Mid-air crash kills 140

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A commercial jetliner approaching San Diego's airport collided at 3,000 feet Monday with a light plane flown by a private pilot on an instrument training run, sending both craft crashing in flames into a quiet residential neighborhood.

At least 144 people were killed, making the crash America's worst air disaster. The dead included all 136 people aboard the Pacific Southwest Airlines commuter flight, the student pilot, his instructor and at least six people on the ground.

Police said five people were arrested on charges of looting, some trying to remove money and jewelry from the bodies of victims. Eight persons were taken into custody on charges of failing to disperse.

Flaming chunks of wreckage and bodies crashed through the roofs of buildings in the North Park section of San Diego. Many fires were touched off. Ten homes were leveled and five others were badly damaged. One two-story, eight-unit apartment building was left in ruins.

The light plane, a single engine Cessna 172, struck the jetliner's right wing. The PSA plane then slowly rolled over and plunged to earth. The Cessna crashed eight blocks away.

"I looked up and heard what sounded like a bomb," said Mrs. Joseph Alessio, a landlady who lives in the area. "Then I saw the tail end of the plane come off, and two objects fell from the plane. I guess the first was part of the tail and the second a person."

The victims aboard the Boeing 727 included a three-man cockpit crew and three flight attendants as well as 18 PSA first officers, flight engineers and flight attendants — all members of crews returning home from other flights.

The collision occurred at 9 a.m. PDT. Bodies were strewn on rooftops, front lawns, backyards, the sidewalks and streets. Parts of bodies were seen dangling from trees in the neighborhood five miles from the airport.

The Cessna had taken off from Montgomery Field, a general aviation airport, and was making an instrument landing at Lindbergh Field, the major airport for commercial flights. Marine Gunnery Sgt. David L. Boswell, 35, Oceanside, Calif., was at the controls and he was accompanied by an unidentified instructor. A Marine spokesman said Boswell had several pilot's licenses including one for commercial multi-engine aircraft. As for the casualties on the ground, an army of law enforcement officers and military personnel was at the scene, trying to determine which victims were passengers and which had been killed in their homes or on the street.

Police Chief Bill Kolender said of the ground victims: "There have been several. There was a child, some adults. We don't know how many for sure. The intense heat of the fires didn't leave much of anything."

One ground victim was identified as Darlene Watkins. Her brother, Sam Rush, said a piece of the flaming debris fell onto her home.

"My sister's lying there burned to death," Rush said. "She's all busted up and everything."

The Cessna was owned by the Gibbs Flying Service, and its owner, Bill Gibbs, said both Boswell and the instructor were "very experienced" fliers. Boswell joined the Marines in 1962 and was assigned to nearby Camp Pendleton in September 1977. He was married.

The death toll exceeded the fatalities in the worst previous U.S. aviation accident, a collision of two commercial planes over New York City in December 1960 when 134 persons died. The worst air disaster ever was the collision of two jumbo jets in Tenerife, Canary Islands, on March 22, 1977, when 582 died.

Lindbergh Field has been under criticism by pilots saying the eastern approach — a 1,000-foot-wide corridor — to the airport requires a sharp drop after clearing downtown San Diego.

There has been a battle for years over the building of a new airport in a safer area. Some wanted a global airport that would serve five southern California counties.

One of the witnesses to the inflight collision was Andy Russell who said: "I don't know why, but God, it seemed it took forever to fall."

Michael Guss, 19, a paramedic visiting from Belleville, Ill., said he saw the accident and then he saw a man jump from the Cessna. The man from the light plane, he said, was struggling with his parachute.

Then, Guss said, he saw two people fall from the jetliner, land on a car, go through the windshield and land on a woman and her baby. He said both the woman and the baby were killed.

"The small plane looked like it was ascending slightly at the same time the 727 was descending for its approach," said the Rev. James Clifford, a teacher at St. Augustine's Roman Catholic High School several blocks from the scene of the tragedy. "Right then I said, 'They look too close.' The next thing, they hit and exploded in a ball of fire."

"There were bodies lying everywhere," said Barry Fitzsimmons, a photographer for the San Diego Evening Tribune. "A block of homes was on fire. It was horrible. The only thing you could see of the plane was a PSA engine. All the other wreckage appeared to level the whole block."

A Federal Aviation Administration controller said the PSA pilot radioed the tower and said he was going down. An FAA spokesman said the jet was making its approach to Runway 27 under visual flight rules.

Begin appeals for surrender of Sinai

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin appealed to the people of Israel "with an aching and grieving heart" Monday to surrender Jewish settlements in the Sinai because "this is the road leading to peace."

But Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said President Carter's peace efforts may end in failure if Jordan and the Palestinians stay out of the negotiations.

"It could be that from this whole thing nothing will result," Dayan told a caucus of the coalition partner National Religious Party.

"Because Jordan won't go and representatives of the Palestinian Arabs won't want to come ... and Egypt won't want to make a separate agreement only on Sinai — they've said they don't want a separate agreement — it could be that we agree on all this and begin negotiations and never see a conclusion."

Giscard gov't loses

PARIS (UPI) — President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's center-right coalition suffered a severe political setback Monday by losing its fourth consecutive parliamentary by-election to the Left.

In the eastern steel and coal center of Nancy, Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber, leader of the Radical Party and former publisher of the news magazine L'Express, was defeated by Socialist candidate Yvon Tondon, 30,757 votes to 21,851.

Servan-Schreiber attributed his defeat to the "rising black tide of unemployment" and to the unpopularity of the government's austerity policies.

A woman's place is in the locker room

NEW YORK (UPI) — A federal judge ruled Monday that women sportswriters have a constitutional right to enter the locker room of the New York Yankees after a game to conduct interviews.

The decision by U.S. District Judge Constance Baker Motley struck down the effort by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and the Yankee management to maintain the clubhouse locker room as an all-male preserve.

Judge Motley ruled that the policy of total exclusion of women from the Yankee locker room does not violate the players' rights to privacy, but does deprive women sports writers of their rights to equal protection of the laws.

She suggested a number of ways, including the use of curtains, to shield players from the "roving eyes" of female reporters.

The ruling was made on the complaint filed last December by Melissa Ludtke, a baseball reporter for Sports Illustrated, who said she was barred solely on the basis of sex from entering the Yankee clubhouse after the World Series last year.

Patty is pled for WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., and Rep. Leo J. Ryan, D-Calif., Monday presented a formal petition asking President Carter to commute Patty Hearst's seven-year sentence for bank robbery to the time she has served in prison.

Miss Hearst was kidnapped by the Symbionese Liberation Army Feb. 4, 1974, and later became an urban guerrilla convert. She said she acted under duress. She was arrested Sept. 18, 1975, ending an intensive hunt by the FBI.

Hayakawa told Stanish Miss Hearst was a member of "a whole generation of young people" who were influenced by events of the 1960s. Hayakawa, the former president of San Francisco State said Hearst could not avoid being affected by such influence while living in Berkeley, Calif.

Hayakawa and Ryan presented the petition and a two-inch sheaf of supporting documents to pardon attorney John Stanish of the Justice Department.

Weather

Your weather staff is bullish on the climate these days, and with good reason. After watching our Vikings turn back the attempt to make it a Bears' market, 24-20, we decided to continue our Norsky summer: highs in the mid-70s and nearly clear skies. Valhalla, here we come.

