Carter promises action on energy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, predicting the world would needed its full attention, said Monday that energy policy would be a top priority for his administration. Carter pledged that he would work to end the energy crisis in a long-term and lasting way.

In a speech at the White House, Carter said the energy crisis was a "crisis of unprecedented proportions" and that the country needed to "get back to business as usual.

Carter said the crisis was a "crisis of unprecedented proportions" and that the country needed to "get back to business as usual.

The president also called for a "new energy era," in which the nation would not only meet its energy needs but also create new industries and jobs.

Carter promised to work with Congress to pass new energy legislation and to work with the private sector to develop new energy technologies.

He said the crisis was a "crisis of unprecedented proportions" and that the country needed to "get back to business as usual.

Carter's speech was widely praised by energy experts, who said it was a "brave and visionary" approach to the energy crisis.

"The United States has a unique opportunity to lead the world in a new energy era," said one energy expert. "President Carter's speech was a clear and direct call for action.

11th week: Anti-abortionists march on Goldstein

by J. DOUGLAS

In the seventh week of the "ongoing paciente action against the evil of abortion," the protegers of the unborn reached a peak of intensity both inside the Emma Goldman Clinic and outside it. The movement inside the clinic is best described by a letter written by a doctor who was present on the day of the march. "On the day of the march, we were all very quiet, with tears in our eyes. It was a very sad day, but we knew that we would go on." The doctors and nurses at the clinic were determined to continue their work in the face of opposition.

The march outside the clinic was equally intense. "We were faced with a large crowd of protesters," said one of the leaders of the march. "They were holding signs and chanting slogans such as "Abortion is murder."" The protesters were met by a counter-protest, led by the clinic staff and supported by the community. "We were able to come together and stand up for our values," said one of the staff members. "We are committed to providing safe and legal abortion services to all who need them."

Despite the opposition, the clinic continued to provide services to women in need. "We are proud of our work," said the director of the clinic. "We will not be deterred by the protesters."

In this艰难的时刻，我们坚信我们的目标是正确的。我们承诺会继续为需要我们的女人们提供安全和合法的堕胎服务。我们感谢所有支持我们的朋友和社区。我们不会被反对的声音所惧怕。我们的工作将继续。
Congress attacks Indian rights

An American official was labeling justified criticisms at the conclusion and assessments of the nation's policies toward the Native Americans as "staggering paucity of men who have been in the seventies." Senator Edward Kennedy from Massachusetts and the Indian community have come to the nation's capital to voice their opposition to pending legislation that would modify Indian rights.

Native Americans are not, of course, the only ones who have been caught off guard by the nation's policies. The national government has been so straightforward that primary victims of the great and deep social changes that have been "manifested"...

The crucial elements of disarray, disappointment, and contempt have been real and often quite obvious. In the end, the Kennedy naming of a "staggering paucity of men who have been in the seventies" shows that the Indian community has come to the nation's capital to voice their opposition to pending legislation that would modify Indian rights.

Women of the world

It is true that a corporation would not have achieved what it has, but it has taken a look at the part one county recently offered to Indian women. The county, the 22nd, did not yield to the pressure of the women's rights advocates. But the board of supervisors, the 22nd, did not yield to the pressure of the women's rights advocates.

Darker horses

If the most recent findings of the Gallup Poll are to be believed, American women want the politics of the decade repealed and, if the women's movement that has been repressed for the past few years had been allowed to flower, there would be no "storm" in the United States.

According to the Gallup Poll, 52 percent of Democrats nationwide prefer 22nd-term President Kennedy over the party's 1965 presidential candidate, Adlai Stevenson. The poll of 1,500 respondents also found that 71 percent of those who support Kennedy favor Stevenson. This trend is reflected in the position of Stevenson's running mate, Hubert Humphrey. Stevenson has been endorsed by both.

There are at least two interesting aspects to the political climate of this nation. First, there is the nationwide desire for a woman's" movement. Republicans are less interested in the issue, and in 1965, the 22nd, the Democratic Party was far behind the Republicans in this regard.

The 22nd's endorsement of Stevenson, who has an "opposite opinion" on the issue of women's rights, is something for which Republicans must be grateful...
