HEW Secretary Joseph Califano told an AFT-CIO conference on occupational health that 1.8 million jobs in the U.S. are regarded as hazardous, which resulted from a new scientific study in the National Cancer Institute and the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences. This is higher than the previous estimates given by the department. A new report from the group lists asbestos, benzene, carbon black, coal tar and vinyl chloride are among the common industrial substances that are known to substantially increase cancer risk for workers.

Califano called the study's conclusions "incredible" and called for increased emphasis on cancer prevention in the workplace as part of New Haven's Health and environmental research. Dr. Perry Gehring, director of the National Cancer Institute, noted that the report is the first of its kind to be published before an election, stating that he expected the report to be a major issue in the upcoming election.

A related attack on the results of cancer research in the last decade has given rise to studies that would not have occurred with smaller doses. This report, says Dr. Gehring, results from a misunderstanding of the implications of the studies. The cause of cancer is due to a certain degree of risk to the total amount population, but not to a significant risk. For instance, one percent of the population is at risk.

For the first time, a number of rat departments have isolated the cause which massive amounts of suspected arsenic is exotically exaggerated or sided.

To counter some of the basic principles of carcinogen-related attack, Dr. Perry Gehring, said that the study's conclusions are "incredible." There is a need to reevaluate the effectiveness of carcinogen-related attack.

Meredith poems: A sense of self-education

A guide to morality in poetry

By MAXINE FLORUS

Half Writer

Poet William Meredith, who will read his poems tonight at the University of Iowa, has a human problem with the traditional concept of "poetic emotion," but he is not alone in his view. "Any attempt to write with a sense of human emotion is weak," he says, "because it is an abstraction of the human experience."

Meredith has published six volumes of poetry, the first of which was "For the Yale Form of Younger Poets." Other than his accomplishments in poetry, Meredith worked on a research basis at the Library of Congress, in an effort to research the influence of modern poetry on the United States.

Meredith is a poet of large scope, touching on a wide range of topics from philosophy to politics. His poetry is characterized by a sense of detachment and a questioning of traditional values.

"Today the media is very powerful. Many people in government are terrorized by it."

Biko family arrest protested

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) - The first anniversary of black nationalist Steve Biko's death in police custody passed Thursday without any public commemoration.

In the United States, a sharp protest was staged last weekend by groups of black students to draw attention to the brutal murder of the student leader.

The United States issued a sharp protest. But it was not until Monday in the Western Cape area, where Biko's home is, that anti-government demonstrations broke out.

In Washington, State Department spokesmen in the South Africa section of the Department of State, which handles refugee and human rights questions, were asked Tuesday by the United Nations to prevent the destruction of democracy in South Africa.

"I don't know what we're doing in South Africa. I don't know what's going on," said a member of the group of black students that staged the protest.

On Tuesday, the government announced that it would not grant a public inquiry into Biko's death and the family of the student leader has announced that it will demand a public inquiry.

"We cannot accept what the government has done," said the family's lawyer, Mr. J. H. L. Moolai, who represents the Biko family.

A three-bullet theory supported by tests

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Special to The Times

A three-bullet theory supported by tests was presented today in Los Angeles school board Chairman Bolden Miller and officials of the two Los Angeles school districts said they were审查 this theory.

Harkness explained at the meeting, a school board meeting, that the theory is one that has been discussed in some science circles for many years.

The theory is based on the idea that there are three bullets, not two, fired by Lee Harvey Oswald, and that all three bullets were found at the scene of the assassination.

In his presentation, Harkness said, "This theory is not new. It has been discussed for many years, but recently it has gained some attention because of the upcoming trials in the case of President Kennedy's assassination."
EPA ban of additive may up gas cost

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency has banned an additive called "MMT" which is used in about half of all unleaded gasoline, a step the industry and some environmentalists had long advocated.

EPA chief Douglas Copeland said he issued the ban — the first under a new section of the Clean Air Act — because MMT contributes to pollution by increasing hydrocarbon emissions.

Copeland said the ban will take effect March 1 and the agency is investigating whether to ban MMT or "octane boosters" produced entirely at refineries.

In the future you will be able to control your turntable from your own chair. The only way you'll touch the record is when you place it on the turntable. With your wireless transmitter, you will progress the order of selections on the record, repeat the songs you like and skip the ones you don't. You won't have to be caught accidently dropping the diamond stylus across a groove or two and damaging the record.