A Pacific Southwest Airlines jet with 136 people aboard, its right wing afire, plunges toward a San Diego residential neighborhood Monday, only five miles short of the airport. The jet collided with a small plane at 3,000 feet. Everyone aboard the jet was killed, as were two people in the small plane and at least six people on the ground; the death toll may go higher.

Experts scoff at 'conspiracy'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tapping giant charts with wooden pointers, three teams of investigators Monday painstakingly presented evidence aimed at demolishing conspiracy theories about the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

But in testimony likely to encourage assassination buffs, one of the teams conceded it failed to reach agreement on a photo of what appears to be a man with a rifle atop the grassy knoll at the scene of the assassination.

The panels of photographic, anthropological and handwriting experts lectured the House Assassinations Committee classroom-style in the final week of a month-long series of public hearings on the 15-year-old assassination.

Dr. Bob Hunt, associate professor of optical sciences at the University of Arizona, said his team of photo experts rejected a picture said to show the shots came from the knoll opposite the Texas School Book Depository.

Using 4-by-3-foot color enlargements from Abraham Zapruder's amateur motion picture of the assassination, Hunt said what appears to be a man with a rifle was actually a trick of sunlight.

He similarly analyzed a section of the film showing what appears to be a man's head and the barrel of a rifle pointing through shrubs toward the presidential limousine.

He said experts who plotted the precise location of Zapruder and the motorcade concluded the head was of a man standing on the sidewalk and the rifle barrel was probably the limb of a shrub.

But Hunt's team failed to agree on the interpretation of a blurred picture from another amateur film showing what appears to be a man standing behind a parapet on the grassy knoll with something, perhaps a rifle, in his hands.

He said analysis indicated the existence of a man but the experts were divided over whether the object he held could be identified as a rifle. He said there was no sign of gunsmoke or muzzle flash in the photo.

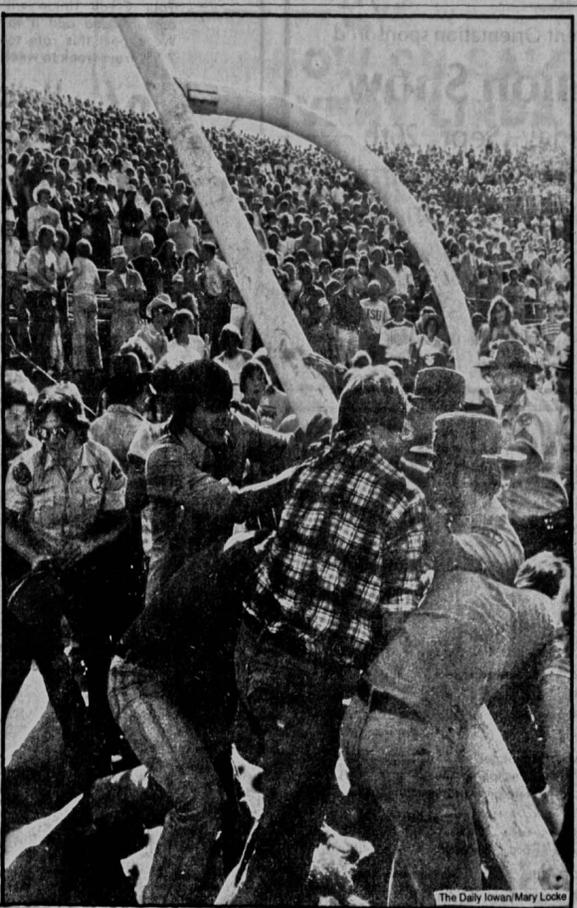

Goalposts are gonna rise again

UI maintenance crews Monday began the job of picking up the pieces from the aftermath of Saturday's football game in which both goalposts were torn down by exuberant Iowa State fans.

Both goalposts were seriously damaged, but UI maintenance personnel are confident they can rebuild one goalpost from the two that were brought down following the 31-0 Cyclone win. Athletic Director Bump Elliott explained that Iowa had two other goalposts to back up the two on the field before the Iowa-Iowa State game and replacing the two dismantled posts will not be a problem.

Hawkeye fans tore down the goalpost at the north end of the field after last year's 12-10 win; Iowa had ordered a goalpost at a cost of $1,400 in anticipation of the event. That new goalpost and a rebuilt version of the one torn down last year will be erected in Kinnick Stadium. The remake from last weekend's two posts should be ready as a back up in time for the Iowa-Utah game Oct. 7.

Elliott said that no one in the Iowa Athletic Department is upset about what happened and explained that it's simply "part of the game."

UI enrollment up, drop anticipated

By DENNIS FITZGIBBON Staff Writer

Enrollment at the UI this semester is up by 224 students over last year's total, according to figures released Monday by UI Registrar W.A. Cox.

The nearly 1 per cent increase brought this year's total to 22,990. It includes a 9.1 per cent increase in new freshmen enrollment, from 2,587 to 2,823, Cox said.

The figures show a continuing shift in the ratio of men to women on campus. The number of men slipped 1.4 per cent, from 12,510 to 12,333, while the number of women rose 3.9 per cent, from 10,256 to 10,657.

Enrollment at the UI is expected to level off soon and then begin falling, according to Ray Muston, associate dean of faculties. "We anticipate the enrollment will begin to fall by the early 1980s," he said.

The College of Engineering registered the largest increase in enrollment — 15.4 per cent — from 656 to 757. The largest decrease — 7.5 per cent — was in the College of Education, where enrollment fell from 1,410 to 1,312.

Enrollment at the other UI colleges for the fall 1978 semester, with the 1977 figures in parentheses, is: Business Administration 1,132 (1,146); Dentistry, 382 (375); Graduate, 5,557 (5,501); Law, 630 (625); Liberal Arts, 12,376 (12,317); Medicine, 1,238 (1,246); Nursing, 515 (497); and Pharmacy, 412 (403).

While the figures include part-time students, Cox said they do not include students enrolled in correspondence or off-campus extension courses.

Bakke starts med school as 100 picketers chant

DAVIS, Calif. (UPI) — Allan Bakke, the shy engineer who won a landmark Supreme Court "reverse discrimination" case, attended his first University of California medical school class Monday amid a noisy protest.

The baldish 38-year-old Vietnam War veteran emerged smiling from an automobile and hustled inside a lecture hall guarded by university police in street clothes. About 100 orderly picketers marched outside chanting anti-Bakke slogans.

"I'm glad to be here," the quiet-spoken Bakke told reporters. He seemed to pay no attention to the racially mixed group of demonstrators at this usually placid campus 15 miles west of Sacramento.

At his first and only class of the day, a biology lecture, Bakke was greeted and welcomed by both white and minority group classmates. One university official observed that throughout the emotion-wrenching legal case, Bakke "certainly has conducted himself as a gentleman."

Bakke, married and the father of two children, was denied admission to the university's Davis campus medical school in 1973 and 1974 while less qualified minority applicants were accepted under a special quota program.

Out of 100 student slots for the first year of medical school, 16 were set aside for minority candidates. The aim was to prefer minorities so they would further diversify the student body, Medical profession and would return to practice in minority neighborhoods.

In a case that went to the Supreme Court, Bakke argued that the quota system unfairly discriminated against whites.

Slings and arrows of outrageous fortune

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Lois Davidson has lived through more problems in the past two years than some people experience in a lifetime, but she is ready for some help.

The trouble began, Davidson said, while she and her husband were living happily on a poultry farm near Red Bay, Ala.

Her husband lost his arm in a mechanical compicker. The next year their new house, which had little insurance, burned to the ground.

