Rhodesia attacks Zambian capital

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Rhodesian warplanes Thursday bombed the outskirts of the Zambian capital of Lusaka, killing "hundreds" of people, possibly including Cuban troops, and raided guerrilla bases in Mozambique in an unprecedented two-pronged attack.

It was the first time since the war began in December 1972 that Rhodesia has launched simultaneous attacks across both its eastern and western borders. The twin offensive represents a major escalation of the five-year war between the Salisbury regime and black nationalist guerrillas.

Intelligence reports from sources in the area showed the Rhodesians had chosen the moment of their attack carefully, picking a time when all available Zambian fighter planes were away on a training mission and leaving no aircraft to defend the capital.

The sources also said the Rhodesians knew the Zambian military codes and gave the correct countersign when spotted and challenged by radio, thus the Zambians never even shot at them from the ground.

UPI correspondent Nicholas Hanks reported from Lusaka that the Rhodesian jets leveled a black refugee and guerrilla camp 12 miles north of the capital and that a huge gray cloud of smoke hung over its ruins.

Black guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo, who ran the camp, charged the Rhodesian warplanes dropped napalm in the attack and said the base was only a "camp for the unfit and sick" and not a guerrilla base.

"How do you talk to these criminals who use napalm against us," Nkomo said. "We lost quite a few people. They have destroyed almost everything."

There was no immediate reaction from Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda.

Medical teams of doctors and nurses shuttled back and forth in ambulances and commandeered private cars to ferry wounded between the camp and Lusaka Hospital. Officials at Lusaka hospital said it was "overflowing" with wounded and said "hundreds" had been killed, Hanks reported.

The camp was run by the Zimbabwe (Rhodesian) African People's Union of guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo, one of the co-leaders of the Patriotic Front which opposes Premier Ian Smith's plans for gradual black rule in Rhodesia and whose guerrillas shot down a Rhodesian civilian aircraft and murdered 10 crash survivors on Sept. 2.

Zambian government officials said the camp was attacked by about six war planes and that it was used by black Rhodesian refugees. But Lusaka residents said it was occupied by guerrillas and Cuban advisors as well.

The Zambian cabinet went into emergency session to discuss the lightning Rhodesian attack.

A Rhodesian military communique described the base as "the main controlling military headquarters from which terrorist operations... are planned and have been launched against Rhodesia."

The communique said the target of the deepest Rhodesian penetration into Zambia was the main headquarters of Nkomo's Zimbabwe Peoples Revolutionary Army.

The Rhodesian Command said the base, known as "F C" camp, is located at Westlands Farm, 12 miles north of Lusaka, and is the central headquarters for Cuban troops who act as advisers to Nkomo's guerrilla army.

Unconfirmed reports from Zambia said a second installation, located at Mumbwa 62 miles west of Lusaka and 90 miles from the border, also came under Rhodesian bombs.

As the operation was under way in Zambia, residents in the Umtali district reported that Rhodesian Canberra jet bombers streaked across the eastern border on the second day of strikes against guerrilla bases in Mozambique.

Operating on the Western front with bases in Zambia are guerrillas loyal to Nkomo while in the east, with camps in Mozambique, are members of Robert Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Union.

Nkomo and Mugabe co-lead the Patriotic Front Alliance, which has rejected the "internal" majority rule agreement Smith concluded in March with three local black leaders.

The twin offensive appeared aimed at blunting the guerrillas expected 1978 rainy season offensive.

The raids also underscored the rapid escalation of the war on the eve of a meeting in the United States between Smith and British and American officials.

The strike against the base outside Lusaka was the sixth major Rhodesian operation in Zambia reported since August, 1977.

The previous most intensive attack into Zambia occurred in March, 1978 when Rhodesian troops spent 30 hours blasting the Kavalamanja base, a forward camp across the northern border. The Rhodesians said they killed 42 guerrillas for the loss of one man.

Defense Sec'y Brown wants funds to make binary nerve gas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pentagon sources disclosed Thursday that Defense Secretary Harold Brown is seeking funds for eventual production of a new type of weapon using nerve gas, the substance that killed 6,000 sheep in a 1968 test accident.

If the Pentagon plan is approved by the White House and becomes part of the final 1980 budget request, it would mark the first time any administration has sought money to move toward production of the controversial new weapon since Congress rejected the idea in 1976.

The Pentagon sources said Deputy Defense Secretary Charles Duncan, acting on Brown's orders, has secretly instructed the Army to program funds for the building of a "binary" — or two-stage — nerve gas weapon plant at Pine Bluff Arsenal, Ark.

The Army request — if cleared by administration budget reviewers — would become part of the fiscal 1980 budget that goes to Congress in January.

Proponents argue that "binary" nerve gas weapons are safer to store and transport than current, aging gas bombs and shells because they use two separately encased, relatively harmless chemicals that combine into deadly gas only after the weapon is enroute to its target.

All work on the binary program was stopped in the public outcry that occurred when 6,000 sheep were killed by nerve gas that drifted off a Utah test site in 1968.

Research resumed several years later, however, and has continued under the Carter administration.

No detailed estimate of the eventual budget request was available. But sources said it is expected to be less than $15 million and to include some "long-lead" funds for actual production of weapons.

That is not expected to start until about 1982.

Pentagon sources said Brown wants to prepare for production because he is concerned over the deteriorating state of current U.S. stockpiles.

Students to hold own king, queen contest

By KELLY ROBERTS
Staff Writer

A group of students will hold a contest to select a Homecoming king and queen because a human rights complaint prompted cancellation of the official UI Homecoming "reign" contest.

"We think it's an important part of Homecoming to have a king and queen, and we wanted the administration to know that," said Donn Stanley, who heads the group and is also president of Student Senate, Thursday. "In spite of all the hassles involved we wanted to do this. If the university can't sanction a Homecoming contest, we'll go outside the university."

The Homecoming reign contest was canceled Wednesday by the Homecoming Council after the UI Human Rights Committee decided the contest did not comply with the Human Rights Policy.

Classie Hoyle, UI director for affirmative action, said the committee determined that the contest did not meet the intent of the policy, which reads in part: "In no aspect of its (the UI) programs shall there be differences in the treatment of persons because of race, creed, color, national origin, age, sex and any other classifications that deprive the persons of consideration as an individual, and that equal opportunity and access to facilities shall be available to all."

Dean Formanek, co-director of the reign contest, said the event was originally publicized as a queen contest but was changed to a reign contest, open to both men and women, after complaints were made.

He said more problems with the reign contest were then found, and the Homecoming Council was forced to cancel the contest because not enough time was left to comply with the policy.

Hoyle said the committee decided the material advertising the reign contest did not place enough emphasis on the fact that the contest was open to all UI students.

"The advertising wasn't explicit enough on the rules of the contest," she said. "Someone alleged a complaint about it. To comply would have meant re-publicizing the entire contest, which just wasn't feasible for the council."

The first publicity for the event was for a queen contest. After the contest was changed, the council tried to collect all of the advertising, but, inadvertently, one poster was left up, which brought the complaint," she added.

Stanley said the 25 to 30 people in his group, which calls itself the Independent Students in Search of a Homecoming Association, will run an advertisement next week in The Daily Iowan about the contest.

Because the group will not use UI facilities or funds (the advertisement was paid for with contributions) the Homecoming contest is perfectly legal.

"That's their right," Hoyle said. "As long as they don't involve university funds or facilities, there is nothing wrong with a private group going over and above the university to hold a contest."

Formanek said that although the contest is not related to Homecoming Council, he personally approves of the plan.

"I joined the council because I thought many students are interested in having the traditional queen," he said. "If some people want to start it up again, I'm for it."

Stanley said he is worried about the future of the contest.

"I think this shows a serious problem with the way the administration is controlling student organizations," he said. "If this continues in the future, I see many groups leaving the university and becoming independent."

Stanley said he blames both the administration and the Homecoming Council for the problems with the Homecoming reign contest.

"It was handled poorly by both the administration and the council," he said. "The administration should not have waited until five days before the winner of the contest was to be announced to complain about it."

"The council should have taken a lot more views on the contest from other groups involved. For instance, they skipped right over the senate," he added.

Hoyle said the future of the Homecoming contest will not be jeopardized as long as students planning the contest take the human rights question into account.

"The council needs to be more careful in selecting the Homecoming person, or whatever. Technically, I don't know what to call it," she said. "They have to take into account a broad base representing all segments of the university population."

Briefly

DOT, council to meet

The state Department of Transportation (DOT) director and staff will meet with the Iowa City Council to discuss differences over Freeway 518 at 2 p.m. Oct. 26 in the Civic Center.

"The purpose of the meeting is to discuss the council's viewpoint and the DOT's viewpoint and see if we can reach a compromise agreement," Iowa City Mayor Robert Vevers said Thursday.

DOT Director Raymond Kassel requested the meeting with the council to discuss the city's view of the DOT's alternative Freeway 518 alignment and to ask that a council delegation be present at the Oct. 31 DOT commission meeting.

The commission plans to take final action on the city's proposed revisions of the freeway at that meeting.

Amnesty in Iran?

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Iran's reform government Thursday announced an amnesty for all political prisoners in a new effort to defuse growing opposition to the Shah's regime.

But anti-Shah demonstrators clashed with police in the holy city of Qom and labor unrest plagued much of the country. Drawn-out strikes shut down ports and post offices, disrupting communications and food supplies.

"From now on, there will be no political prisoners in Iran," Justice Minister Mohammad Baheri told Radio Iran. "Only those convicted for terrorist activities or acts against state security will face imprisonment."

Baheri added the prisoners would be compensated for their imprisonment but gave no details.

He did not say when the amnesty would take effect or how many prisoners it would cover, but some newspapers reported that at least 1,000 would go free.

Officials have previously estimated the number of Iran's political prisoners — including terrorists — at 2,000.

The justice minister's declaration followed reports that some people had been jailed simply for reading or exchanging books banned by the dreaded SAVAK secret police.

The amnesty would be the latest in a series of concessions agreed to by Prime Minister Jaafar Sharif-Emami to win over the opposition. Rioting across Iran has claimed hundreds of lives in the past year.

Sharif-Emami, appointed by the Shah in August to head a "government of national reconciliation," already has accepted opposition demands for political liberalization and greater freedom for the press and parliament.

Compromise offered

PRETORIA, South Africa (UPI) — Prime Minister Pieter Botha Thursday offered a face-saving compromise on Namibia in an effort to stave off threatened U.N. sanctions, but Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said there was still no assurance of free elections there.

South Africa agreed its scheduled Dec. 4 elections, rejected by the U.N. as illegal, would be only "an internal exercise to elect internal leaders," paving the way for a U.N.-supervised independence elections next year.

The compromise followed three days of talks between South African leaders, Vance and the foreign ministers of four other Western nations.

First gene transplant

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Genetic scientists have made their first transplant of a functional gene from one mammal to another, bringing medicine to the edge of a new frontier in treating disease, according to a prominent biochemist.

Stanford University's Dr. Paul Berg, a leading researcher in DNA — the basic material in the nucleus of cells which contains genetic codes and hereditary patterns — revealed the scientific breakthrough to reporters Thursday.

Berg said a segment of DNA with codes for a specific chain of hemoglobin in rabbits — called beta chain — was spliced into a DNA virus known as SV40.

Laboratory-grown cells from an African green monkey were then infected with the hybrid virus DNA to permit the newly incorporated gene segments to be amplified, Berg said.

