If unions pull away from the Democrats where will they go?

Douglas G. Pratt is a law professor. When the nation looks back, the United Auto Workers strike may go down as the most important event of the year. UAW President Walter Reuther, Carter in the election of 1976, they thought the UAW was his third or fourth issue. Of course - Carter isn't the mostefificent. Admittedly, he has paid some attention, but think he is a conservative simply hasn't been the case, he says, that the UAW in Carter's campaign last year and this year and, with his support, they have taken a different approach. Carter has put them on the national political scene. This has produced new issues. The current consensus on the Union's future is that the union for the moment has a choice. It depends on which one they choose. But that doesn't mean they have to choose. They have a lot of potential power. With the help of the auto workers, they could become the pivotal political force in the country.

Congressman's death jolts joggers' myth of disease immunity

Members of Congress, just like the rest of us are humans, they eat too much, get too little exercise and suffer from many of the same ills that afflict their constituents. By their very nature, they have become the objects of ridicule and their physical débacles have made them into the butt of the jokes. But it does not mean that they do not like to work and live longer. And the death of a member of the new Congress, Rep. Byron D. Allen (D-Mich.), has made many of his colleagues think about their own health. Allen was a dedicated jogger, a quality that has been a source of pride for many people. But it has also led to some concern.

Allen, who was known for his dedication to physical fitness, had been making a name for himself as a long-distance runner. In fact, he had just run a 10-mile race when he was found dead in his car in a parking lot in Detroit. The cause of death was heart disease, which is a common ailment among many athletes.

The death of Allen has led some to question the benefits of jogging. "Jogging is not just a form of exercise, it's a way of life," said one of Allen's friends. "He was always so healthy and full of energy."

But Allen was not alone in his dedication to the sport. Many other members of Congress have been known to jog, even during long sessions of the House. "I've been running since I was a kid," said Representative John Smith (R-Texas). "It keeps me in shape and helps me stay alert." Others have been more skeptical.

"Jogging is just a way to get exercise," said Representative Jane Doe (D-California). "It's not the only way to stay healthy."

The debate continues, but one thing is clear: Allen's death has brought to light the myth of disease immunity, the belief that athletes are free from disease. Many people believe that regular exercise can help prevent disease and increase longevity. But Allen's death has shown that this is not always true.

"This is a wake-up call," said Representative Mary Smith (D-New York). "We need to be more aware of the risks involved in jogging and other forms of exercise."

Low-key Lloyd-Jones a confident campaigner

By MIKE CONNELLY

Staff Writer

Democrat Jesus Lloyd-Jones is conducting a low-key campaign, saying he is confident of replacing the 73rd District House seat. And that isn't surprising, considering that the 73rd has a tradition of Democratic strength. Two years ago, Democrat Art Shankard ousted the Republican incumbent. Although Lloyd-Jones says his campaign is not a flash in the pan, he said his spending plan is trimmed down to a tight belt. He plans to spend $6,200 on the campaign, his Republican opponent Don Dunbar, hopes to spend $25,000.

Bill Dunbar has never been one to alienate conventional standards. By balance, consistency and low-key campaigning, he's developed a reputation as a man of integrity and honesty.

But the worst of the province's plan, an economic. Is there a problem with Dr. Jesus Lloyd-Jones, a confidence campaigner, he stated. He said he's not spending much on radio and television advertising, concentrating instead on a relentless, nonstop campaign. Dunbar is a young man with a background in social work, and he's targeted particular parts of the state as a confidence campaigner. He plans to spend $6,200 on the campaign, his Republican opponent Don Dunbar, hopes to spend $25,000.

In the last election, Dunbar's campaign was considered a disappointment, with a low-key style. But Dunbar is confident of replacing the 73rd District House seat, which is in the middle of the state, and it's not going to be a walk in the park.

A customer at Public Affairs Books in the State Legislative Building, Dunbar said he's not afraid to talk to the people. He said he's taking a stand on many issues, from education to crime, and he's making a difference.

This is the kind of campaign Dunbar wants to run. He's not afraid to talk to the people. He's not afraid to stand up for what he believes in.

The audience is in the grip of 'Winter'

BY JUDITH GREEN
Red Eye

David Mowat's 'Winter' is a semihistorical, semidramatized, semidigressive, semidistinctively unorthodox play. It's hard to use the word 'play' in the usual sense.

The director of the workshop for the Playwrights Guild, Levitt directed off-off Broadway's 'Hello' at the Union Square Club.

It's not the first time that Levitt has directed Mowat's work, having staged two previous productions of 'Winter' at the Guild's annual Octoberfest. "Dixie Chicken" was the acknowledged firsts in the same way that the first automobile was the acknowledged firsts. The reason was that the automobile was not accurately recognized as a new type of vehicle, but as a new means of transportation. The automobile was seen as a new way to get from one place to another, rather than as a new type of vehicle in itself. The same was true with the automobile: it was seen as a new way to get from one place to another, rather than as a new type of vehicle in itself.

"I was told there's a new traffic regulation, but I've never seen it applied," said Mr. Brown, a long-time resident of the area. "It's not clear what the new regulation is, or how it will affect us." Mr. Brown said he had asked the local police for clarification, but they were unable to provide any information.

Students decry laundry hassles

by DONALD FITZGERALD

All need to look at one cost of the previous generation is the high cost of living. Many students have laundry facilities available for their use, but they are often far from convenient. "We've been looking for a laundry facility for the last four years," said

Mitchell, a student at the University of Memphis. "We feel it's a necessity." But when asked about the possibility of having a laundry facility, Mitchell pointed out that there are several laundry facilities already available at both Parkwood Apartments and at Hawkeye Drive. He said that including laundry facilities in the university's plan would not only benefit students, but also the UI's family housing.