She had to have a tumor removed from her pituitary gland and, in March, she had to have her thyroid gland removed. The next month she and her husband separated.

In May, Davidson was forced to resign her job because of health problems and a month later she and her husband obtained a divorce. In July, her pituitary gland failed.

While moving to Memphis the next month, her refrigerator was dropped out of a truck and her food freezer heated up and spoiled a year's worth of vegetables.

Her two-year-old daughter underwent a kidney operation.

This month, Davidson is in a Memphis hospital with a rare eye disease that may leave her sightless.

"Frankly, I could use a little help," she said from her hospital bed, where she is recovering from her fourth operation in 11 months.

Davidson, who worked as a teacher and social worker before her illnesses, said she gets $275 a month from her husband, but she has been unsuccessful in attempts to qualify for government aid.

"I first applied for Social Security benefits in Alabama," she said, "but I was rejected because somebody figured I could do some other kind of work like clerking in a store or waiting tables. Well, I don't mind working — in fact, I'd welcome it — but whoever turned me down didn't even mention my visual problems. You've got to see to do stuff like that."

Davidson said the Social Security office told her that her case is under review, but she is unsure what to do about her children — Lisa, 3, and Gary, 12, a son from a previous marriage (Davidson's first husband was killed in an automobile accident when she was 19).

"I can't figure out what to do," Davidson said. "My sister is taking care of my children. But what do I do when it's time to go home and I can't see?"

Somoza accepts U.S. mediation

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Nicaraguan officials said Monday President Anastasio Somoza Debayle has accepted the United States' offer to help arrange peace talks between him and his political opposition.

But the officials denied that roving U.S. Ambassador William Jorden, in Nicaragua as President Carter's special envoy, had asked Somoza to resign.

A communique issued after Jorden left for Panama following a meeting with Somoza Monday morning said the government had "accepted the friendly cooperation of the United States offered through Special Ambassador William Jorden for the purpose of helping in the search for peaceful solutions (of the Nicaraguan crisis) with the participation of interested political opposition groups."

The brief announcement by acting Foreign Minister Harry Bordan did not elaborate and American Embassy officials would not immediately comment. But observers noted that the phrase "interested political opposition groups" appeared to exclude negotiations with Sandinista guerrillas, whom the government calls terrorists.

Jorden arrived from Panama for his second round of talks with Somoza in three days. They met first on Saturday with Jorden flying off to Panama the weekend and returning on Monday.

Somoza's press secretary, Rafael Cano, denied reports that Jorden had asked Somoza to resign in response to demands by the business community, which is leading a general strike against the unpopular president's rule.

"That is false," he said, adding such a U.S. request would run counter to all public positions taken by the Carter administration. In Washington, a State Department official said Jorden was in Nicaragua "to discuss the matter of conciliation and mediation" and declined to say whether Jorden asked Somoza to resign.

"One of the purposes of mediation is to resolve conflict and I am not going to help resolve it by suggesting publicly what the resolution ought to be," the official said. "That is for the parties to decide."

Jorden, who earlier visited Venezuela, Panama and Costa Rica, will be reporting back to Carter at the end of his tour.

U.S. Embassy officials said Jorden met Somoza for about two hours in "the bunker" — the Nicaraguan leader's temporary living quarters in a National Guard compound — and then went immediately to the airport for a flight to Panama.

The officials said only that Jorden informed Somoza in general terms of the U.S. desire to see all possible avenues for mediation and negotiation explored.

In another development, the government-controlled National Radio said 95 per cent of the country's students and teachers returned to the classrooms without major incident, although five "troublemakers" tried to disrupt the National School of Commerce in the Las Brisas section of Managua.

The schools had been closed all last week.

Somoza's National Guard battled against Sandinista guerrillas for two weeks before recapturing all of Nicaragua's major cities and ending the full-scale civil war.

But the military victory did not ease widespread opposition from political leaders and businessmen, who have organized a nationwide general strike.

Most businesses in Managua reopened Monday but a leading member of the Chamber of Commerce said that action should not be interpreted as an end to the general strike and a capitulation to Somoza. The strike was reported holding firm in the provinces.

"There has been so much suffering, so much destruction, so many deaths, that we feel it would be inhuman to remain closed," said the Managua Chamber of Commerce member, who asked not to be identified for fear of government reprisals.

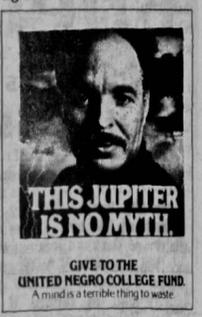

"We felt we should open at least for a few days to allow people to get necessities."

He predicted that all shops in Managua would reopen in the next two days for a "pause" in the organized opposition of the Somoza regime.

"But this is not a capitulation," he said. "There are many forms of struggle. We still support the Broad Opposition Front and we are waiting for the front to determine what the next action will be." In an effort to return the country to normal despite martial law, curfews and press censorship, the Education Ministry Monday ordered all schools to re-open.

But the curfew in Managua was again violated overnight with bomb blasts and several shooting incidents. Bursts of machine gun fire were heard in southeast Managua during daylight hours.

Council considers truck embargo

By JESS DeBOER Staff Writer

The sound of heavy trucks may soon be a thing of the past on Kirkwood Avenue.

The Iowa City Council responded to complaints by Kirkwood Avenue neighborhood residents about noisy and dangerous truck traffic and took the first step toward imposing a truck embargo on the street at the informal council meeting Monday.

The council instructed the city staff to find out how other cities have dealt with limiting truck traffic in residential areas and to draft an ordinance appropriate for the Kirkwood Avenue situation.

"Let's see what other cities have come up with," said Councilor Mary Neuhauser. "We're not the first city in the world with this problem."

Some 65 Kirkwood Avenue residents have petitioned the city to limit the truck traffic. Tas Anthony, 1004 Kirkwood Ave., the spokesman for the group, said the noise is keeping their children awake and wearing on the nerves of the elderly.

"We have people who are scared to death to back out of their driveways. If a semi (truck) is coming and doesn't see them, they're dead," Anthony told the council.

The group originally complained about trucks in the spring of 1977, when the council refused their request, but now the consensus of the council is that something has to be done.

"Kirkwood is one place where there is an alternative route," said Neuhauser. "We have to find a way to get the trucks to the (Highway 6) bypass. That's what the bypass is for."

City departments have disagreed about how necessary and practical the proposed embargo is.

Dennis Kraft, director of planning and program development, said in a memo to the council dated Sept. 15:

"Certainly it is more convenient for truck traffic to use Kirkwood Avenue, specifically because of the lack of signalization, however, it would seem both appropriate and consistent with the Comprehensive Plan to place a truck embargo on Kirkwood Avenue."

Richard Plastino, city public works director, said in a memo to the council dated Sept. 6 that traffic on Kirkwood Avenue would be difficult to limit because truck traffic goes to principal routes in cities. and comes from many places in the community. Law enforcement would also be difficult.

"This type of regulation is most effective only when a patrol car is assigned to the route and is actively handing out tickets. It can be anticipated that residents will constantly call for a patrol car to enforce the ordinance," Plastino's memo states.

Plastino said that Kirkwood Avenue carries only about 6 per cent truck traffic, while 10 per cent is not uncommon for

Crash highlights airport criticism

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — People who live in the flight path of jets arriving and leaving from Lindbergh Field have been fighting for years to have the city's international airport moved to a less-populated part of the county — citing foremost the noise and safety factors.