Husband charged with rape of wife

SALEM, Ore. (UPI) — A Salem man was charged Wednesday with raping his wife. The indictment by the Marion County Grand Jury was believed to be the first such case in Oregon.

Legislation permitting a wife to prosecute her husband on a rape charge was passed by the 1977 Legislature. Previously, under Oregon law, cohabitation was a defense against rape.

Carmen Orso, of the Rape Relief Hot Line, Portland, said the indictment was the first such case she had heard of. Oregon and Iowa are apparently the only two states to eliminate cohabitation as a defense.

In the Salem case, John Joseph Rideout, 21, is accused of beating and raping Greta Mary Rideout, 22, during an argument at their apartment Oct. 10. She filed the complaint against him with Salem police.

Weather

The guy who normally writes the weather was busy at press time so they paid me, Artie the janitor, one dollar to bring our readers the weather. I said I'd tell you that we'll enjoy another warm day with highs near 70 and not much chance of rain, with one stipulation: no jokes.

When I made that suggestion three staffers laughed at me, so I choked them to death. Tomorrow's headline: Artie chokes three for a dollar.

Oops!

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Things do get misplaced — but a $5 million water fluoridation program?

It turns out Congress did just that last weekend as it raced through bill after bill — and billion dollars after billion dollars — in its final, around-the-clock, bone-weary push to adjournment.

The program to distribute $5 million to communities, primarily in rural areas, that want to fluoridate their water supplies had been in the Senate version of a $2.5 billion health services bill, but not in the House bill.

In a conference Saturday afternoon, House negotiators agreed to include it in the final version of the legislation.

Overworked staffers, who also were handling many other bills, got around to drafting the final language of the legislation around 1 a.m. Sunday. But, somehow, they forgot to put in the fluoridation program.

"It was just one of those things," said one staff member. "A lot of crazy things happen in the early morning hours."

When the error was discovered, it was too late. The Senate already had approved the conference bill.

But all may not be lost.

There's $1 million for fluoridation in another bill — the health, education and welfare appropriation for 1979.

For that special someone

HOUSTON (UPI) — What better Christmas gift for your spouse than a city park bearing his or her name?

And included in the $800,000 price tag is a complete civic ceremony and dedication by Houston's mayor.

The gift is being offered by the Sakowitz department store. Store owner Robert Sakowitz said unlike many other offerings, the proposal is intended to promote public recreation rather than make a profit.

The price includes the cost of the land, improvements and a piece of sculpture — and, of course, the ceremony.

Mayor Jim McConn said it would make a nice Christmas gift for the city, too.

Dispute in Mideast talks?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter joined the Middle East peace talks amid reports of serious trouble Thursday and was told his intervention may not work the magic that it did at Camp David.

Seated next to Carter at a negotiators' luncheon in Blair House, the peace conference site, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said to Carter, "Whether you can obtain a change of position through the delegations here is very doubtful."

"It's not Camp David with the heads of state," Dayan said in reference to the summit conference where Carter resolved crucial disputes through patient, personal mediation and political decisions could be made on the spot.

Reporters heard Carter reply, "I recognize that's one of the problems. I will trust your advice."

The brief conversation took place as the press observed the start of a working luncheon among U.S., Israeli and Egyptian negotiators — the first three-way parley Carter had attended since the Blair House talks began one week ago.

In Jerusalem, meantime, political sources told UPI the Israeli Cabinet is likely to recall one or both heads of its peace conference delegation to report on snags that have developed — apparently over Egypt's desire to link the treaty negotiations with the future of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"There are some matters that cannot be solved by Telex and it looks as though this is the time," one source said. An aide to Prime Minister Menachem Begin said the recall could be discussed at today's Cabinet session.

Although Carter later denied the talks have reached a crisis, conference sources said a sharp dispute has developed over Egypt's demand for inclusion of a statement of principle on the West Bank in the final Egyptian-Israeli agreement.

They said the Egyptians want the Israelis to commit themselves in principle to eventual withdrawal from the West Bank — the Palestinian region taken from Jordan that is the focal point of the second Camp David accord.

The Israelis, however, argue that the future of the West Bank is a matter to be settled at another conference, once the current set of peace talks is completed.

Actor, woman found shot to death

NEW YORK (UPI) — Actor Gig Young and an unidentified woman were found shot to death in Young's Manhattan apartment Thursday night in an apparent murder-suicide, police reported.

A police official said the couple was found about 7:30 p.m. at the Osborne apartments on West 57th Street, a few blocks north of the theater district. The apartment is registered in Young's name, police said.

A gun was found in Young's hand and police said they believed the actor shot the woman to death and then killed himself.

Young, who was 64, won an Oscar for best supporting actor for his role opposite Jane Fonda in the 1969 film They Shoot Horses, Don't They?

In the film he played an emcee who hosted dance marathons during the Depression.

Critics called Young's performance in the film "a lifeline for a drowning actor" whose career was marked by "a trail of second leads in second-rate joined amateur theater. Upon graduation, he moved to California.

Young was spotted by a talent scout in a playhouse in Pasadena, Calif., where he appeared in 30 plays during three-year stay. His first film was The Gay Sisters, with Barbara Stanwyck, in which he played a character named Gig Young.

Because reaction to the name was favorable and there was already another actor named Byron Barr, he changed his name to Gig Young.

During World War II, he left acting to enlist in the Coast Guard and ferried Army troops Actor Gig Young and an unidentified woman were found shot to death Thursday in a West Side Manhattan apartment rented in the actor's name, police reported. movies." He was famous for playing the role of the suave suitor who invariably lost the girl in the last reel.

Young defined his career up to that as "thirty years and 55 pictures and there are not more than five that were any good or any good for me."

Young was born Byron Barr in St. Cloud, Minn., on Nov. 4, 1913 and used to say he was a painfully shy and sad child.

"I only had one teacher who liked me," he once said. "And I was so happy she did I used to give her dimes."

He moved to Washington, D.C., and attended McKinley Technical High School, where he acted in school plays and across the Pacific.

He returned to Hollywood and in 1951 received his first Academy Award nomination for his role in Come Fill the Cup. He didn't win, but got an MGM contract and was chosen to host the television show, Warner Brothers Presents.

His second Oscar nomination was for his role in Teacher's Pet, starring Clark Gable and Boris Day.

Chamber proposal
By DOUG HEROLD Staff Writer
The Iowa City Chamber of Commerce announced Tuesday that it could not support a present bond issue that called for the construction of a $3.5 million public library on the north corner of Linn and Commerce streets.
Although the chamber claimed to be in favor of "library for our community that will serve the needs of our citizens," it felt that additional construction at present library site, 307 College St., is "in the best interest of the total community. The condition of the existing library came under attack earlier this year because of its age and lack of space."

Chamber will not support proposal for new library

By DOUG HEROLD
Staff Writer

The Iowa City Chamber of Commerce announced Thursday that it could not support a present bond issue that calls for the construction of a $3.5 million public library on the northwest corner of Linn and College streets.

Although the chamber claimed to be in favor of a "library for our community that will serve the needs of all our citizens," it felt that additional construction at the present library site, 307 E. College St., is "in the best interest of the total community." The condition of the existing library came under critical attack earlier this year because of cramped conditions and inaccessibility to handicapped persons. This culminated in the formation of a group called "A New Library for Everyone" and the emergence of the present bond issue.

The Chamber of Commerce earlier expressed concern about the proposed site, feeling that commercial development in that area would be more beneficial to Iowa City as a community and as a business district. Thursday's announcement was viewed by Carol deProse, library campaign coordinator and city councilor, as "selfish" and "consistent with many of their previous actions."

"The executive board, in my mind, is exhibiting a very selfish attitude in this action," she continued. "The commercial development of the proposed site for the new library is in the interests of two or three people, whereas a library would be in the interests of thousands."

Chamber President Donald Herbert felt that commercial development of the site would enhance the business productivity in downtown Iowa City. "A library, on the other hand, would cause a horrendous traffic problem," he said.

DeProse, however, felt that the new library would bring business to existing establishments downtown. She went on to point out that expansion of the present library would not only be costly, but inadequate as well. "It could cost upwards of $4 million and I don't think we can pass a referendum that expensive." A consultant earlier informed the committee not to support an expanded library because of structural problems and difficulties in organization and efficiency that it would involve.

Parts of the present library are 75 years old and it is divided into six different levels. DeProse argued that additional areas would make the organization of materials just that much more difficult. The library also does not have sufficient modifications for the handicapped and elderly.

The actual strength of the library campaign will be put to the test on Nov. 7 when 60 per cent voter approval will be required for construction of the new library to begin.

Murdoch's San Antonio, Tex., paper.

The announcement of the new paper came an hour and a half after contract talks were recessed between the pressmen's union and the city's two strikebound papers — the New York Times and the Daily News.

William Kennedy, president of Printing Pressmen's Local No. 2, left the negotiations at 2:30 p.m., saying he planned to meet with Post officials to discuss the new tabloid.

"I'm going over there to talk about it now," Kennedy said.

Doctor links MSG, depression

BOSTON (UPI) — A University of California Medical Center psychiatrist said in an article published Thursday there may be a link between psychological disorders and the food additive monosodium glutamate.

In a letter to the editor published in the New England Journal of Medicine, Dr. Arthur D. Colman said his wife and 9-year-old son had apparently experienced psychiatric disorders due to the intake of monosodium glutamate added to certain foods.

Monosodium glutamate is a white crystalline powder derived from vegetable protein and used as a flavor intensifier in a variety of foods, including some soups.

Colman said his wife underwent a "two-week depressive syndrome" and that his son had been in psychotherapy for hyperactivity and other problems. Colman said his son's symptoms disappeared after he was placed on a diet free of the food additive.

"My wife is a 38-year-old woman in good health with no previous history of psychiatric disorder. She had the typical acute five-hour to 12-hour monosodium glutamate reaction (including face and neck tightness, pressure behind the eyes, flushing, burning sensations in the chest and abdominal discomfort) after meals in restaurants and at home that included monosodium glutamate as a food additive," Colman wrote.

Mountaineering #3.

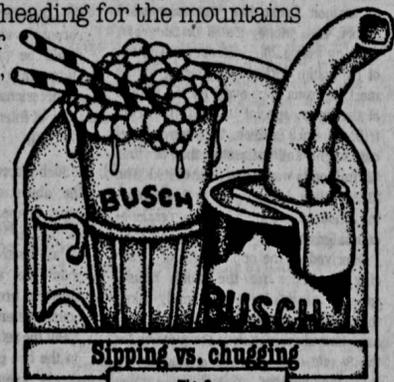

METHODOLOGY

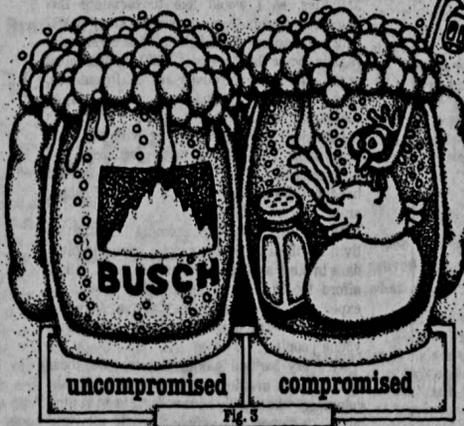

Heading for the mountains

Mountaineering, as all but the chronically misinformed know, is the skill, the science and the art of drinking Busch Beer. It begins by heading for the mountains (i.e., a quick jaunt to your favorite package emporium or wateringhole) and ends by downing the mountains (i.e., slow slaking swallows of the brew that is Busch).

