paid its bills for supplies.

The university had previously refused to comment on the allegations, citing the need for an investigation.

The announcement of the investigation was met with mixed reactions from students.

Some students welcomed the news, saying that it was long overdue.

Others were skeptical, saying that the university had been dragging its feet in investigating the allegations.

The investigation is expected to last several weeks, and the university has said that it will release a statement once the investigation is complete.

The Daily Iowan has not yet published a follow-up story on the investigation.

Israel calls Egypt's bid 'stubborn'

Israel's foreign minister agreed Monday that his government was not prepared to make new concessions to Egypt, just because Egypt had offered to join the Middle East talks. The offer, which was made in response to a proposal by the United States, was quickly rejected by the Israeli government, which is planning to hold new talks with Egypt next week.

The Israeli government has said that it will not make any new concessions until Egypt has shown more commitment to the peace process. This is because Egypt has been accused of not making enough efforts to end its support for terrorism.

Israel's foreign minister, Shimon Peres, said that Egypt's offer was not enough to warrant renewed negotiations. He said that Egypt had not made any real commitment to the peace process and had not shown any willingness to stop supporting terrorism.

Peres said that Egypt's offer was not enough to warrant renewed negotiations. He said that Egypt had not made any real commitment to the peace process and had not shown any willingness to stop supporting terrorism.

Beekeeper keeps house for &frac12; million

By JOHN PETERSON
Staff Writer

We labor in a Closet — the Johnnies and the Martha's — the strawberry fields and the apple orchards and the tobacco fields.

— Emily Dickinson

It operates almost as if we were on a huge farm where the workers and the beekeeper himself share the same responsibilities. The beekeeper is responsible for the queen, the bees, and the honey. The workers are responsible for the hive, the frames, and the production of honey. The timeline below shows the key events in the life of a beekeeper.

- June 1, 1932: Birth of the queen
- July 1, 1932: The queen is placed in the hive
- August 1, 1932: The bees begin to produce honey
- September 1, 1932: The honey is collected
- October 1, 1932: The beekeeper inspects the hive
- November 1, 1932: The bees are hibernating
- December 1, 1932: The beekeeper prepares for the next season

A Chinese, a poet named, would be as happy as a man on the moon. The honey is a precious commodity, and the beekeeper is responsible for its production and preservation.

At the moment, the bees are busy collecting nectar from the flowers in the surrounding area. The flowers are the beekeeper's main source of income, and the bees are the key to the success of the operation.

The beekeeper, John Peterson, is a busy man. He Rise, rise, rise. Kids, wake up. It is time to make the day. His day begins long before the sun rises and ends long after it sets. He is a dedicated and hardworking man who loves his bees and his work.

John Peterson's passion for beekeeping is evident in his dedication to the health and well-being of his bees. He is always looking for ways to improve his methods and stay ahead of the game. His approach to beekeeping is based on a deep understanding of the natural world and the intricate relationship between the bee and its environment.

John Peterson's story is a testament to the power of hard work and dedication. His commitment to beekeeping has allowed him to create a successful business that is both rewarding and fulfilling. He is a true example of what can be achieved through hard work and perseverance.

Medicaid: Your money or your wife

DALLAS (UPI) - C. W. King, 79, is waiting for federal bureaucrats to "take their people back." If they take away half of everything he saved all his life from "going to hell," he said Wednesday at his influential struggle against an HEW program that has forced him to fill for federal funds for his wife of 50 years.

But what he said was not the saga of a helpless, elderly man letting them mop his pool and eat what he does. He knew what would happen.

By 8 a.m., King, accompanied and confided in a nursing home, with a pressing need to win Medicaid for his wife, Alvinne, who needs dialysis treatment because of kidney trouble, spoke the truth on his body and mind for years. He felt like his care was paid for Social Security and Medicaid.

In Medicaid payments, which now exceed 40 per cent of payments to nursing homes, King said: "I know I've been in there, but I think what they meant was that they'd take half on her body and mind for years. I don't think they meant Medicaid for his body and mind for years."

"They threatened to cut off Medicaid," King said. "They told me that he would need home government and that he would have to take more over in his home and we would be eligible for Medicaid. Unless another solution is found, the dweller will be responsible for his own care, which is very expensive..."
Luzinski paces Philly win; Cubs stay close

NEW YORK (UPI) — Greg Luzinski drove in a run and hit a solo home run Thursday night to give the Chicago White Sox a 12-11 victory over host New York. It was the Sox’s third straight victory and fifth in six games.

Fifteen hit batters by Chicago starter Jim Kern helped the Cubs score five runs in the second inning and gave them a 1-0 lead after the first inning. The Cubs scored again in the second and fifth innings, and 20-year-old left-hander Kern gave up eight runs and 14 hits in five innings.

Luzinski, who has homered in five straight games, had his second four-hit game in the last six and his fifth overall this season. He has 15 hits in his last 10 games and has hit safely in 13 of his last 14 games.

The Sox’s other big hitter, Jose Canseco, had three hits and a three-run home run in the sixth inning. Canseco’s homer was his 17th of the season and the fifth of his career.

Infielder Ron Blomberg, who had been out since June 23 with a broken bone in his foot, returned to the starting lineup and drove in two runs with two singles.