Monday's crash of a Pacific Southwest Airlines jet and the small plane with which it collided may add impetus to that battle which has just rekindled with a court trial scheduled in October.

The larger plane plowed into a residential neighborhood destroying more than a dozen homes, killing all 136 aboard and at least one person on the ground and injuring several others.

It was the first crash of a commercial plane in the vicinity of Lindbergh Field since it opened on Aug. 16, 1928. It was named for aviator Charles Lindbergh because his "Spirit of St. Louis" was built nearby.

Pilots have long commented about this being one of the trickiest landings in the country because of the steep descent to the field over downtown. The normal approach is over a vast residential area — scene of Monday's crash — the city's zoo and Balboa Park, then planes have to make a sudden drop over downtown skyscrapers to reach the field alongside San Diego Bay. The airport is less than two miles from the heart of town.

The airport's landing and takeoff corridors cut a wide swath through prosperous commercial areas as well as plush residential neighborhoods.

The airport had 78,839 takeoffs and landings in 1977, and recently the county's Comprehensive Planning Organization said Lindbergh would remain the county's major airport at least through 1995.

There's a $12 million terminal expansion program underway which will provide facilities for some of the several airlines which are seeking San Diego routes.

Many of the residents who live in the flight path have sued the airport for $100 million in damages, claiming the noise has devalued their property values by making life unbearable. They claim loss of appetite, loss of sex drive and that students attending schools in the flight path are unable to concentrate on their studies.

The airport operates under a midnight-to-6 a.m. curfew, banning most landings and all takeoffs as a concession to the residents nearby.

Several years ago the planning group had voted to relocate the airport to a barren area near the Mexican border, but later reconsidered and allowed the airport to remain.

The only fatal accident at Lindbergh Field involved an air taxi which crashed on takeoff Jan. 8, 1968 and killed the pilot and his two passengers.

Bostock case suspect charged

CROWN POINT, Ind. (UPI) — A first degree murder charge was filed Monday against a man accused of killing California Angels' outfielder Lyman Bostock with a shotgun blast aimed at the gunman's estranged wife.

Leonard Smith, 31, of nearby Gary, appeared briefly before Lake County Criminal Court Judge Andrew V. Giorgi, who set his next court appearance for Friday morning.

Leonard Smith, who was arrested a few hours after the shooting of Bostock in a car on a Gary street Saturday night, was held without bail in the Lake County Jail.

The Lake County prosecutor's office filed the first degree murder charge, which carries a penalty of 30 to 60 years. Leonard Smith was brought before Giorgi, who advised him of his constitutional rights, including the right to a lawyer.

The suspect told the judge his family had hired a private attorney and Giorgi postponed proceedings until 8:30 a.m. Friday.

Police investigators said Leonard Smith, who was arrested seven times on various charges between 1964 and 1974 but was convicted of none of them, was trying to kill his wife, Barbara, 26, who was riding in the back seat of a car with Bostock.

Bostock and Barbara Smith, who had filed for divorce two months ago, had met only minutes earlier at the home of her sister, Joan Hawkins, detectives said. Hawkins, whom Bostock had known for several years, was in the front seat of the car driven by Bostock's uncle, Thomas Turner, 43, who police said had helped raise the two girls.

Bostock, one of the highest paid players in baseball, was taken to St. Mary's Hospital after he was shot at point-blank range with a small gauge shotgun. Doctors worked on him for 3½ hours before he died at 1:30 a.m. Sunday.

Barbara Smith was hospitalized in fair condition with pellet wounds on her face.

Police Sgt. Robert Highsmith said Bostock, the American League's ninth leading hitter, was riding in the back seat of a car driven by his uncle, Thomas Turner of Gary, after the Angels were defeated 5-4 by the White Sox Saturday in Chicago.

"At Fifth and Jackson Streets the suspect pulled alongside and fired point blank into the car, apparently with a .410-gauge or a 20-gauge shotgun," he said.

Highsmith said Barbara Smith recognized the driver as her estranged husband, and apparently argued briefly with him before the shooting. Turner ran two stop lights to flee from the suspect, he said.

Office candidates to visit I.C.

Political activity in the Iowa City area will heat up this week when several candidates bring their acts to town.

Jerry Fitzgerald, Democratic candidate for governor, will begin the parade of politicians when he visits the UI today. Fitzgerald will eat at Burge Hall from 5-6 p.m. He will appear in Room 100, Phillips Hall at 8 p.m. to give a speech and answer questions.

On Wednesday, Tom Miller, Democratic challenger to Attorney General Richard Turner, will be appearing at the College of Law. The Iowa Student Bar Association has been trying to arrange a debate between Turner and Miller at 3 p.m., but Turner has yet to agree to the arrangements. If the debate is not held, Miller will be in the College of Law Lounge at 3 p.m. to speak to students and to answer questions.

Gov. Robert Ray will visit Iowa City Thursday to participate in a campaign rally for local Republican legislative candidates at the Union.

The rally will begin at 3:30 p.m. in the Wheel Room, and Ray is scheduled to appear with House candidates Wes Dunbar, Dale Hibbs and Mike Jones and Senate candidate Vic Woolums. Johnson County Republican Chairman Dan Nolan said that there will be no political speeches at the rally; rather, the candidates will meet with the voters.

On Friday, First Lady Rosalynn Carter will stop in Cedar Rapids to campaign for Rep. Mike Blouin on her way to Ames for the Jefferson-Jackson dinner.

In Cedar Rapids, Carter will visit the Lincoln Congregate

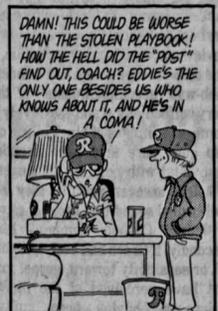

Meal Site and then appear at a fundraising luncheon for Blouin at the Town House Motor Inn.

To end the week of political fervor, Wes Dunbar's campaign staff will meet the Daily Iowan staff in a co-ed softball game at 2 p.m. in Mercer Park.

Challenge to Soviets

While the attention of Americans has been focused on Jimmy Carter's Camp David-Mideast summitry, the turmoil of southern Africa and the collapse of the Boston Red Sox, war has continued inexorably in Ethiopia, where the success of Soviet presence in Africa may be largely determined.

The war is not a recent development. Secessionist rebels in the northern province of Eritrea have been struggling for independence since the early '60s, even when the ancient kingdom of Abyssinia was ruled by patriarchal Haile Selassie and his nation was an ally of the United States. But the war has heated up and taken on special significance since his death. A nominally Marxist government, supported and supplied by Cuba and the Soviet Union, has attempted, so far without success, to crush the rebellion once and for all.

This has created an uneasy situation for the Soviets. Not only is the Soviet Union wary of involvement because of the American experience in Southeast Asia but its support of the regime of Col. Mengistu Haile Miriam places it in the rather hypocritical position of opposing a popular liberation movement. Hence, the Soviets have pressured Miriam to seek a negotiated settlement with the rebels of the Eritrean Liberation Front (ELF) and the Eritrean People's Liberation Front (EPLF).

Such a settlement seems unlikely. The protracted war has caused such bitterness that compromise is improbable and reconciliation impossible. The revolutionary forces have not retreated from their demands for unconditional independence while Miriam's power, and the prospects for the perpetuation of his revolutionary government, would be diminished by capitulation to the rebels.

And yet the situation cries out for a solution. Miriam launched an all-out offensive against the rebels last spring but has succeeded only in driving the liberation forces into the mountains where the ELF and EPLF factions have consolidated and will be difficult to dislodge. The rebels, after nearly two decades of fighting, appear content to bide their time, striking in scattered guerrilla actions and disrupting supply lines.