However, between those two points lies a vast area of personal peccadilloes sometimes called technique and sometimes called methodology (depending on your major). Hence, this ad. Sipping vs. chugging. Both have their merits, of course. But generally speaking, except for cases of extreme thirst or a leaking glass, sipping is the more prudent practice for serious, sustained mountaineering. Next,

Sipping vs. chugging

the proper position. Some swear by sitting; others by standing. Suffice it to say that the most successful mountaineers are flexible, so you'll find both sitters and standers.

(Except on New Year's Eve, when it's almost impossible to find a sitter.) Which brings us to additives. Occasionally a neophyte will sprinkle salt in his Busch; others mix in tomato juice; and a few on the radical fringe will even add egg. While these manipulations can't be prohibited (this is, after all, a free country), they are frowned upon. Please be advised that purity is a virtue, and the natural refreshment of Busch is best uncompromised.

Standing vs. sitting

Finally, there's the issue of containers. Good taste dictates a glass be used. But bad planning sometimes prevents that. If you find yourself forced to drink from the can, you should minimize this breach of etiquette. Be formal. Simply let your little finger stick out stiffly (see Fig. 4). Happy Mountaineering!

Yes, no, maybe

First, there was going to be a neutron bomb (sometimes called an "enhanced radiation warhead") in the United States' arsenal. Then there wasn't. Then there was. Then President Carter said he couldn't decide whether or not to build any of the nasty things right now, but promised to make up his mind later. Now, his mind appears to be at least half-way made up: he wants the components of the bomb to be made but not put together into any actual bombs.

Confused? Don't be yet — it gets a lot better. At first, President Carter explained he had decided not to decide on the neutron bomb to see if the Soviet Union would show any "restraint" in their weapons build-up. (Waiting for the Russians to show "restraint" is a little like waiting for a Cistercian monk to show you his record collection, but never mind.) In light of that, the ordering up of the bits and pieces of the neutron bomb might be seen as a prod to the Soviets to get restrained a little bit quicker and act a little friendlier at the SALT II negotiations. Not a bit of it, says Paul Warnke, the United States' main arms control negotiator. He has said neutron bomb deployment depends entirely on Soviet arms restraint and SALT has no bearing on the matter, since it deals only with strategic weapons and not tactical battlefield weapons like the neutron bomb. That simply doesn't make sense.

The neutron bomb, while not a strategic weapon such as an intercontinental ballistic missile, is something more than an average battlefield weapon. It is a radiation weapon, designed to kill people and leave structures standing. No other tactical weapon does that. It also represents a level of technology the Soviets haven't achieved yet, and they are scared of it. They have been pushing a treaty to ban it ever since information about it became public. The Carter administration's waltzing around the issue of neutron bomb deployment is clearly a pressure play to make the Soviets play nice at SALT II. There is no other logical explanation for the rapid changes of mind over the neutron bomb.

It is clear now that Carter wanted the neutron bomb from the very first. His previous coyness was just a Nixon-style evasion. It may be very effective in scaring the Russians into some concessions; but it also might make them all the more reluctant to deal with an American president who seems addicted to trying to bluff them. Whatever the result, Carter is clearly playing a dangerous game of chicken with the Soviets, who are going to have to strike back somewhere, somehow. Carter should deploy the bomb or not deploy it, yes or no, up or down. This enhanced radiation shuffle he's doing at the moment only makes an unstable situation more volatile.

Influence buying

Will Rogers once said that the United States has the best politicians that money can buy. That influence buying is part of our system of government is contested only by the politicians and their purchasers, the latter claiming that they expect nothing in return for their contributions and the former reacting with hurt surprise at the suggestion that they are susceptible to bribery in the form of campaign funds.

One could argue that the situation isn't really as sleazy as it seems. At least when special interest groups such as labor unions, corporations and hunters fork over sums to candidate's campaign treasuries the public has the possibility of knowing whose pocket their representatives are in. This removes the necessity of under-the-table bribes that leave the voters completely in the dark.

Common Cause has just released a report, How Money Talks in Congress, showing that public interest enrichment of campaign coffers is occurring at the most vigorous pace ever. By the middle of this year, special interests had contributed $10.9 million to congressional campaigns and estimated that another $27 million is waiting to be invested. The $37.9 million dollar figure is three times the amount contributed to congressional campaigns by special interests in 1974. Deprived of the opportunity of financing the races for the White House, special interests have not simply taken their checkbooks and gone home. They have turned their attention to contests for the Senate and House. The study notes that the number of political action committees that serve as covers for special-interest contributions has more than tripled in the last three years.

The Common Cause report sees ample evidence in the actions and inactions of the 95th Congress that the generosity of special interests is having a direct effect on the decisions of the legislative branch. It attributes the defeat of the bill that would have created a consumer protection agency to active opposition by business interests. Similarly, trial lawyers exerted pressure that doomed no-fault auto insurance and lobbyists for the medical profession were able to block legislation aimed at holding down hospital costs.

That special interests could buy the support of members of Congress is a disturbing thought, even if it's not too surprising. But equally disturbing is the realization that, more often perhaps, special interest group simply contributed to the campaigns of candidates who already supported their positions. Special interests don't just buy off politicians, coming back in midterm demanding that they be repaid for the election boost, they buy off the democratic process. Political aspirants only become viable candidates with the support of special interests. The candidates the voters get to choose from in November are those who achieve nominations and visibility by the grace of the special interest money without which any campaign is futile.

Common Cause advocates federal financing of congressional campaigns comparable to that already in effect for presidential campaigns. Small individual contributions would still be allowed but the transfer of small fortunes from corporate accounts to campaign funds would be prohibited. The group also suggests closer monitoring of congressional conduct to prevent conflicts of interest and stricter controls on lobbying.

Such reforms might alleviate much of the abuse of the democratic system which is apparent in the manipulation of candidates by special interests. The trend toward politics as big business should be reversed, even if the whole electoral process has to become an in-house system.

But the reforms would have little effect on the two primary political special interest groups, the Republican and Democratic parties, whose mediocrity, patronage and ideological muddle are probably the primary reason why voting so often seems a pointless exercise. Since Republicans and Democrats will be writing the legislation that would set up a system of publicly financed campaigns, they will undoubtedly write in some insurance for their control of the political marketplace. When Iowa legislators devised an income tax check-off system, they provided taxpayers only the opportunity to donate a dollar to the two major parties. And chances are that even if campaigns are publicly financed, the two major parties will continue to provide the kind of candidates who could be bought if it was allowed.

Readers: homecoming, Laetrile

To the Editor:

A modest proposal for preventing the University of Iowa Homecoming from remaining a stale, unimaginative ritual and to provide a virtually unbiased display of non-sexism and non-racism:

It is an unharmonious object to those who walk these hallowed, ivy-covered halls to observe unattended requests upon every garbage receptacle and phone booth on campus to develop an alternative to the present-day homecoming celebration. These unheeded pleas have caused me to spend long, ponderous nights in Perkins', racking my sense for a viable solution to this dilemma.

I believe it is agreed that these contests, based upon sex-racist ideals, are an appalling plague on the student body of this fine institution, and the individual who finds an equitable alternative should be so revered by the student community that the name of Kinnick Stadium would be renamed to honor this new-found hero.

As a result of my many hours of meditation on this controversial issue, and analyzing the schemes of many others who have confronted this adversity, I have found theirs to be greatly inappropriate. As we know, there have been many beautiful people, selected by students and faculty, who have been of one gender, and this misrepresents the total coeducational existence. I believe it to be a gross miscalculation to select this esteemed person exclusively from this one gender.

I would like to state my proposal, not that I have brought the problem to light. The student community, or the majority thereof, would like to see a change in our present homecoming activities, so I would like to facilitate this transition. I propose we station the Army ROTC cadets at one end of the field in their ceremonial regalia, while the Air Force ROTC is positioned at the opposite end similarly attired. In cadence, they load their rifles and fix their bayonets, as the Hawkeye Marching Band and the Scottish Highlanders call them to battle with the Iowa Fight Song. This will enrage the two corps to a high pitched frenzy and cause them to rush headlong toward each other, bayonets flashing amid showers of lead.

The change in the homecoming halftime activities will also provide respite from the mundane in other aspects of the annual event. It will afford the musical organizations a chance to experiment with a new repertoire, as they can perform funeral dirges for these courageous young people.

At every football game, just in case there should be an accident, there are three to six volunteers who usually have nothing to do at nine out of 10 games. My proposal would alleviate their boredom, and put their skills to the test as they would be needed to care for the wounded and remove the dead.

I invite anyone to submit a more exciting proposal than mine, if such can be done, without losing the degree of interest and excitement, while involving a greater percentage of the student body. I suggest that unless a better proposal is submitted, we act upon this one immediately, to make this homecoming the best ever!

I assure everyone, both in the student body and in the community of Iowa City, that I neither own nor control any stock or companies such as funeral homes, blood banks and ambulance services, from which I would derive any profit. My only interest is to help a long-time institution such as homecoming to become a richer and more rewarding experience for students, faculty and alumni as well.

No poison

To the Editor:

Still more controversy on Laetrile. The Daily

Iowan unfortunately chose to edit an important sentence out of my letter of Oct. 12, so I feel somewhat justified in writing to restate my position and hope that it all makes it through this time.

I stated in my letter that people interested in a balanced view of Laetrile as a treatment for cancer should read one of the books by its proponents and also read what the FDA has to actually are as Yoder depicts them. Metaphor and simile cannot be verified; they have no empirical truth value. They are simply stylistic devices that a speaker or writer employs to clarify thought or provide insight. Perhaps this is why theorists claim that argument from analogy is the weakest of all argumentative strategies. Alliteration, of course, serves no argumentative function whatsoever.

What Yoder does do is successfully identify himself with the "realistic," drinking, belching, spitting, "corrupted humanness" of the Archie Bunkers of this world. If this is what Yoder wants, it is his prerogative. Undoubtedly, he would feel very much at home among those fans who toss bottles from the Yankee Stadium bleachers and who, after the games, must be held back by the police so they will not tear their beloved Yankees to shreds.

There is, however, another way in which to view this situation. Since Plato first toyed with the concept in the Phaedrus, writers have been intrigued by the idea of mankind's "animal" nature pitted against better, more rational "human" qualities. Therefore, at the risk of stooping to the use of name-calling and metaphor myself, I suggest that the characters and the behaviors of some, though not all Yankee fans have given people legitimate reasons for calling Yankee Stadium "The Bronx Zoo."

say about Laetrile. The books by Laetrile proponents won't offer a balanced view and neither will the FDA materials but critical reading and comparison should allow one to pick out what is believable and what is not from each of these sources.

I will say no more about the possible efficacy of Laetrile as a cancer treatment, but I do feel compelled to answer the allegation made by David Leitner in his letters of Oct. 4 and Oct. 16 that Laetrile is toxic. Laetrile, yclept amygdalin, is a substance occurring naturally in the seeds of fruits such as apples, apricots and peaches. It belongs to a wider group of substances, the nitrilosides, all of which occur widely in foods. Lima beans, millet and sprouts, for examples, have high levels of nitrilosides. All the nitrilosides are, as Leitner puts it, converted to deadly cyanide when ingested. I have eaten the above food many times in my life and I don't feel the worse for it. I guess I must be lucky.

For those of you who choose to believe more reliable sources, like the FDA, rather than "untrained testimonials," I point out the following fact: Laetrile, yclept amygdalin, is on the FDA's "Generally Regarded as Safe" list. So much for the toxicity of Laetrile. Cancer cure of no cancer cure, Laetrile is no more poisonous than salt is...

