Conflict for airport growth?

By TIM SHEET

In advance of numerous legal questions, action at the proposed land sale was deferred until Sept. 12 by the Coralville City Council.

Staff Writer

Questions raised by the council's decision to sell a small portion of the motel industry. The land sale would provide for extending the runway. Currently, Coralville voters turned it down two years ago. Several bids have been received to pay for airport needs. The motel industry has been raised by a new State Law.

For more information, call the Coralville City Council.

“Still a question of allowing the people to decide whether or not they want it,” Parrish said. “All we're saying is that we've had too many meetings and there's no decision as to where it should be located.”

Parrish said the council had agreed to go into effect. "We've been asked to continue to provide the hotel industry with a new State Law. We don't want to have to do this again," Parrish said.

The council has also decided to extend the runway. Currently, Coralville is turning it down two years ago. Several bids have been received to pay for airport needs. The motel industry has been raised by a new State Law.

The researchers discovered that the children who had been under the care of psychiatrists had a greater knowledge of their delinquent behavior than children who had not received any psychiatric treatment.

The study may not mean as much as it appears to those who might expect psychiatry might respond that the children who were placed under the care of psychiatrists were disturbed in the first place and the study's findings are indicative that would contribute to the belief of disturbed children. However, the children who had no professional help. Such children, the study concludes, are likely to cause the incidents to become less frequent but not disappear.

In conclusion, the study was a welcome addition to the selection of free cigarette "teaching aids" currently being marketed.

Gilroy and Hibbs on ballot twice

By ROGER THORPE

The refusal of both Hilo-Maun­ana candidates Gilroy and Dave Hibbs to withdraw before the依法 deadline July 14 will mean that their names will be appearing on the polls, both as candidates and as opposition. For the first time in the history of Hilo, both candidates will be running against each other for the same seat.

Gilroy and Hibbs are the two candidates running for the District 1 seat on the Hawaii County Council. The two candidates have already been met in two previous elections, but neither has been successful in winning the seat.

Gilroy, a former councilman, won the seat in 1992, but was defeated in 1994 by Hibbs. In 1994, Gilroy was again defeated by Hibbs, who went on to win the seat.

The two candidates have been running against each other for the seat for several years now, and this is the first time they have both been running for the same seat.

Both candidates have been active in the community, and both have been working hard to win the seat.

Gilroy and Hibbs both have the support of the local community, and both have been working hard to win the seat.

The race between the two candidates is expected to be a close one, and both candidates are expected to do well in the election.

The election will be held on November 6, 2023.
Seabrook: more spirt than glamar

By JAY WALKER
Special to The Daily News

The demonstration at and around the Seabrook Nuclear Power Station in New Hampshire must take on as a matter of global significance as the New Hampshire site is used as a model in the propaganda of the environmental activists. The New Hampshire activists who are organizing the protest believe that they have a right to use the Seabrook site as a platform to voice their concerns about the dangers of nuclear energy.

The activists believe that nuclear energy is not only dangerous but also a waste of resources. They argue that it is not economically feasible and that the costs associated with nuclear power are huge.

On the other hand, the government and the power companies insist that nuclear power is a necessary source of energy that can help combat the energy crisis. They argue that nuclear power is a clean and efficient source of energy that can provide a large amount of electricity.

The activists are determined to continue their protest, and they believe that they have a duty to protect the environment and the future generations. They are committed to stopping the construction of new nuclear plants and to accelerating the phase-out of existing ones.

The activists also believe that the protest at Seabrook is a symbol of the growing opposition to nuclear energy, and they hope that their actions will inspire other people to join them in their fight against nuclear power.

Police kill Baader-Meinhof terrorist

Police burst into a German restaurant Wednesday night and gunned down one of three bank robbers - the Baader-Meinhof gang wanted for the deaths of two Gestapo officers in 1977. The incident occurred just days before the German government was to begin talks with the terrorists to end their long guerrilla war.

Police said that two plainclothes officers fired shots at 1 a.m. as they searched a restaurant in Hamburg, Germany, for Andreas Baader, the group's leader. Baader was killed, and the other two suspects escaped, police said.

The operation was a blow to the terrorist group, which has been responsible for the deaths of at least 10 people and the wounding of hundreds of others in the past decade. Baader was the group's most notorious member and had been wanted by authorities for six years.

The operation came as Germany's government was to begin talks with the terrorists to end the guerrilla war that has lasted for more than 20 years. The government has offered to negotiate with the group in hopes of ending the violence.

Baader was killed in the operation, which was the result of a months-long investigation by German police. The operation was carried out at the request of the government, which has been seeking to end the guerrilla war.

The operation was a major blow to the terrorist group, which has been responsible for the deaths of at least 10 people and the wounding of hundreds of others in the past decade. Baader was the group's most notorious member and had been wanted by authorities for six years.

Walton, Blazers still seek trade

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) - Bill Walton and the Portland Trail Blazers, after the season ended in the most heated of situations, met Wednesday to decide if they would separate or find a way to work together satisfactorily.

Walton is still expected to sign with the Blazers, which is the reason for the meeting. Walton had arranged for the meeting to take place.

"I went into the meetings with Bill with the idea that he had been exercising nothing but the very best in the treatment of players and our conduct and that we were following the amount of agreement practices, " Walton said.

"Walton continues to hold an interest in the Blazers, with his signed left foot against the 76ers the last day. Walton's foot was anchored with the bind foot and added the final 85 points of the regular course, which Portland 501 at the time, lost 14-4.

The Blazers, on the left foot for the Western Conference and the Portland 53 in the second quarter of that series, which the Blazers were 4-2."

McClain readies Badgers for uphill battle

The Associated Press

Bob Wieland

Madison (AP) - Paul 'Chuck' Sauer has always been known as a steady, patient coach. Even his critics have acknowledged that he has a way with the girls when he's on the field.

But Sauer, who has the Badgers in the thick of the Big Ten race for the first time since 1982, has taken a page out of Woody Hayes' playbook this year. Instead of going for it on fourth down, he's content to punt and try to stop the opposition short of the goal line.

That philosophy has paid off. In Saturday's 31-7 win over Illinois, the Badgers had five field goals and one punt return for a touchdown, and they didn't surrender a second-half touchdown.

But with two games to play, Sauer knows his team still has a long way to go.

"We've got a lot of work to do," he said. "We're not good enough to play a team like Wisconsin."

The Badgers (5-4, 3-1 Big Ten) have two games to play, and Sauer is hoping to use them to get his team into the postseason.

"We're not good enough to play a team like Wisconsin," he said. "We're not good enough to play a team like Ohio State."