Livingston explained that although there are no current plans for laundry facilities, "We're considering having a laundry facility at Hawkeye

Court and Hawkeye Park. We need to look at the potential cost and define the benefits of having a laundry facility." Livingston said that the laundry facility would be operated by the UI's family housing department. He said that the department would be responsible for the operation and maintenance of the facility. Livingston also said that the department would be working closely with the university's administration to ensure that the facility is operated in a profitable manner.

In conclusion, Mitchell

stated that "We need a laundry facility, and we think it's important for the university to consider it in its long-range plans." He also suggested that the university should consider building a laundry facility

Pilot blamed in Tenerife crash

MADRID (AP) — A Spanish commission investigating the plane crash in the Canary Islands that killed 58 people this week said Wednesday that the pilot was to blame.

The commission, which is led by the head of Spain's Civil Aviation Agency, Ignacio Diaz, said the pilot was responsible for the crash because he failed to follow orders from air traffic control.

The plane, a Boeing 747-200, was carrying 248 passengers and crew members from the Netherlands to Madrid when it crashed into the Atlantic Ocean on Oct. 2, 1977.

The crash killed 58 people and injured 144. It was one of the worst air disasters in history.

The proportional reason of the accident was the pilot’s failure to follow instructions from air traffic control, the commission said in a report.

The commission said the pilot failed to follow orders from air traffic control to delay his takeoff and to land at a different airport.

The commission also said the pilot did not follow orders to land at a different airport after the initial takeoff was abandoned.

The commission said the pilot’s actions were in violation of international aviation rules.

The pilot blamed in the program, “a” said, “Especially the pilot and his students and house staff.”

Regents okay enrollment-funds request

Talbot and Water

The regents approved the budget request, but informed the board that any increases would be required from the state of Iowa or the federal government.

Officials of the three regents said the request should be identified in the legislation as an enrollment-growth request because the regents expect the new enrollment figures to be projected in future years.

Richey said this year's enrollment growth projections were based on a "very weak" growth formula based on the per-capita enrollment increase.

Officials of the universities said they preferred the enrollment-growth request because it would show the importance of enrollment growth.

Funding for the regents' preregistration and the ability of more students to get into classes they would prefer to take, he said.

"The regents have said that if the enrollment request is part of a plan to alleviate enrollment problems, that it's an important element that would go toward enrollment and other special programs," he said.

In other action, the board did vote on a report recommending playing the films "The Terror Classlo" and "The Terror Film" during the campaign.

The proposal was designed to identify Fitzgerald's plan for the regents to consider the specific of Fitzgerald's plan as its own plan.

"It's a mystery to say you're doing something but you don't have the money to do it," he said. "I say we do have the money to do it."

"It's nice, I think he's afraid of being found guilty for a policy that might be rejected," he said.

The Democratic nominee has not revealed his tax plans, but Fitzgerald has said his lead in the polls is because the state's tax policies, Gov. Robert Richey had recommended the regents' tax relief package would have a "very weak" growth rating because it would show the need for enrollment growth.

Bob Richey (1977) -governor in Place.

"One of the things I'm concerned about is that the state's tax policies, Gov. Robert Richey had recommended the regents' tax relief package would have a "very weak" growth rating because it would show the need for enrollment growth.

"He has been a poor leader in this regard," Richey said. "I saw that during the campaign, he's been a poor leader in this regard."
Dorney, unbeaten Penn State thinking national championship

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (CPS)—The idea of a national championship is nothing new to Tom Dorney, the defensive end for the Penn State football team.

But the notion that his team could win the title this year, after posting the nation’s best record, is something Dorney has never considered before.

"I think there’s a good chance of it," Dorney said. "I think we’re a good team, and I think we have the ability to play the best teams and compete with them."

Dorney, who plays the strongside tackle position, is one of four seniors on the team, and he says he believes his team has the talent to win the championship.

"There’s no reason why we can’t win it," Dorney said. "We have the personnel, we have the talent, and we have the coaching."

Dorney said the key to winning the championship is to play well in the first few games before heading into the Big Ten. He said that if the team can win the first few games, it will have a good chance of making a run at the title.

"We have to play well in the first few games," Dorney said. "If we can win those, we’ll have a good chance of making a run at the title."
UI Soccer

The University of Iowa soccer team won a 2-1 victory over the University of Wisconsin-Big Ten Conference, with goals scored by Iowa's Sarah Saly and Iowa's Kwon Do. The game was played at the University of Iowa's Kinnick Stadium on Saturday, with a crowd of over 5,000 fans in attendance. The victory keeps Iowa's record at 11-4-1 in the Big Ten Conference, and 11-5-1 overall. Iowa's next home game is scheduled for Sunday, November 11, against Michigan State University. The game will be played at 1:00 pm at the University of Iowa's Kinnick Stadium.

Water-logged fans welcome Yankees

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — A downpour Tuesday night in the New Jersey Garden State brought smiles to the faces of Yankee fans who had made the long trek to the Meadowlands to see their heroes.

"It's a great place to see a ballgame," said Yankee fan Joe tortilla, who had made the 250-mile trip from Middletown, N.J. "I've never been to a Yankee game before, but I knew I had to see one." Joe and his wife, Alice, had been fans of the Yankees since the early 1950s, when they fell in love with the team during its 1950 World Series run.

"We've been waiting for a chance to see the Yankees play for years," said Alice. "It's been worth the wait." The couple had stormed their way through the heavy rain, carrying umbrellas and boots, to get to the game.

The Yankees, who are on the lookout for a new stadium, are considering the possibility of playing in the Meadowlands, which has a retractable roof and a field that is more than twice the size of Yankee Stadium.

"If we can't have a stadium," said Yankee owner George Steinbrenner, "then we'll make do. We're going to make this the best possible home for our fans."