Zoo parade

To the Editor:

I am uncertain what Dave Yoder hoped to gain in his Oct. 17 attack upon the DI weather staff and the Los Angeles Dodgers. Certainly, he couldn't have been demonstrating his argumentative skills.

In the first place, his statement that his loyalty to the Yankees is 17 years old only establishes him as a Yankee fan. It has no more value than my own assertion that I have been a Dodger fan for almost 30 years. Essentially, both statements are tautological and without argumentative merit.

Second, name-calling and the use of loaded language are, at best, dubious rhetorical tactics. At worst — and the more conspicuous these techniques become, the worse they are — name-calling and loaded language betray a speaker's inability to formulate logical, well-reasoned arguments.

Third, it is impossible to ascertain whether the Dodgers, the Yankees or their respective fans

'Disgusting'

To the Editor:

As a parent, I find Mr. Dunbar's political ad qua "art contest" a disgusting attempt to exploit children for his own political ends. Thanks to child-as-consumer oriented advertising, children have plenty to bug their parents about already. We do not need political advertisements to add to an already annoying situation. This goes for you, too, Jim Leach, and those horrible headbands.

Editor's note

(Editor's note: In an editorial in Monday's DI, it was stated that U.S. District Court judge Donald E. # ELECTION '78: LT. GOVERNOR

Last-minute focus on issues sought by Palmer & Palmer

By TOM DRURY
Staff Writer

Ask a candidate who the unsung heroes of the campaign are, and chances are good the candidate will reply, "Why, the people — the voters." That may be true, to an extent, but there are a group of people who probably have it tougher in an election than the voters. These persons work long hours for months on end, intent on wringing extra votes out of the electorate; they are largely responsible for the election outcome. They are the campaign managers, and usually nobody knows who they are. Following are two views of the Iowa lieutenant governor's race — the views of the opposing campaign managers. We bet you don't recognize the names.

Managing a campaign is a new experience for Craig Palmer.

In 1974, he was working for Collins Radio in Mt. Vernon and got a union leave to work full time for the Democratic Party in Linn County. After the '74 election, Palmer alternately attended college, quit, traveled, went back to school.

He eventually received a degree in political science and religion from Cornell College in Mount Vernon. In 1976 Palmer was selected as vice chair of the platform committee for the state Democratic convention and in December of that year he began working as a research assistant for the state legislature's budget committee, where he first worked with Sen. William Palmer (no relation). When Sen. Palmer, a 43-year-old Des Moines Democrat, decided to run for lieutenant governor in 1978, the 25-year-old Mount Vernon native was hired as campaign manager.

"This is the first time I've been in-involved in something of this magnitude," Palmer said.

"If you haven't run a statewide campaign and all of a sudden there you are, you rely heavily on people who have been involved in politics."

But there is one thing Palmer seems to have determined all on his own.

"The day after election, win or lose, I'll be sleeping all day, and I'll deal with either the victory or the defeat when I get up that evening."

It's not uncommon, in October, for a young politician's thoughts to turn to the end of the campaign, and Palmer is no different.

"The intensity of the last few weeks, you drive yourself for that one day, and once that's over with, you just pretty much collapse. It's difficult to say how I'm going to feel," he mused.

Sen. Palmer's campaign has not been an easy one. In several respects the Democrat has been playing a catch-up game to Republican Terry Branstad all along. Branstad started over a year earlier than Palmer, and plans to out-spend him in the general campaign, approximately $125,000 to $70,000. In the primary Branstad spent $120,000, Palmer $40,000. Craig Palmer estimates the number of volunteers for his candidate at between 200 and 250 (with some of them only working on election day); Branstad's workers claim 4,000 volunteers.

Craig Palmer admits some surprise at the size and financial wealth of the Branstad campaign, but says it's the kind of campaign Branstad, a steadfast conservative, has to have.

"That's the kind of primary campaign they ran. It was an organizational effort. In our opponent's case, that's probably the wisest thing to do. If he would run on the issues, I think Iowans would see a distinct difference between philosophies," Palmer said.

"We're trying to plug what little organization we have into the Democratic Party, which is traditionally more organized than the Republicans, and carry on a campaign based on issues — legislation for the elderly and reform of income taxes."

To get those issues into the open, the Palmer campaign is relying not on organization, but on media stops, press releases and, especially, television advertising.

Two ads for the Des Moines state senator have already run for a 12-day period. The spots were prepared by PFC Media in Des Moines, and Craig Palmer is putting a lot of faith in their potential to illuminate the issues.

The most effective ad, according to Palmer, states:

"Bill Palmer, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, thinks senior citizens deserve a break. He voted to establish a transportation system for senior citizens and the handicapped; his opponent voted no. Bill Palmer voted for a preventive medicine program; his opponent voted no. Bill Palmer voted for a congregate meals program; his opponent voted no. Whether it's aid for senior citizens, education or the family farm, Bill Palmer is the sensible choice for lieutenant governor."

The ad is accompanied by film of senior citizens in various activities. When the words "his opponent voted no" are spoken, the color film is replaced by a black-and-white still of the same scene.

"I feel it's a fairly strong advertisement," said Craig Palmer, the campaign manager who will spend election day in bed.

STATE SENATE

The Daily Iowan/D.R. Miller

Art Small

The race for the 37th District state Senate seat has heated up in the last few weeks. Both candidates, Democrat Art Small and Republican Victor Woolums, have voiced some serious differences over issues that will face the coming Senate.

The Daily Iowan/John Danicic Jr.

Victor Woolums

Small has served four terms in the state House of Representatives. Woolums, former Johnson County Republican Party chairman, is running for political office for the first time. Daily Iowan University Editor Neil Brown interviewed Small and Woolums earlier this week and the following is an edited version of the candidates' replies to five selected questions.

In the wake of the tax revolt, Iowa has been lauded on various occasions for its legislative measures to prevent over-taxation. Yet the state, for the first time ever, is expected to receive $1 billion in property taxes. State income-tax receipts have increased 300 per cent since 1968, and David Stanley's Iowans for Tax Relief group is calling for a state constitutional amendment to limit spending and gradually cut taxes. Do you favor such a proposal, and what are your views on the tax situation in Iowa?

No. We do have a constitutional provision that requires we have a balanced budget. So we cannot spend more than we vote to tax. I think the state is not in a situation analogous to California at the time of Proposition 13. They had not taken many of the steps that we have. We have pumped back, for example, up to about $50 million in property tax relief for low income and elderly who are among the groups most severely impacted as a result of rising property taxes because usually they are on fixed incomes.

You have to be able to spell out, if you want to argue for massive tax cuts, where those cuts are going to take place. Over 52 per cent of our budget goes for education. If you're going to make big cuts, their going to have to come, as far as I can see it, in the educational area.

I haven't encountered any more conversation about taxes this campaign than I have in any other campaign.

I haven't seen the proposed amendment to the constitution so I can't comment one way or the other. For most Iowans, we are beginning to feel the pinch between inflation and taxation. So it (the proposal) does have appeal. I think the idea may have some merit.

As far as an arbitrary cut and a meat-axe approach to taxation, I can't support that. What we need to do is increase economic activity in the state of Iowa. That would automatically raise our tax base.

I'd also like to see us use the tax lever as a lever to accomplish some of the things all of us would like to see accomplished, such as removal of taxation or property taxes on solar energy. At least as long as the individual owner who installed it resides there because I think that's too much of a capital investment. Taxes to me are a negative thing, but we can use them in a positive fashion.

The state Board of Regents recently approved the third tuition hike in as many bienniums at regents' institutions. The recent tuition hike was 10.7 per cent for the UI. Do you support this hike, and will you support an equal increase in the amount of state aid to students?

We would not vote on a tuition hike. What we will vote on is the appropriation level. And if the regents perceive the appropriation level is not sufficient to run a quality institution, then they would go through with their tuition increase. I like to have tuition as low as they possibly can. Whether or not we can get the funding to the level to avert a tuition hike to keep it minimal, I can't say at this point, but I will certainly strive to see that accomplished.

The cost of education isn't going up. The cost of living has increased dramatically. One of the things that I worry about happening is that we are beginning to deny higher education to some students. It's going to call for increased financial assistance if it's available. I think 10.7 is a pretty dramatic price increase. I couldn't support that. We do need to look a little bit closer at where we're placing our priorities within the (regents) budget. You (a senator) have to fight for a higher appropriation to the regents institutions.

The proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the Iowa Constitution must be approved again by the legislature this session. Do you support the amendment, and what changes, if any, do you believe will come about with final passage?

I support it and did vote for it and will continue to. We have rather carefully gone over the (Iowa) code in the last few years to de-sex it or ensure equal treatment. But I think a constitutional provision is still warranted, in that in the absence of it, future legislative bodies could come back and undo those changes. What we're voting for is really to provide the public with the opportunity to vote on the question themselves. I hope they support it.

I intend to vote for it. I've heard so much pro and con of what the changes are going to be that I don't think any of us know for sure. One of the things I like about the Iowa Constitution (is that) it takes two assemblies to pass the same rule and then it takes the people. This is a major piece of social legislation and someone said last year, 'I'm not sure that 150 representatives ought to be making that decision' — I like that part of the constitution.

Do you favor legalization or decriminalization of possession of marijuana?

I would favor decriminalization. I think there is some growing sentiment to pass it. In past years it hasn't had any significant support. Legalization hasn't got a prayer.

I could buy decriminalization, but I don't think I'd ever introduce the bill. It is not a violent crime. It's not a crime committed against somebody else in terms of their person or property.

Do you favor further production of nuclear energy in Iowa? The Iowa Commerce Commission has said production should not continue until it can be done at a reasonable cost and there are assurances of effective waste removal. What are your views?

I'd like to see it held off, until what I foresee is the most critical question, what do you do with the waste. And I haven't seen any solution to that problem. I don't think we have the stable social institution that would allow such hazardous wastes to be stored up to 1,000 years. For a long time people thought that nuclear energy was going to solve the problem. It's obvious that cost overruns are mindboggling and then we have the hard reality of the waste disposal problem. I think we should look in other directions.

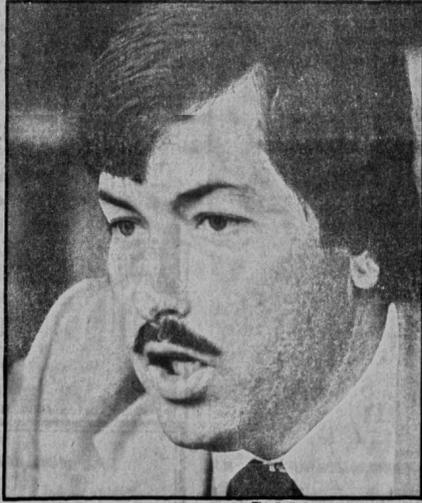

We have to decide whether we're going to be able to live in our state and whether we're going to have the energy to employ our people and heat our homes.

The alternative to that is coal and Iowa is sitting on four billion tons of coal. So I believe there are other alternatives we can go if we pursue them. But if we don't get after them and do it aggressively, then I can see nuclear energy coming right down the road. I'm definitely for research and development of (energy sources).

Terry Branstad

Branstad campaign banking on conservative winds of change

By TOM DRURY
Staff Writer

If you want to see whether the conservative, pro-business mood that is often rumored to be crossing the nation is prevalent in Iowa, you might do well to watch the lieutenant governor's race.

It has one candidate — Democrat William Palmer — who is campaigning in favor of continued social services, and another candidate — Republican Terry Branstad — who basically portrays himself as a tight-fisted conservative.