The government can't afford to wait another two decades for the conflict to be resolved. It is pouring the nation's resources into the war at a time when drought is threatening mass starvation throughout the country and Somalia waits to the south, eyeing the contested Ogaden province that was the scene of a border war last year. In addition, the concentration of military effort in Eritrea has allowed new uprisings to begin throughout the country.

Miriam has attempted to win over the population of captured areas of Eritrea by rushing in food supplies and directing the army to aid in rebuilding, but these gestures have apparently failed to reverse the effects of a generation of hostility. Meanwhile the war's pricetag, already estimated to have surpassed $1.5 billion, grows by as much as $2 million per day.

The situation presents the Soviets with a major challenge. Their attempt to gain a foothold along the Red Sea and the Horn of Africa has drawn them into longstanding conflict. While they have not yet become fully involved militarily, chances of an early negotiated settlement seem slim. If they can salvage some kind of settlement, they will have scored a major triumph in Africa. If they fail, their intention of gaining strategic influence on the continent will have suffered a crippling setback. In either case, it's a situation worth watching.

Lethargy in the American steel industry

No concert hall performer, no rock musician is more sensitive to his work environment than our American businessman. Any criticism of the established order affects "confidence" and without confidence business slumps. On the other hand, businessmen fret, complain, grouse, moan, kvetch, fuss and bitch as no prima

ballerina would dare. The most temperamental operatic diva is less demanding than the tycoonate of industry and the mogulia of finance.

If it isn't thoughtless consumers insisting they get what they paid for, it's labor unions, or government regulations, or foreign exchange that is irritating the leaders of business and industry. Either the tariff is too high or too low, the interest rates too small or too large, the cash flow too wide or too narrow; something is always wrong in the finicky eyes of these conductors of the nation's prosperity.

The latest lamentations are over America's lagging rate of innovation. (Innovation is a pompous word used by businessmen when trying to sound oracular. Innovation means the same thing.)

We Americans aren't inventing widgets at the same rate we used to. Since nobody knows what the rate is, the financiers and government officials making statements about it are letting their words be guided by their subjective impressions.

Nevertheless, our upper drawer people are worried lest the Germans and Japanese out-invent us. But if we may be losing our total technological dominance of the world, it would not be surprising. The dominance has only existed since the beginning of the second world war. It came about through the contributions of refugee scientists and the fact that the societies we are most competitive with had been knocked flat. We not only ended the war richer and in one piece but in possession of our former enemies' science and scientists. We would have had to be classic dumbbells not to have become supreme.

Since then in some industries we've slipped from leading to world to becoming a backward nation. The most notable is steel. Japan is so much ahead of us that it can import the raw materials and fuel to make it from thousands of miles away and still undersell Ohio steel manufacturers who get their supplies from Minnesota and West Virginia.

The reason for this is that the American steel industry spends next to nothing on research and development. Last year the U.S. Steel Corporation, once the pride of American capitalist technology, spent slightly less than $50 million on R & D. That may sound like a lot but it was $30 million less than what Bristol-Myers spent and they make toothpaste.

The figure shows U.S. Steel hasn't even made an effort to stay technologically abreast of its foreign competitors. It devoted one half of 1 per cent of its sales to R & D or about $300 per employee or 36 per cent of its profits. Compare that to Tonka Toys. Yup, they're the people who make those nice little trucks and fire engines for the kiddypoos. Tonka, that tech giant, devoted almost 2 per cent of its sales to R & D or $698 per employee or a sum equal to 412 per cent of its profits. Is it any wonder that the last major invention to come from the steel industry was the pop top can?

The fuel industry did scarcely better. Its R & D effort as a percentage of its total sales was about one fourth of the average of all industry's. So much for the millions spent on televised propaganda messages about how the oil industry is working day and night in the labs to bring us new, cheap, non-polluting and inexhaustible sources of fuel. Either they're just funning us or all those oil corporation employees are doing the research on their own time without billing the company. Some of the innovation lost in product development has been applied to thinking up reasons for why more money isn't being spent on inventions. Excuse number one is that R & D money has to go into thinking up ways to satisfy government health and safety regulations; reason number two is that taxes are too high to justify risking money on perfecting a new idea; reason number three is that even if they do come up with a good idea, the government will prosecute them under the anti-trust act if they try to make a little money out of it.

Then there are two possible reasons that businessmen don't mention. By not spending money now the taxpayers can be blackmailed into paying for R & D later. That's how the atomic power industry paid for its development costs. And finally, who needs it? Just keep Japanese steel out of the country; then give our fellows bellows and two strong arms and we'll make you all the horseshoes you'll ever want.

Frightening

Mayor Frank Rizzo of Philadelphia is no enigma. His public pronouncements lack of intricacy and obfuscation expected of politicians; he always speaks directly to the point. And since, in his current try for a third term as the City of Brotherly Love's mayor he is encouraging his constituents to "vote white," Frank Rizzo's message is clear.

Rizzo faces some large obstacles in his race for another term. Not the least of these is the city charter, which limits mayors to two terms. Last spring, he humbly announced that he would abide by the charter, bid a bittersweet farewell to city hall and assume the role of national spokesman for the "white minority." But Rizzo changed his mind — perhaps he reflected that mayors get reserved parking places and national spokesmen for non-existent (or at least miscalculated) ethnic groups don't. Now Rizzo has expressed the fear that without his firm hand on the wheel, the city would collapse within a fortnight. (What's a paltry thing like a city charter when civic annihilation is at hand?)

But in the nuclear age, the end of the world is a rather tired issue, so Rizzo knew he'd have to sweeten the pot. And he knew just how to do it — he'd done it successfully twice before. He has begun making gratuitous, insulting references to black people. The Philadelphia press, being the Philadelphia press, eats it up, and Rizzo feeds it to them with a spoon. "...Keep on writing that black stuff," he has been quoted as saying to reporters, "it gets me votes everyday."

And, of course, it isn't just the black people. Everyone trying to prevent the amendment of the city charter to allow Rizzo a third term is a radical. "This is an election," he darkly intones, "between social extremists and social radicals against the people who live within the law." And Frank Rizzo lives within the law — he just wants to change it when the mood strikes him.

But the most incredible facet of Rizzo's current campaign lies in the following quote, in reference to his opponents: "They try to frighten people, but they don't frighten me."

It is amazing that Frank Rizzo should even consider making the observation, in an accusatory tone, that someone is trying to frighten people after he has mightily striven to bring racial and social tensions to the point of combustion simply to maintain himself in office. And what is more amazing is that he has a good chance of success.

Rizzo has wide, deep, fervent public support, and he has cultivated that support through an overtly racist approach. He may stumble in his attempt to get the charter amended — his various enemies may in combination have the power to thwart him, but there is a question whether they can act in harmony on anything, including the defeat of Frank Rizzo. And even if he does lose his post as mayor, he has mentioned with obvious relish the prospect of running for governor of Pennsylvania, a race he'd have a good chance of winning. Then he'd have a whole state, not just a city, to tell ghost stories to.

The style Rizzo uses was perfected in the South, but has passed into disuse there lately. No less a pillar of segregation than Sen. Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.) has begun to appeal directly to black voters, knowing increased black voter registration there has made any other approach suicidal. Rizzo doesn't have to worry about that. No matter how high black voter registration figures get in Philadelphia, he has enough fearful ethnics to draw from to win. Anyone who thought racial politics died with the creation of the "New South" is tragically wrong. It isn't dead; it's spreading.

