KORCHNOI won't be back

"I'm afraid it was no more than a company," Korchnoi said to the Soviet News Agency. "It was not a game of chess."

Korchnoi's angry words have been interpreted by some as a sign of the end of the Soviet chess champion's career. The strained relationship between Korchnoi and Karpov has been well documented in the past months.

The two Soviet chess champions have been embroiled in a dispute over the last several months. Korchnoi has been accused of interfering with Karpov's training and preparations for the upcoming World Chess Championship. Korchnoi's defection from the Soviet team has raised questions about the future of Soviet chess.

In other developments, Korchnoi's threatened suspension from the Soviet chess federation has been withdrawn. The suspension was announced earlier this month as a result of Korchnoi's refusal to participate in the upcoming World Chess Championship.

Police beat

The man, who was identified as John Doe, and the woman, Jane Doe, were found in possession of illegal substances and were arrested.

The investigation is ongoing and further details will be released as they become available.
Kennedy: Tax cuts for middle class

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate's resurgence of the tax-cut drive, which had been expected to run into the ground by the House Republican leadership, was both a surprise and a relief for the Democratic mayor of Washington, D.C., who had been fighting to keep his city's budgets on track.

A tax cut would help the city's $50,000-per-year businesses, said Mayor Tony Williams, who had been under pressure to balance the city's books.

Tax cuts, he said, would be a "sunset" legislation that would end if the economic situation deteriorated. The mayor said he was ready to push for tax cuts despite the protests from the House Republican leadership.

"The Senate is doing the right thing," Williams said. "We need to give people a break, and a tax cut is the way to do it."

Conflower of Iowa Myth returns to the infant muses

Gail Godwin manages her own myths

BY MARIA FLOOK
June 21, 1978

Gail Godwin, author of "Swamped with Paperwork," knows all about the literary life. Her new book, "Swamped with Paperwork," is a collection of essays about the literary life. Godwin is a master of the art of writing, and her new book is a testament to her skill.

The above excerpt from Godwin's work, "Swamped with Paperwork," is an excellent example of how she describes her own myths. In this essay, Godwin manages her own myths by staying true to her own voice and staying in touch with her own sensibilities. She is a remarkable writer, and her new book is a testament to her skill.
In Bangkok, Cambodia, a young woman immolates herself in front of the United Nations headquarters to protest the return of the U.S. to Vietnam. The message she left concludes, "Wreath of the world's end."

Woman immolates self in front of U.N. as protest

GENEVA (UPI) — An unidentified woman tied hula skirts around her waist and doused herself with kerosene Monday evening, complained that the United Nations "is not doing its job" and burned herself alive in front of the United Nations headquarters, dying a half hour later.

The woman told UPI in a note that appeared to be an American accent that "there will be no discussion. demonstrations, or strife, in the street. It will be a half hour of death. It's not going to be a new demonstration. It's going to be an action.

This had already taken when the woman immolated herself. There was beginning to be some smoke.

The woman climbed atop the grave slab in the center of the square, placed several papers on the ground, lit a match and then set herself on fire. She put the hula skirts around her waist, poured some kerosene from a jug and lit the match. She then stood on her hands and took a few steps forward with the hands on the floor, a path of fire.

She then appeared on the first floor of the center and then she disappeared. She was later seen falling to the floor from the first floor. She was then taken to a hospital, where she was pronounced dead.