Randy Smith, Branstad's young campaign manager, is not hesitant to discuss the difference.

"We're bringing up taxing, growth and inefficiencies of government. Our opponent is bringing up more how we can help the handicapped and the senior citizen," said Smith, a 21-year-old ex-UNI student who will return to school after the election.

Also typical of the difference between the two candidates, Smith says, is Palmer's support for a renter's tax credit.

"It's a good idea but it'll cost a little bit over $12 million," Smith said.

He feels that non-support of expensive "good ideas" will probably not hurt Branstad much. The candidate himself has remarked that his conservatism is a plus in the 1978 campaign.

"I'd have to agree with him," said Smith, who has been on the campaign since it took its early start in December 1977. "I'm in a very good situation to see a change. Early in a primary, being conservative was a help, but not as much of a help as it is now."

"The mood of the people has drastically changed in the last 10 months.

I wouldn't call conservatism a huge asset, but it's an asset," he said.

Also an asset is Branstad's vastly larger campaign fund. For the primary and general elections, Branstad's campaign will spend approximately $220,000 and Palmer will spend about half of that.

Of Branstad's money, $10,000 of which is borrowed, about $15,000 will be spent on travel, a point his campaigners like to stress. The 31-year-old state representative from Lake Mills has been to all of Iowa's 99 counties at least twice.

"Basically it's a program to get our name out to the people," Smith said. "We started out unknown completely. It's hard to get votes unless they at least know your name. We try to work Terry, to get him around as much as possible."

"It's not unusual for Terry to be traveling on the road for 18 hours a day. He said to me last night that he was just getting worn out," Smith said.

Branstad's message focuses on his respect for traditional Republican values — a healthy business climate, maintenance of law and order (he talks of his efforts to build a stronger position for the prosecution into last year's Iowa criminal code revision and supports qualified return of the death penalty) and fiscal restraint.

Branstad gave his support to a "flexible" constitutional amendment limiting tax rates at an ear-splitting taxpayers' revolt meeting in Burlington in September. At the same meeting, Palmer argued that such an amendment could lead to cuts in social service and education funding, and that he could not support it.

Despite the clear-cut differences in the two candidates, there are few signs that the race has caught the interest of many Iowans. Smith acknowledges that, with the election only two-and-a-half weeks away, there are name identification problems for both candidates.

"Neither one of us is an incumbent," Smith said, speaking as is customary for campaign managers, as one with the candidate. "When there's no race incumbent, you don't have that starting 40 to 50 per cent base that an incumbent does, you don't have that asset of people already supporting you, and you don't have that asset of somebody hating your opponent and coming to you."

Like the Palmer campaign staffers, Smith is hoping commercials will raise public awareness of the race. He said the Branstad campaign is planning to spend between $30,000 and $35,000 on television advertising with the Wesley Day Advertising firm of Des Moines.

Smith, who previously has worked as a Washington intern with notoriously conservative 3rd District Congressman Charles Grassley, said he hopes that the ads will appeal to middle-income businessmen and farmers, and show that Branstad, who some have feared is too conservative to work well with moderate Republican Governor Robert Ray, can "get along and work with all kinds of people."

Smith, who is an accounting major, said he is probably one of the youngest managers of a statewide campaign in the nation.

"You know, this is my first one, and I can't tell you what it would feel like to lose. If we lose by less than 4,000 to 5,000 votes, I will feel very responsible, because I always think there's one more call, one more letter, something I could do to help."

Kick out the cobwebs, it's College Bowl

By MARK GORANSON
Staff Writer

According to Tom Kleen, the stereotype of "brainy" people as stuffy and overly proper is not true.

Kleen was one of four UI students who represented the UI at the National College Bowl Championships last year. Sitting in his basement office at MacLean Hall, Kleen glanced down at his feet and smiled. "Look," he said, lifting up both his pant legs to show one brown sock and one black sock, "intelligent people even make the mistake of putting on two different-colored socks."

Kleen, a graduate student and teaching assistant in computer science, got the idea to participate in the College Bowl university level competitions from reading an ad in The Daily Iowan.

"I'd always watched College Bowl on television when I was younger and dreamed of being on it. When I saw the ad for it, I thought, well, what the hell; try it," he said. This year's UI College Bowl eliminations will begin Monday at the Union.

To compete Kleen needed a team of four members and an alternate. He chose three fellow TAs.

"I stumbled into a gold mine here in the basement of MacLean Hall. I didn't know my office mates would turn out to be brilliant," he said.

Kleen and his teammates entered the university competition and after several games they moved into the championship and won.

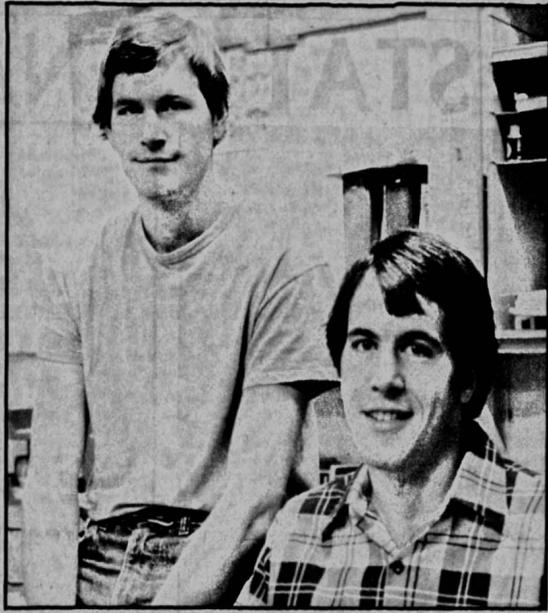

"After we won the university championship and were getting ready for regionals we lost one of our teammates because he wasn't a full-time student. So I decided to ask my brother to join the team," he said.

Bill Kleen and the rest of the team went on to win the regional competition, which qualified them to go to the national finals in Miami. The team lost its first match to the University of Illinois and was cut.

When asked about the key to the team's success, Tom Kleen began to laugh. "You can't take it seriously," he said, "there was no way we could prepare for the questions so we just decided to have fun."

According to John O'Donnell, the member of Kleen's team who had to drop out, the questions asked during the contests were usually broad.

"The questions were simple concerning a subject because they couldn't leave room for argument or uncertainty. They asked questions with simple, indisputable answers," O'Donnell said.

Bill and Tom Kleen

The Daily Iowan/Mary Locke

Some examples of the questions asked last year are:

—"What 20th century literary character describes himself by saying, 'I am not Prince Hamlet, nor was meant to be?'" (J. Alfred Prufrock, in T.S. Eliot's poem "The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock"); —"Which is the smartest, an imbecile, an idiot, or a moron?" (A moron. The least smart is an idiot); and —"In 1803, John Dalton postulated the atomic theory of matter, but 2,200 years earlier a Greek philosopher had anticipated Dalton. What was the name of this ancient Greek?" (Democritus).

Examples of easier questions are: "With what children's game do you associate aggies, immies, and cat's eyes?" (Marbles); and —"Last year, three American mercenaries were tried in Angola, and one was executed. Now there are 400 or so American mercenaries in another African nation presided over by Ian Smith. For ten points, identify this beleaguered nation." (Rhodesia).

The questions asked during the competition, from all areas of the sciences, humanities and arts, were chosen and authenticated by the Reader's Digest research department, which College Bowl regional coordinator Phil Silberstein, from the UI's Union, said is "phenomenal."

Kleen said he was worried that his team, all computer science majors except for his brother, a third-year law student, would have a narrow background in the arts and humanities.

"It was amazing how well we did," he said. "I guess the fact that we all read a lot when we were young helped. We just pooled our knowledge together and worked as a team."

He said the College Bowl contest could not be considered a test of intelligence, but was rather a test of quick recall and calculation.

"The questions didn't deal with your ability to use reason or logic," Kleen said. "Instead they were designed to see who could remember something the fastest."

He smiled when asked how his team did on questions concerning the sciences and math.

"It was ironic. All the questions pertaining to our specialty, computer science, were answered wrong. One question was what is the sum of  $\frac{1}{2}$  plus  $\frac{1}{2}$  plus  $\frac{1}{2}$  and we missed it," Kleen said.

Bill Kleen said the College Bowl was an experience in vague knowledge.

"I felt good because it gave me a chance to use all that information I had learned that I thought was useless. To be successful you had to know a little of everything and a lot of nothing," he said.

At the end of the national competition, the American champions, from Stanford, went on to play a team from England. They were soundly defeated.

Tom Kleen said he was surprised by the depth of the English team's knowledge in all areas and especially in American geography.

"One of the questions was, 'If you were in New Orleans and drew a straight line to San Francisco, what five states would you cut across?' I was stunned because the English team answered the question first," he said.

According to Kleen, participating in the competition did not bring them a lot of compliments on their intelligence or capabilities.

"It was all just for personal satisfaction," he said. "People weren't impressed that we won the regionals but rather that we had managed to get a free trip to Miami." Both Kleens will compete in this year's competition.

Campus winners receive an expenses-paid trip to regionals. Last year's team, although they were knocked off early, won a $500 scholarship for the UI. The American champions won a $7,500 scholarship for Stanford. Silberstein said a host school for the regionals—which include Iowa, Minnesota, and the Dakotas—has not been chosen. Last year's regionals were at the Union.

The UI's College Bowl, a double-elimination tourney, will begin in the Lucas-Dodge Room at 6:30 and is open to spectators. Games—six per night—will run every half-hour and be played one or two nights a week, Silberstein said, with the last match to be played Nov. 28. Much like the television game show "Jeopardy," the game is played on a point basis. "Toss-up" questions are answered by individuals, with the team collaborating only on bonus questions. Twenty-five UI teams have registered.

This is the second year of the UI College Bowl revival. "College Bowl" was originally a radio program and was televised nationally from 1953-1970. It is presently a syndicated television program.

Ex-air traffic controller says San Diego crash could be duplicated 'at any second'

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The collision that claimed 144 lives in the worst air disaster in U.S. history could happen again "at any second," a former air traffic controller said Thursday.

Steven Gibby said he worked as a controller at San Diego's Lindbergh Field from 1974 to 1977 and had warned officials of the constant danger of in-flight collisions a year before the crash in San Diego Sept. 25.

He gave up his career this year after witnessing a near miss above Portland, Ore., between a Cessna 172 and a Boeing 727 — the same types of planes that collided over San Diego, killing all 135 aboard the jet, both occupants of the private plane and seven people on the ground.

Gibby, 30, said he was certified by a doctor as suffering from "stress reaction as a result of job-related anxiety" and is currently looking for a new career.

He said he recalled noticing the control problems at Lindbergh Field the day he began work in 1974.

"I was alarmed at the random mix of both light aircraft and jets in the vicinity of the airport without positive control and identification available to the tower controllers."

He said he complained to his superiors but they did nothing about it. Finally, he wrote the Federal Aviation Administration in May 1977:

"Hundreds of light aircraft cross our final approach and departure courses daily without contacting us. The potential for a mid-air collision is constant and the potential tragedy of an air carrier mid-air collision over heavily populated east San Diego need not be elaborated upon. Time is of the essence. Any day someone could die."

Gibby, the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association's national air traffic controller of the year in 1977, said the situation at Lindbergh Field has not changed since he wrote the letter.

"The same exact type of mid-air collision could happen any second."

The letter to the FAA was given a "curt" review by his tower supervisor and Gibby asked for a transfer to Portland on grounds that at Lindbergh Field "the daily stress of knowing a mid-air collision is just around the corner is almost unbearable."