THE LATEST FROM FUN CITY: NEW YORK CITY DOG-SCOOPING LAWS ARE NOW IN EFFECT.

To the Editor:

I respectfully submit this letter in an effort to express how sick and tired I am of insensitive, narrow-minded and ethnocentric "so-called" critics defining for black people what is acceptable and unacceptable about their art. I am speaking specifically, in this instance, about the review of the Hancher Auditorium performance of The Wiz.

I too must sadly state that I enjoyed some of The Wiz, but not all of it, although, it seems, for exactly the opposite reasons as those of your "illustrious" drama critic. I had previously seen The Wiz twice in Chicago, although, unhappily, not in New York. Some things of which your staff writer, Judith Green, seems callously not to have been aware are the obvious facts that Iowa City is not Broadway, Hancher Auditorium is not the Majestic Theater in New York, nor is a road company a Broadway cast.

What your not-too-widely traveled critic perceived as a "super-charged...energy level" was, in my mind, a disturbingly low energy level. The initial dance scene of the play, with the "woman trailing about 20 yards of black cloth" was my first disappointment of the evening after having observed at the Shubert Theater in Chicago a virtual explosion during the tornado ballet, in which Dorothy's house was twirled and spun almost continuously throughout the dance, the entire stage was entwined with the trailing black ribbon, thereby evoking a true feeling of "tornado," and at one point the female dancer appeared almost miraculously astride the top of Dorothy's house. This was not your classical ballet, yet no one with any appreciation of the black dance form would perceive of it as a "confused tangle" of "dancers jumping up and down."

The costumes and color schemes which appalled your staff writer so much, seemed, to this mind, quite appropriate given the fact that The Wiz is a fantasy and some of the color schemes were truly fantastic. The Emerald City was one of the more awe-inspiring sets at the Shubert Theater and somehow failed to be as impressive on Hancher's stage. The Emerald City gate, for example, was much more elaborately designed than the "aqua, kelly green, emerald green and yellow" curtain which Judith and I saw from the orchestra seats in Monday night's performance. Could not such a problem be an unfortunate disadvantage imposed by nature upon traveling companies? The "entourage of a dozen chiffon-draped dancers" who were in the final dance scene of the play was another of my disappointments. Perhaps the restrictions imposed by the dimensions of the stage caused this otherwise impressive finale — reminiscent, in my thinking, of the court of a medieval African chief with all of its gala colors and pomp — to fall somewhat short of the majesty which it had possessed on the Shubert stage. Nevertheless, Green seems to have again missed the fact that The Wiz is a black interpretation of The Wizard of Oz and not a mere remake of The Wizard of Oz.

The unfortunate comments about the music in The Wiz indicated to me that Judith Green's lack of exposure to black culture is so great that perhaps she should never again be permitted to review another black production, for how can one criticize what one doesn't understand? The "ooh-wah" accompaniments" of the pit singers very effectively (and positively) evoked for some of us images of black music of the '50s, as I am quite sure they were intended to do. My complaint with both the pit singers and the orchestra, however, was that they lacked the rich, full-bodied sound that the orchestra and singers with the Chicago company had possessed. Secondly, if Green had even a slight appreciation of, or sensitivity toward, gospel music she could not have perceived of the individual singer-actors as having been guilty of "vocal elaboration so florid that melodies (were) obliterated" for she would have known intellectually, since she couldn't feel intuitively, that black music is not based on melody in the classical sense, but on repeated refrains and rhythms in a more traditionally African sense.

Charles Lockett

All that jazz

To the Editor:

Several weeks ago, I stopped in at radio station WSUI to express my sincere concern over the demise of Mark Solomon's late-night jazz show,

"Cathexis." I spoke to Mr. John Monnick, whose supercilious attitude turned me off in the same hasty way I have been turning the radio off whenever one of your so-called "jazz shows" comes on the air.

One of the great things about Mark Solomon's show was that it helped me to keep abreast of new contemporary jazz record releases. Like many other people, I have a limited recording budget, and I like to hear records before I buy them if at all possible.

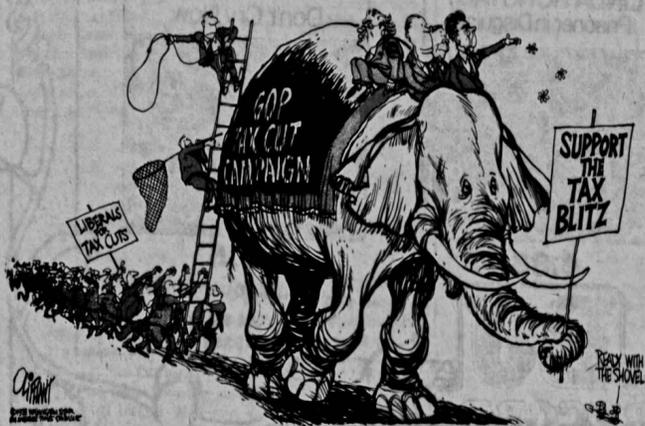

Solomon's show was multi-faceted in its wide exposure of recordings ranging from mainstream to avant garde. Although some limitations were placed on him by the unavailability of certain recordings from the WSUI library, Solomon nevertheless helped listeners such as myself fill in the gaps in their listening background with recordings from the forties, fifties and sixties, as well as more recent recordings.

On the other hand, the "Jazz and Jim" show, which has replaced "Cathexis," is primarily a dated, lily-white, milktoast, middle-of-the-road jazz show. I am not simply saying this because John Coltrane, Cecil Taylor, Jackie McLean and Ornette Coleman are overlooked by this show, but because Jim Dougherty consistently overlooks even the most solid mainstream artists of the last three decades, such as Dexter Gordon, Gene Ammons, Art Blakey, Charles Mingus and Wes Montgomery.

I recently read a "National Jazz Survey" of jazz radio shows in the publication Radio Free Jazz. Each participating station listed the jazz albums to which they had been giving the most airplay. Well, in Lexington, Ky., for example, if you turn on WBKY, you might hear Rashawn Roland Kirk; in Davidson, N.C., it's Ron Carter and Chick Corea; in Lawrence, Kans., Charlie Parker, Oscar Peterson and Flora Purim are the order of the day; you can hear Charles Mingus and Yusef Lateef in Ypsilanti, Mich; and in Oxford, Ohio (wherever that is), the sounds of Woody Shaw and Phil Woods come out over the airwaves.

But in Iowa City, you'll have to settle for Mel Torme, Buddy Rich, Woody Herman, Stan Kenton, Harry James, the Glenn Miller Band and Louis Bellson. Ho-hum.

The big question is, how much will it hurt?

Wisdom teeth: a lot like taxes, death

By GAYLE BECKER
Staff Writer

Laurie Betzer, a first-year medical student, left the UI Dental Clinic in July feeling great after having all four wisdom teeth removed. But within five hours the sedation began wearing off, and she realized the ordeal wasn't over.

Two hours of surgery to remove four impacted teeth, two of which had wrapped their roots around nerves, has left Betzer with enormous swollen jaws and numbness in the lower right corner of her chin.

According to Dr. Alex Acevedo, associate professor in oral surgery, pain and swelling can be expected for all patients who have wisdom teeth — named because they usually appear in the late teens and usually referred to as third molars by dental professionals — removed.

"We can't predict the magnitude," he said. "It varies from person to person."

"Pain depends on many factors — complexity of surgery, position of wisdom teeth, length of time the person has waited before removal and the behavioral patterns of the person after surgery," said Dr. Glenn Jacobsen, a local dentist.

But there is also the possibility of complications, such as numbness in the lip or chin areas, as in Betzer's case.

"Paresthesia is an abnormal sensation of the lip. It's a tingling feeling — like the anesthesia hasn't worn off," Acevedo explained. "It's not permanent, though. The time element may involve three to four weeks or up to nine months for some."

The numbness, which Acevedo said may only occur in two or three cases in 700, results from just the slightest pressure from the root on the nerve when the tooth is being removed.

"The most common complication, probably occurring in 6-10 per cent of the cases, is dry sockets," Acevedo said. "A clot doesn't organize after the tooth is removed. The socket's not protected and the bone is exposed to air, causing pain in the ear or temple area."

To help the healing, a dressing is placed on the socket. "The dressing does what the clot should have done," Acevedo said.

Most people need to have their wisdom teeth removed because there usually isn't enough room in the mouth to accommodate wisdom teeth, according to Acevedo. As man evolved, he said, the mouth became smaller in proportion to the rest of the body. He said a set of fourth molars have disappeared.

Jacobsen added that only a minority, about 5 per cent, have room for their wisdom teeth.

One local private oral surgeon, Dr. Edward Lorse, said everyone eventually needs to have his or her wisdom teeth removed. He also asserted that the earlier surgery is done the better, because side effects are "diminished if the wisdom teeth are removed early. Usually by the age of 17, 18, or 19, the wisdom teeth have successfully erupted and should be taken out."

Lorse and Acevedo both said removal of the third molar later in life can cause problems for the patient.

Lorse noted that if surgery is delayed "insidious problems can occur such as gum infection — though it's low grade — and subsequent bone damage."

However, Acevedo encouraged surgery between the ages of 17-25 for another reason.

"Twenty-two to 25 is the ideal age for surgical removal of the third molar. There usually are no systemic problems such as heart conditions or diabetes. It's easier to remove the third molar when the patient is younger, because the bone is not as hard, the patient tolerates the procedure better and also heals faster."

How does one know when wisdom teeth need to be removed if he or she hasn't been told so by a dentist?

"Around the age of 19, 20, or 21 the wisdom teeth start to develop. The person will notice a problem and continue to have problems if it's not taken care of," Acevedo said.

Lorse said, "If they need to be taken out, the person will have symptoms of pain, swelling or stiffness of the jaw. Those symptoms would drive them to care."

The bulk of third molar problems, Acevedo said, occur when the wisdom teeth erupt halfway. "The tooth opens into the oral cavity, food collects around the molar and can be a source of infection," he said.

Another reason for removal of the third molars is to prevent the development of a cyst, a sac of fluid that develops after surrounding tissue "flowers" around the growing molars. Cysts occur only if the molars do not erupt and become impacted. While there is less chance of infection — usually caused because brushing wisdom teeth is difficult — the tissue around the tooth can develop a cyst.

"The trouble with a cyst is that it grows bigger," Acevedo said. "People say their tooth isn't bothering them, but there's a potential for a cyst."

Although a cyst may not develop right away and only occurs in about 10 per cent of cases, according to Acevedo, if not taken care of the cyst can grow to large proportions. X rays have shown that some have grown almost as large as the entire lower gum area.

The upper wisdom teeth pose less of a problem than the bottom ones during removal, Acevedo said.

"There are fewer problems of infection because of the anatomy of the upper wisdom teeth. There is no food impaction from gravity as on the bottom and the bone isn't as hard on top," he explained.

Acevedo said there is a chance of infection in the sinuses and the tissue there would have to be closed. But he said that most infection problems occur when the bottom molars are removed.

Acevedo's policy is to "remove the top wisdom teeth if the bottom ones are removed because there's nothing for the upper ones to function with. We may let the top wisdom teeth erupt a bit before removal, but only on selective cases."

Lorse encourages his patients to have them removed all at once also. "It's easier for me to do it that way. But it also depends a lot on the degree of difficulty and the skill of the individual operator."

A screening appointment is a necessary part of UI Dental Clinic procedure, Acevedo said.

He said it is impossible to make an estimate of total costs of wisdom teeth removal because of such variables as the amount of anesthesia used and time spent in surgery. Betzer's bill, including about 10-12 pre- and post-surgery visits, was $125. Normally, however, a patient will have only a few post-operative checkups.

An appointment is set up on a day prior to the surgery, at which complications that may arise and what will be happening during surgery will be explained.

But most importantly, Acevedo said, it is necessary to "establish a base line for vital signs." Blood pressure and pulse must be taken in advance to determine what is normal for each person.

Although no one but a dentist can tell if a person needs to get his or her wisdom teeth removed, the responses vary as do the reasons for having the surgery done.

"The subject's not black and white in terms of 'if' and 'when' wisdom teeth should be removed," Acevedo said. "Oral surgeons differ in their practice. You have to consider what's best for the patient."

ICLU opposes censorship of school library books

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (UPI) — A proposal to remove books deemed sexist or racist from school libraries would be censorship that does more harm than good, the Iowa Civil Liberties Union said Monday.

"The Civil Liberties Union is and always has been sympathetic to the feelings of groups in our society that have been victimized by offensive and often damaging stereotypes," said ICLU Executive Director Steve Brown. "However, we also strongly hold the view that exposure and education, not suppression, is the proper antidote for potentially harmful ideas in a free society."

Brown made the statement prior to appearing before the Cedar Rapids School Board to state the ICLU's opposition to a proposal pending before a committee of the board that would lead to the removal of more than 100 books from the shelves of elementary school libraries.

Clark accuses Jepsen of misleading Iowa voters

DES MOINES (UPI) — Democratic Sen. Dick Clark Monday accused his Republican challenger, Roger Jepsen, of misleading Iowa voters with inconsistent statements about his views on tuition tax credits.

Clark released the transcript of an interview Jepsen had April 14 with George Brown of the Iowa State Education Association, which was to be used later in deciding political endorsements by IPACE, the political arm of the teachers' organization.

In that interview, Jepsen said he would not favor tax credits for persons paying tuition to elementary, secondary or higher-level educational institutions — a marked departure from Jepsen's recent statements, which have chastised Clark for opposing tuition tax credit legislation in Congress.

"Mr. Jepsen has said that my record is the only issue in this race. But that is not true," Clark said.

"Another important issue is Mr. Jepsen's record. In this case, I think Mr. Jepsen should explain to the people of Iowa why he appears to be telling people what they want to hear on this issue and why either of his statements on it should be trusted more than the other."

Jepsen began his attack on Clark's stand on the tax credit issue during an appearance in Dubuque earlier this month. Dubuque is heavily Catholic and Jepsen aimed his remarks at the parents of parochial school pupils.

He repeated his criticism of Clark last week, contending the rising costs of education add impetus to the push for tax credits, and endorsed the tax credit concept in a letter printed in the newsletter of the Iowa Catholic Conference on Sept. 12.

Reached at a fundraiser in Greene County, Jepsen first said the transcript of the ISEA interview, given to Clark's campaign staff by an ISEA member, "is in error or the question was not clear to me."

However, he later told UPI the transcript was correct and blamed the inconsistency on the "hectic" pace of his campaign schedule the day of the interview.