He said the near miss in Portland last June convinced him he should seek a new career. Shortly after the incident, he said he was routinely removed from duty but told to return to work minutes later.

James Durst, touring 'songsmith'

He takes his travels wherever he goes

By BETH GAUPER

James Durst gets by on the sense of fulfillment he gets from sharing his music, higher meanings, symbols, travel, and the fees he receives from his engagements on the college union circuit.

Durst, who will perform in the Union Wheel Room tonight and Saturday, will sing his songs and accompany himself with a guitar. Since most people insist on calling him a folk singer, he Asia from 1971-1974 — was just one of several rebirths in his life.

Thus was named his corporation, PhoenixXongs, which he said serves as a pseudonym for himself.

"The name comes from my fascination with it, it's just short of an obsession with the phoenix as myth, as a symbol. I relate to it quite strongly," Durst said.

Although he believes in reincarnation and the "eter-upward slide onto another verge of success, now possible with the release of his first album, Songsmith, which he produced himself. His corporation — which is "sort of an umbrella" — protects his songs and publishes his songbooks — four to date, including Credo, a coloring book of drawings that "literalize the lyric images" in his songs.

Durst's career began in Los Angeles and soon continued elsewhere.

"I was getting tired of L.A., not being able to breath successfully, Nixon politics and all the garbage that was happening," he said. His search for recognition wasn't much fun either.

"In L.A. it's one knock-down door after another. But when an independent producer offered to produce a record with money up front, I got cold feet and went to Europe."

He now says he wasn't ready anyway, which taught him a thing or two about cosmic harmony. "It really is true," he said, "that everything is for the best."

His conviction that his role in life is as a singer wasn't so roundabout, although he said "the rumblings were always there."

"Anything I am is reflected in the songs," he said. "I try not to be overzealous. If there's a message to be conveyed it has to be found. There's giving, but it must be taken." His world travels, he said, have given him material for his songs.

"I like new stimuli," he said. "It's essential to the work I do. There are people from other walks of life, but we're all the same; we have the same lfls, loves. There's nothing like it for giving you broader perspectives."

Love, of course, is one of Durst's favorite subjects. He writes about love for environment, God, the cosmic conscious, and being in and out of love. He's angry when he feels people misuse the word.

"People say they love a hotdog, or they love Laverne and Shirley. These days it's such a hackneyed word," he said. "In other countries 'love' and 'like' are not interchangeable."

Loving is like swimming
Once you've learned, you can't forget

But you'll never be a swimmer
If you don't like to get wet

—from Durst's "To Jesus." A student of etymology, Durst — who says his name in German means "thirst", feels languages are "nothing more than music." He said he sings in 10 languages — in English-speaking countries he sings his own compositions, and tries to learn a song in the native tongue of each country he visits.

But at least for a while, Durst, who lives in a Chicago suburb between tours, is sticking to English.

"I'm almost 33 and beginning to feel the pangs of importance of being a little more established; not so footloose," he said. "I've been given a gift, it's my responsibility not to abuse it."

Durst seems to be a free spirit.

"It's a word I created because I detest categorization. It's our nature to categorize," he said disparagingly. "I don't like being pigeonholed," he said. He compares his songsmithing to painting, in which an artist tries to get an idea across but people end up approaching the painting with their own experiences and perspectives anyway.

"I like making people think," he said. "I don't want things to be cut and dry, served on a platter."

James Durst is almost 33. He became James when he returned from his first trip to Europe in 1967, before which he had been just plain Jim. He said his first Europe trip — it was followed by others, including a three-year tour of Western and Eastern Europe and Southeast ality of the soul," he still thinks it's sensible to pay attention to one's present life, including the business aspects. He says he's a "travel junkie due for a fix" — his first choice would be Africa this time around — but he's going to stay in the United States for a while.

"You've got to maintain momentum," Durst said. "In this country audiences are very fickle. If you're not around to stroke them they'll forget you." He said he's been on the verge of success at home, gone to Europe for a tour, and had to start completely from scratch when he returned. "Now there's no more open-ended ticket," he said ruefully.

Durst is not disheartened by the crimps in his lifestyle.

"I'm in charge of my life," he said. "I'm in control as much as one can be in this tenuous business." The tenuous business in which he finds himself is the culmination of his

"It suddenly came to me when I was doing music on the side that this is what I want to do. It couldn't have been more obvious to me. But it's not as if all the doors opened and a voice said, 'Welcome, James, come enjoy the glow.'"

Being a singer, in other words, didn't come easy. It took the time between his days in college — where he majored first in pre-med, then music, then communications — and today for him to get established. He recently snared a decent business manager ("Good managers are not something you can go out on a tree and pick," he grumbled), which he said allows him more time to let the music flow.

"Music goes through me," he said. "Actually it's everybody's music. I just happened to be the one who wrote it down. I've learned how to tap a source of creativity. If I knew where it came from I would be able to say it's mine. It's my responsibility to get out and share it."

The types of things he writes about, he said, are what he feels.

5-year suspended sentence to Grant

Joe Grant, a self-described "born-again humanist" who was found guilty Aug. 30 of second-degree criminal mischief for painting peace slogans on Old Jet, was sentenced Thursday to up to five years in prison, a $500 fine and three years' probation by Johnson County District Court Judge Harold Swalles. The prison term was suspended.

After the sentencing, Grant's attorney, Duane Rohovit, said, "We are going to appeal."

At press time, Grant was not available for comment.

Many local observers were apparently dismayed by the strength of the sentence; one said, "I'm just numb. The same day Joe gets five years for painting 'Peace on Earth,' Gordon gets a measly 10."

He was referring to Richard Gordon, who pleaded guilty Sept. 20 to voluntary manslaughter in the strangulation of Orville Iverson. Judge Swalles Thursday sentenced Gordon to up to 10 years in prison.

On May 10, Grant painted "Peace on Earth" and "End War" on Old Jet, an Iowa City war memorial located at the city airport. The next day, Grant "confessed" to Iowa City police and local news media.

In his "confession," Grant said, "This act, performed by me alone against a chunk of junk that has absolutely no value, is my personal way of actively opposing a political system that has us tottering on the brink of a nuclear holocaust."

Last summer, Grant told reporters he did not regret his action and that he would paint Old Jet again.

"We can never allow ourselves to forget the price that men, women and families have had to pay to defend this country, but the memorials can not be weapons of war," he said.

Grant is on the November ballot as the Iowa Socialist Party candidate for governor.

Airline officials wait

Representatives of the nation's airlines are lined up Thursday outside the headquarters of the Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington, D.C., in a six-day, around-the-clock wait for President Carter to sign an airline deregulation bill. Once the bill is signed, the airlines will lose routes they have not been serving unless they inform the board, on a first-come, first-served basis, that they intend to serve them. First in line are representatives of United Air Lines.

Israeli jets buzz Palestinian camp

Beirut (UPI) — Israeli jets and helicopters Thursday buzzed a Palestinian camp in southwest Lebanon, residents said. Sudanese soldiers scouted out key bridges in the capital and said they would occupy them within 24 hours as part of an Arab peace drive.

The residents said the Israeli warplanes roared over the refugee camp of Ain Helweh near the port town of Sidon in the early evening, drawing intense bursts of anti-aircraft fire from Palestinian guerrilla positions.

One guerrilla official claimed the aircraft had intended to attack the camp.

Several Israeli boats were also sighted off the southwest Lebanese coast, a Lebanese reporter in the area said.

None of the planes was hit. There was also no immediate report of any aerial or sea bombardment or any casualties at Ain Helweh.

It was not immediately clear what prompted the reported overflights. But Israel often sends reconnaissance jets over the Palestinian-dominated southern quarter of Lebanon. Israeli troops invaded and occupied the area for three months earlier this year.

The Sudanese were taking over the strategic Beirut bridges as part of an Arab plan to separate warring Christian and Syrian forces in spite of reports from Khartoum that their entire 1,000-man contingent would be sent home next week.

The official Beirut radio later reported the Sudanese withdrawal decision appeared to be final. This, government sources said, probably meant that Saudi troops would eventually take over the positions.

The Sudanese were taking over the bridges and Saudi Arabian soldiers were moving into a strategic skyscraper in Christian East Beirut in an effort to drive a wedge between warring Christian militiamen and Syrian soldiers and enforce a shaky 12-day cease-fire.

The moves came as part of a security plan drawn up by President Elias Sarkis and approved earlier this week by countries contributing men or money to the Syrian-dominated Arab peacekeeping force used to end Lebanon's civil war in 1976.

"We will be deployed within 24 hours," said the Sudanese commander, Col. Mustafa Sughagroun. "There are no major difficulties."

But in Khartoum, the state-controlled Sudan News Agency quoted an unidentified government official as saying Sudan stood by an earlier decision to pull its contingent out of Lebanon when the peacekeeping force mandate expires next Thursday.

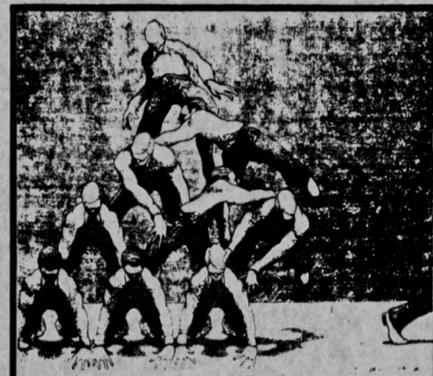

Sarkis sent Interior Minister Salah Salaman to Khartoum Tuesday to appeal to President Jaafar Numeiry to leave his 1,000 troops in the country. But the Sudanese leader refused to alter his stand, according to the agency.

The right-wing Phalangist Radio said the Syrian pullback from the bridges and the Rizk Tower skyscraper had been delayed "due to the fact that the Sudanese and Saudi troops wanted to reconnoiter the area they would be controlling."

The Sarkis security plan called for not only replacement of Syrian forces with Saudis and Sudanese on some battlefronts, but also a greater role for Lebanese army and police units in keeping law and order.

Syria will continue to have by far the strongest contingent in the 30,000-man Arab force and its units in East Beirut will not be withdrawn from the capital entirely, but rather regrouped in eastern suburban areas.

The Phalangist Radio reported sniping in some areas but said "all factions" would cooperate in implementation of the security plan.

136 pages. Cloth,
 $8.95. Paper, $4.95.

An evaluation of the stylistic experimentation that characterized this unprecedented
 decade of music-
 making. Two contradictory attitudes existed: an adherence to and a rejection of jazz conventions. This dichotomy created the stylistic diversity discussed here. No other single volume addresses itself to this subject in this way.

UNESCO
 PARIS (UPI) — A consultative phrase on state controls has been revoked slightly with a view
 narrowing its scope.
 UNESCO draft declaration on the mass media.
 The United Nations International, Scientific and Cultural Organization sees the change significant. But World
 sources said that it amounted to little more than a change of emphasis and that the declaration remains as unacceptable as ever.

Wide-screen to Union
 UI students may not wait much longer for the wide-screen television
 Union, Philip Silberstein
 program director, said
 today.
 Silberstein said he had ordered a new video camera unit and has been looking for the distributor that will repair the worn-out camera. The present unit is 3 years old.

John Paul II's Vatican shakeup

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II is planning a major shakeup of the Vatican bureaucracy and will likely remove many key church officials left over from the reign of Pope Paul VI, Vatican sources said Thursday.

The sources also said the new pope might travel to his native Poland next spring. When he was still a cardinal, John Paul II had extended an invitation to the late Pope Paul VI to visit Poland.

The sources said the main question facing Pope John Paul II is what to do about the powerful job of secretary of state, held for the past decade by French Cardinal Jean Villot.

The Vatican announced Wednesday that Villot had been asked to remain as secretary of state by the new pontiff and the French cardinal had agreed. He similarly had been reconfirmed in his job by the late Pope John Paul I during his brief 34-day reign.

However, the Vatican sources said Villot, who at 73 has already expressed a desire to retire, probably would stay in his post only for several months and then be replaced by an Italian.

Even during the reign of Pope Paul VI, Villot often complained privately that he did little more than attend ceremonial functions while the actual running of the Vatican and formulation of church policy was in the hands of his Italian assistants.

Because the new pope is Polish, the sources said, he would probably appoint an Italian in Villot's place after several months in order to balance the nationalities of the church's highest officials.

The man most often mentioned as Villot's eventual replacement is Bishop Agostino Casaroli, the Vatican's unofficial "foreign minister" who guided Paul VI's Ostpolitik overture to Communist government's of Eastern Europe.

UNESCO media-control resolution snags

PARIS (UPI) — A controversial phrase on state control of news has been reworded slightly with a view to narrowing its scope in a UNESCO draft declaration on the mass media.

The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization sees the change as significant. But Western sources said that it amounts to little more than a change in emphasis and that the declaration remains as unacceptable as ever.

The declaration will be debated at the 20th UNESCO General Conference opening Oct. 24 in Paris.

A new draft declaration circulated Thursday at UNESCO shows that Article 11 has been changed following criticism among Western news media when an earlier draft was released in August.

The latest version of the article states, "It is the duty of states to facilitate the application of the present declaration and to ensure that the mass media coming directly under their jurisdiction act in conformity therewith."

The August version read, "... mass media which has naturally come under their authority act in conformity therewith."

UNESCO Information Director Leon Davico said that Article 11 in the August version "gave rise to the conclusion that the draft declaration proposed that states must be responsible for the press. That was not at all the case. The article was meant to apply only to countries where the press is under jurisdiction and authority of the state, and there are some."

Wide-screen TV return to Union expected soon

UI students may not have to wait much longer for the return of wide-screen television in the Union, Philip Silberstein, Union program director, said Thursday.

Silberstein said he has ordered a new video beam camera unit and has been told by the distributor that it should arrive this week.

The present unit broke down the last week of August and, after it was determined that the camera was not worth repairing, a new one was ordered, he said.

"I'm expecting the new one any day now," he said. "I've been looking for it all week."

"Financially, it's not worth it to repair the worn-out unit," he said. "It's more economical to sell the old one and purchase a new one so we're trading it in on a similar model."

Silberstein said the UI replaced the worn-out unit with a substitute television set that will remain in the Union's Landmark Lobby until the new unit arrives and is installed.

The present unit is 3 years old

Sec'y of State race limps

DES MOINES (UPI) — Walt Griffin is frequently frustrated in his attempts to become the first Democratic secretary of state in 27 years and admits that most of his frustrations center on Republican incumbent Melvin Synhorst.

The 35-year-old Fayette Democrat says he has been unsuccessful in getting Synhorst to agree to joint appearances; his campaign fight often is with the incumbent's name, rather than the office; and, he constantly is confronted with the question, "What exactly is the job of secretary of state?"

"I am frustrated at seeing how insignificant the office is in Iowa when it is important in other states — in Illinois and Wisconsin, the office is second or third next to the governor,"

Griffin said. "Synhorst has a passive view when the secretary of state should have an active view."

In an effort to spark reaction from Synhorst, Griffin has traveled 70,000 miles throughout the state telling voters "it's time for a change" and labels the Republican's absence from political events as an "arrogance of power." This week, the Upper Iowa University history professor stood outside the incumbent's office with a mannequin, named the "Unknown Secretary of State."

"He's saying to the voters 'hey, you are dumb enough to vote for me and I don't even come to your hometown,'" Griffin said. "Synhorst says he will spend less than $1,000 on his campaign and I will attempt to turn this against him.

"I ask voters when I'm campaigning, 'when was the last time you saw Melvin Synhorst in your county?'"

The gimmicks apparently have little effect on Synhorst as he hustles about the Statehouse, overseeing the various duties of his office. He admits he campaigns little — "two nights and on weekends." After 14 terms in office, Synhorst says he is confident of his record and that most Iowans are satisfied with the performance of his office.

Election '78

He only chuckled in response to Griffin's challenges.

"Why would they (the voters) want a change?" he asked. "A change is necessary only if the incumbent is not doing a thoroughly good job."

Chewing on the handle of his black-rimmed glasses in thought, Synhorst continued, "I can point to many years of experience, my ability to get the job done at a low cost. I've proven those things, not gaudied. I've lived up to my statutory responsibility. His (Griffin's) contentions are only speculative."

"I'm running again because I find this the most interesting kind of life I can visualize for myself. I can continue to give good service to the public and I have many good productive years left."

Synhorst was first elected secretary of state in 1948 and has kept the post for all but two years since then, holding office longer than any other person in state government. He said a 15th term in office would not be unusual and would "give real stability to government."

A native of Orange City, Synhorst has spent the bulk of his life in Iowa. He attended the University of California in Los Angeles, Calif., but returned to Iowa City to earn both a bachelor's and law degree at the University of Iowa.

A newcomer to the office would "have to struggle along for a long period of time," Synhorst said. "The office deals with a broad spectrum. It takes a wide range of knowledge to cope. Experience is invaluable. I can do things in minutes and hours that it would take an inexperienced person to do in weeks."

Griffin dismisses that contention, insisting his background has prepared him for the post. He is on leave as a history and political science professor and as an associate academic dean at Upper Iowa.

Griffin served two terms on the Fayette Town Council and has been a member of the Democratic Central Committee since 1974. He earned bachelor's and master's degrees from Loyola University and the University of Cincinnati, respectively.

"My background relates very closely. My experience relates to the function of the office," said Griffin. "The principles of administration are much the same ... I am a professional historian by training. I see the job as being a spokesman for historical preservation."

"I feel the secretary of state should assume leadership. Of course, it's not all his fault, the Legislature is partly to blame, but, if he took the ball he's have quite an impact. I think my qualifications are pretty good."

"The big problem is a lot of people vote for Synhorst because he's the only candidate known. A lot of Iowans do not expect much from the office. I have to convince them to expect more," he said.

Former teachers, friends recall Grinnell woman

GRINNELL, Iowa (UPI) — Friends and former teachers remember Camille Njus, the 20-year-old Grinnell woman found murdered Tuesday, as an enthusiastic, bright student with a variety of interests.

Njus was "an all-around great kid," said political science Professor Ed Gilmour, her academic adviser at Grinnell College. "She was a bright kid with a promising future."

An unidentified man found Njus's decomposed body Tuesday as he searched for firewood in a remote area near the Des Moines River north of Des Moines and Dr. Dale M. Grunewald, deputy Polk County medical examiner, said the woman was murdered.

Njus, employed this summer by the Iowa Department of Transportation, was last seen at 8 p.m. Aug. 4 at a Des Moines beauty parlor, where she had an appointment.

She planned to come back to Grinnell that evening by bus and spend the weekend with her family, authorities said.

Njus spent considerable time in the German department at Grinnell and was "very enthusiastic," said Sigmund Barber, her German professor. "When a certain piece of knowledge interested her, she pursued it."

Barber had Njus in a course on German culture last spring. He said she was "very interested in the earlier works of Germanic literature."

Njus spent time in Germany last year on a Rotary scholarship, Barber said, adding, "She had good experiences there and planned on returning in the near future."

Barber also said Njus had been excited about going to St. John's College in Santa Fe, N.M. for a semester.

"I thought things looked very good for her," he said.

Grinnell sophomore Lori Ann Llewellyn said Njus was a "hard worker and she was really looking forward to St. John's."

She said Njus "was really into law and she spoke German real well. She liked to travel and she liked to meet people."

Gilmour said Njus had been active in the local Democratic Party.

Barber said he feared foul play when he heard Njus disappeared.

"When I heard she was missing, the outcome was no shock," he said. "She wasn't the type of girl who would disappear without warning."

Safe storage nuclear looks feasible

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Safe storage of radioactive waste for thousands of years is possible, scientists should begin examining possible dumpsites, a federal review group said Thursday.

Safely storing wastes that may be radioactive for centuries "appears technically feasible for periods of thousands of years," provided strict safeguards are observed, an interagency group reported.

John Deutch, the Department of Energy official who heads the review group, told reporters, "We think the technical basis exists for reliance on disposal of high-level wastes in geologic media."

Because the public's confidence is essential, Deutch said officials should seek a "social consensus" on disposal techniques by laying out scientific information, giving scientists a chance at thorough and independent review, providing practical experience and leaving room for corrections.

The general characteristics of a disposal site are more important than its composition, such materials as salt, basalt, granite, Deutch said.

Possible earthquake characteristics of water in an area and other factors — "shallow geologic context" — should determine the choice, he said.

Union lanes

Although sketches made during a consulting study depicted the Union's bookshelves cut from sixteen to ten in order to provide expanded space for the Union Books, a UI official said Thursday the lanes will remain intact.

Philip Hubbard, president of student services, said the UI still plans to expand the bookstore and has employed an architect who is currently "looking into space needs for the Union."

But, he added, "There are plans to remove any of the lanes."

Hubbard said the decision to remove eight of the lanes was made in part because of student opposition to the plan.

Safe storage of nuclear waste looks feasible

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Safe storage of radioactive waste for thousands of years is possible and scientists should begin examining possible dumping sites, a federal review group said Thursday.

Safely storing wastes that may be radioactive for centuries "appears technically feasible for periods of thousands of years," provided strict safeguards are observed, an interagency group reported.

John Deutch, the Department of Energy official who headed the review group, told reporters, "We think the technical basis exists for reliance on disposal of high-level wastes in geologic media."

Because the public's confidence is essential, Deutch said, officials should seek a "social consensus" on disposal techniques by laying out the scientific information, giving scientists a chance at thorough and independent review, providing practical experience, and leaving room for corrections.

The general characteristics of a disposal site are more important than its composition of such materials as salt, basalt or granite, Deutch said.

Possible earthquakes, characteristics of water in the area and other factors — "the geologic context" — should determine the choice, he explained.

Union lanes to stay intact

Although sketches made last spring by a consulting firm depicted the Union's bowling lanes cut from sixteen to eight in order to provide expansion space for the Union Bookstore, a UI official said Thursday that the lanes will remain intact.

Philip Hubbard, vice president for student services, said the UI still plans to expand the bookstore and has employed an architect who is currently "looking into space needs at the Union."

But, he added, "There are no plans to remove any of the lanes."

Hubbard said the decision not to remove eight of the lanes was made in part because of student opposition to the plan.

Successful disposal of radioactive wastes does not depend on the waste being reprocessed into something else, such as "glassifying" them, he said. Reprocessing creates leftovers of its own and has other debts.

The report suggested a storage facility could be operating on an intermediate scale by late 1986, while work continues on potential sites for long-term, larger repositories.

Deutch defined the intermediate-scale facility as something larger than merely a research and development facility, providing a full test of technical and engineering aspects of getting rid of atomic wastes.

The main "candidate" for that is the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant at Carlsbad, N.M., Deutch told reporters.

Deutch said successful burying of wastes can only be done if there is "much more attention to institutional issues" such as environmental concerns, a greater role for state and local officials and a regional approach to storage.