"It was an intensive and involved interview, we were behind time and when we left, my wife did question my answer about that," Jepsen said. "In any event, my record is clear and I think I did misspeak in that interview... I do remember answering that in the opposite from what I should have said."

Senior lobby lauds Clark votes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, has received the Award of Merit of the National Council of Senior Citizens for his support of legislation affecting the elderly.

The council, which presents the award to one senator and one representative each year, chose Clark for his "distinguished record for advocacy and achievement on behalf of senior citizens," said Executive Director William R. Hutton.

"Senator Clark has been in the forefront of efforts to improve the quality of life of older Americans since he was first elected to the Senate in 1972," Hutton said, adding the Iowa Democrat has held a 100 per cent rating for backing council priorities.

Iowa works on offensive line

Iowa Coach Bob Commings, disappointed in the Hawkeyes' inability to move the ball against Iowa State, said he'll make some changes in the offensive line before the Hawkeyes journey to Arizona this weekend.

"Somewhere we've got to find people who will block consistently," Commings said. "It's almost to the panic stage trying to find someone who will block. We've got to make changes this week in the offensive line and experiment at a few other positions."

Iowa mounted only one sustained drive in Saturday's 31-0 loss to the Cyclones and finished with a weak 140 yards total offense. The fifth-year coach said the Hawkeyes will have to improve their blocking this week before they take a 1-1 record to Tucson to face the Arizona Wildcats, 2-1.

Commings said he called 24 pass plays against Iowa State, but only 11 passes were thrown. Poor blocking prevented the quarterbacks, who were four of 11, from following through on the other pass plays he explained.

"Iowa State made the big plays and they did very little wrong all day," Commings said, summing up the defeat. "We've got to figure out a way to move the football consistently if we expect to win."

Iowa worked out for 90 minutes Monday preparing for the Saturday night game with Arizona.

Sooners claim top spot

NEW YORK (UPI) — Oklahoma, combining a 66-7 drubbing of Rice with Alabama's upset loss to Southern California, took over the nation's No. 1 ranking from the Crimson Tide Monday in the UPI Board of Coaches college football ratings.

In the first change in the top spot since Alabama was named No. 1 in pre-season, Oklahoma received 25 first-place votes to seven for runner-up Southern Cal. The Sooners, No. 2 last week, totaled 558 points to 516 for the Trojans. The top five teams were closely bunched this week.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The United Press International Board of Coaches' top 25 college football ratings, with first-place votes and won-lost records in parentheses:

Team	Points
1. Oklahoma (25) (3-0)	558
2. So. Calif. (7) (3-0)	516
3. Michigan (3) (2-0)	499
4. Arkansas (3) (2-0)	461
5. Penn St. (1) (4-0)	450
6. Texas (2-0)	372
7. Alabama (2-1)	286
8. Texas A&M (2-0)	280
9. Florida St. (3-0)	194
10. Pittsburgh (2-0)	184
11. LSU (2-0)	156
12. Nebraska (2-1)	116
13. Maryland (3-0)	101
14. Colorado (3-0)	98
15. Ohio St. (1-1)	86
16. Iowa St. (3-0)	84
17. Missouri (2-1)	54
18. Kentucky (1-0-1)	22
19. Stanford (2-1)	20
20. Purdue (2-0)	19

Note: By agreement with the American Football Coaches Association, teams on probation by the NCAA are ineligible for top 20 and national championship consideration by the UPI Board of Coaches. Those teams currently on probation are: Michigan State, Oklahoma State and Grambling.

Packers, Prothro said it would be difficult to recover, but said he hoped things would get better.

"We're just not ready to play," he said. "It doesn't look like we can come back from a 1-3 start, but it's a long season and things can turn around."

The Cardinals were given a third-round draft choice in 1980 by the Chargers as compensation, and agreed to allow Coryell out of the release stipulation.

Coryell had compiled a 42-27-1 record in five years with St. Louis.

Oklahoma's victory against an overmatched Rice team made the Sooners' strength difficult to judge and they were less than an overwhelming choice.

Southern Cal, 2-0, made the most significant jump, climbing five places from last week after a surprisingly one-sided 24-14 triumph at Alabama, which fell to No. 7.

No. 3 Michigan, after an impressive 28-14 victory at Notre Dame, narrowly trailed Southern Cal and close behind was No. 4 Arkansas and No. 5 Penn State.

Arkansas, 2-0, beat Oklahoma State 19-7 while Penn State won its fourth game without a loss, 26-21 over Southern Methodist. Texas, 2-0, remained in the sixth position following a 17-3 victory over Wyoming.

Prothro resigns; Coryell takes over job

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The San Diego Chargers went through their first workout Monday under new Head Coach Don Coryell in the wake of the resignation of Tommy Prothro.

Coryell, former head coach of the St. Louis Cardinals, took over the reins of the Chargers earlier in the day after the 58-year-old Prothro announced his resignation.

Prothro said he told Charger owner Gene Klein when he was signed to a new contract last winter that he would coach for only one more year. However, Prothro said the Chargers' disappointing start this year caused him to resign immediately.

The Chargers are 1-3 this season. They lost to Denver and Oakland and were routed by the Green Bay Packers Sunday.

"I still believe this is a good football team," Prothro said,

"and it is a playoff contender. However, after disappointing losses to Oakland and Denver and a disaster yesterday against Green Bay, I feel a fresh approach and a rude awakening is what this team needs. For this reason I am resigning today."

"I hope the team will not think I am quitting on them or have lost confidence in them. They are a tremendous group of people that I have thoroughly enjoyed coaching. I take this action only because I want it to be in the best interest of the team."

Intramural football officials needed

The UI Intramural Department is seeking officials for flag football with an organizational meeting scheduled for Wednesday, Sept. 27, at 5 p.m. in Room 201 of the Field House.

The position is open to both men and women and available immediately. For more information please stop by Room 111, Field House, or call 353-3494.

UI Soccer Club dumps UNI

The UI Soccer Club scored a 3-0 shutout over Northern Iowa to boost its Eastern Iowa Soccer League record to 2-1.

Amir Behbahani, Rejvani Hessam and Valdir Jose Barbanti scored Iowa's three goals while Per Gyllstrom and John Newlin added solid midfield performances. Goalie Peter White recorded his first shutout of the fall season.

The UI club will journey to Waterloo this Sunday to take on the Waterloo Soccer Club in another EISL match.

Sailors take third place

The UI Sailing team went to Oshkosh, Wis., this weekend and came home with third place and low-point "A" division trophies. There was a stiff wind and close competition throughout the meet and a protest by Marquette University against the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh resulted in a Marquette win. That set the Oshkosh branch in a tie with Iowa for second, but the host team was awarded second on the basis of most first places. Iowa "A" skipper Scott Jones, with crew Mary Howard, managed to get the low-point trophy by one point. Sailing "B" division for Iowa were Hal Heath, Tianne Sommer and Jim Shumar.

Marquette had 21 points with Oshkosh and Iowa posting 23 totals. Northern Illinois and the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay were next with 34 and 48 points.

Iowa will compete in another sailing regatta this weekend at Michigan.

UI Water Polo sinks Iowa State

Martin Craig scored five goals and teammate Mike Hurley added four; more as the UI Water Polo Club scored a 15-9 win over Iowa State Saturday in the Field House pool.

The Iowa squad got off to an early start scoring their initial goal 30 seconds into the meet to record their first victory in as many outings. Iowa will enter an eight-team tournament Friday and Saturday at Southeast Missouri State College before hosting Illinois in an Oct. 7 match scheduled for 10 a.m.