The report will be subjected to a month of public comment before becoming final.

"Detailed studies of specific potential repository sites in different geologic environments should begin immediately," it said.

All Screwed Up

(EVERYTHING'S READY, NOTHING WORKS)

SYNOPSIS: "EVERYTHING'S READY, NOTHING WORKS" completes Ms. Wurtmuller's trilogy (Love & Anarchy, Seduction of Mimi) on class, work, and sex in industrial society.

"Everything's Ready" tells of a group of Sicilian immigrants living together in a sort of commune in Milan, struggling desperately to survive economically and spiritually and inevitably failing.

CRITICS' COMMENTS:
"... a profoundly pessimistic comedy—and a work of stunning impact... a consistency of tone and style that eluded her in both Mimi and Love & Anarchy... here is a filmmaker of major importance working with full control and power."
—San Francisco Chronicle

"It's a marvelous film—as good or better than her two previous works. Her style is strong, assured and superbly effective... persuasive, richly diverting power..."
—Eichelbaum, San Francisco Examiner

"BREATHTAKING... EXUBERANTLY FUNNY! Watching 'All Screwed Up' is to be witness to a great talent."
—Vincent Canby, NY Times

"A BRILLIANT MOVIE that must be seen several times!"
—Rex Reed

"Funny, poignant... LINA WERTMULLER'S BEST YET!"
—Rex Sanders, WABC-TV

"UPROARIOUSLY FUNNY. A strong entertaining, daring film from Wurtmuller!"

Fellini's Casanova

Fellini's Casanova is the first film since Amarcord and the first in English. Adapting freely from Casanova's voluminous memoirs, Fellini presents an unflattering portrait of the legendary latin lover which traces his sexual history in scrupulous detail. Casanova's sexual encounters are choreographed so that they appear at once grotesque, pathetic and grimly humorous. In a memorable scene which brilliantly summarizes Fellini's view of the notorious rake, Casanova falls in love with a mechanical doll, dances with her across the enormous throne room of Wurtemberg Castle, negotiates her into bed and proceeds to make love as her mechanical head spins wildly at the climactic moment.

Blonde Venus

Marlene Dietrich, Herbert Marshall, Cary Grant, Dickie Moore, Sidney Toler.

One of the most popular Dietrich-Sternberg concoctions, Blonde Venus tells of a woman accepting money from a playboy to finance a treatment for her husband's terminal illness. When the husband misunderstands, she sets out on a journey across America. Highlights include Dietrich singing "Hot Voodoo" in an ape suit, and a luminous New Orleans bordello sequence that matches anything Sternberg has shot. Blonde Venus is Sternberg's only Dietrich film set in this county, but Sternberg's America, like his Russia or China, exists on no map we're ever likely to see.

The Beatles Yellow Submarine

THE YELLOW SUBMARINE

Animated, Songs and Narration by The Beatles
This animated tale of how the Beatles drove the Blue Meanies out of Pepperland is destined to be remembered as the most unique film in cinema history. The fantastic, crazy creatures which roam the picture's imaginative realm were created by Heinz Edelmann, and they instantly confer the status of immortality in the portals of pop-art to the film. The sharp and subtle puns and witticisms, both verbal and visual, come at such a rapid pace that it is impossible to begin to catch all of them in even three or four viewings. Its bright happiness and unpretentious directness is certain to delight any viewing audience at myriad levels of consciousness.

David Hardesty embraces his grandfather behind his family's house in Belleville, Mich., after learning that his brother Billy had killed his mother and three others in a seven-hour shooting spree Thursday. Police took the gunman into custody after wounding him on the front lawn.

Charges issued in Ypsilanti case

YPSILANTI, Mich. (UPI) — A stocky, unemployed farm hand known as a drug addict and barroom brawler Thursday allegedly killed four persons, including his mother and ex-brother-in-law, during a wild seven-hour shooting rampage.

Two other men were wounded, one critically, and the suspect himself was shot during a front-porch gunbattle with police at his mother's home. He was arrested and hospitalized for treatment of shoulder and abdominal wounds.

Police identified the suspect as Billy Edward Hardesty, 21. Authorities said Hardesty knew all of his victims. However, investigators declined to disclose the motive for the shootings.

Neighbors said the bushy-haired, well-built young man was "strung out on dope a lot" and had a violent temper — often sparked by jealousy — that led to numerous fights in bars.

But police said there was no evidence he was under the influence of drugs or alcohol at the time of the shootings.

Washtenaw County Prosecutor William Delhey issued a warrant charging Hardesty with three counts of first-degree murder and two counts of attempted murder. The case involving his mother's death was turned over to authorities in neighboring Wayne County, where that shooting occurred.

Two of the other victims were killed in the parking lot of an Ypsilanti bar at around the 1 a.m. CDT closing time, and a third man was killed and two others wounded at a machine shop owned by Hardesty's ex-in-laws. The shootings at the machine shop occurred around opening time at 6:20 a.m.

The suspect's mother, Jeanette Hardesty, 40, died of a single gunshot wound to the temple and was found in the bedroom of her bullet-riddled, ranch-style home. But police said it was not immediately determined if she had been killed with a .22-caliber rifle, the weapon her son allegedly used.

But, said State Police Lt. Robert Pifer, "All information available to us indicates she was not hit by police gunfire."

The parking lot victims were identified as Timothy Schofield, 21, and Troy Curry, 20.

Authorities said those shootings followed an altercation inside Abigail's Tavern on Michigan Avenue in Ypsilanti.

Hardesty's ex-brother-in-law, Daniel E. Wood, 38, was gunned down in the machine shop with two other men — Bobby Baker, 26, of Westland, and Tommy Lee Brown, in his 20s, of Tecumseh. Brown was critically wounded and Baker was reported in serious condition.

"The assailant walked into the shop where the three victims were on duty and, without warning, gunned them down," said Ypsilanti Police Chief John Moore.

Police discovered Hardesty at his mother's home after going there to check on his whereabouts once he had been pinpointed as the suspect in the earlier shootings. A gun battle ensued and ended in Hardesty's surrender at about 9:30 a.m.

Neighbors said Hardesty, divorced for the past two years and unemployed since a part-time stint as a farm hand during the summer, had been hospitalized for drug addiction about six months ago.

"I talked to him last night and he seemed like he was calm and nothing was wrong," said neighbor Sandy Eichstadt. "He had a hot temper. When someone would talk about his wife or kid, he would blow up."

Of his past behavior, she said, "He was pretty much allowed to run wild, but he got along with his mother pretty well. To shoot his mother, he must have really gone bananas."

15-month sentence likely for Estes

FORT WORTH, Texas (UPI) — Texas wheeler-dealer Billie Sol Estes, who admitted to a federal judge he conspired to cheat on his taxes and violate his parole, likely will serve 15 months in prison under terms of a plea bargain, the government's chief investigator said Thursday.

But by pleading guilty, the church-going convicted swindler won government assurance that no other charges would be brought against him and that his family, including his wife, older brother and eldest daughter, would be granted immunity from prosecution.

Estes' admission of guilt Wednesday came only a few months after he had told reporters he was innocent and that federal prosecutors were harassing him and attempting to "blackmail" him into prison.

"His parole will be revoked, but for what period of time, we don't know," said U.S. Attorney

Ken Mighell. "It's up to the Parole Commission. They have to give him a hearing and we don't know when that will be."

But Mighell said the terms of the plea bargain called for "a prison term of about 15 months."

If the U.S. Parole Commission were to order Estes back to prison for the remaining nine years of his 1965 sentence or if U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon chose to assess a harsher punishment than 15 months, Estes could end the arrangement with the government.

"But then he would open himself to the likelihood of an indictment and trial on the same or possibly stiffer charges," the prosecutor said.

On Wednesday Estes, 52, his hair now graying but still wearing the horn-rimmed glasses which made him look more like a college professor than one of the legendary swindlers of all time, calmly pleaded guilty to conspiring to defraud the government by "fronting" his businesses with associates and family and by concealing assets from the IRS. Mahon said he would determine Estes' punishment after a presentence investigation by the parole board. He said in the meantime Estes would remain free without posting bond.

In the early 1960s, Estes' name became synonymous with easy money as he amassed a fortune with phantom fertilizer tanks. His net worth once reached as high as $250 million, but his paper empire crumbled into bankruptcy.

He was sentenced to 15 years in federal prison in 1965, but was paroled in 1971. He returned to Abilene, Texas, took on a job as a janitor and truck driver dispatcher and announced he was abandoning high finance.

But Mighell said Estes' court appearance ended an 18-month investigation that was launched by the reports Estes had violated the terms of his federal parole

Women need team race in Big Ten

By CATHY GREITENBUCHER
Staff Writer

If Iowa runs a strong, balanced team race, the Hawkeye women could disrupt pre-meet predictions in the Big Ten championship, Coach Jerry Hassard said.

"Our objective is to bring up our forces from the rear," Hassard said of the Saturday meet scheduled for Madison, Wis. "Our front runners have been competing well, but it takes the whole team to compete. If we can bring up the forces from the rear, we could do it."

The Iowa coach, describing the league meet as "one of our major points of focus this season," said he remains optimistic about his teams chances despite the loss of freshman Liz Mitchell.

"She's out for the season with an illness now unfortunately. That definitely hurt us," he said. "Her loss hopefully will have a positive effect on some of our other runners, who now will have to fill her shoes and maybe more."

Wisconsin, fourth at nationals last year, is easily picked as the favorite to win the 5,000-meter race after handing three-time defending AIAW champ Iowa State its first loss ever in a meet last week. Although the Hawks are only a second-year team Hassard isn't about to go into the meet with a defeatist attitude.

"We're gonna deal with these teams. There are two front-running teams — Wisconsin and Michigan State. After that, it's there for the getting," he explained. "Minnesota and Illinois are a little above us right now because they both finished ahead of us at the Iowa State Invitational. Ohio State is a decent team, but not great. As for the others (Northwestern, Indiana and Purdue), I don't really think they'll be contenders."

The Badgers and Spartans are among the most experienced teams in the conference. Michigan State edged Wisconsin in the first Big Ten meet two years ago, but the '77 meet was not held. Both are veteran teams and have run against national powers this fall such as Iowa State, Penn State and Colorado.

Minnesota graduated All-American Cathie Twomey, who led the squad to a 14th place finish at nationals last year, but continue to be a strong force in the Midwest. The Gophers finished second to the Cyclones at the Iowa State Invitational and won a 16-team invitational last week at Southern Illinois.

Illinois was a strong fourth at the ISU meet, but the Illini have had problems with injuries this fall. Another fourth-year team, Ohio State, has run well this year against Eastern Michigan and Penn State.

Northwestern has also had injury problems this year, while the two Indiana schools — Purdue and Indiana — are in their first year of intercollegiate competition. Michigan does not have a women's cross country team.

Hassard doesn't think Wisconsin has the team title sewn up. "Michigan State is the only team that could challenge them. They (the Badgers) seem to be hot. They're going to be sky high after beating Iowa State and they're not going to let any team intimidate them. But there may be a letdown after a big meet like that," he said.

The Iowa lineup is scheduled to include Susie Blossfeld, Karen Fishwild, Pam Griffin, Sue Marshall, Kay Stormo and Zanetta Weber. Either Eileen Davis or Bev Boddicker will run in the seventh spot, depending on who is healthier. Davis is slowed by an ankle injury while Boddicker is coming back from a severe knee puncture caused by a wooden stake.

Coaches are allowed to enter 12 runners, but must name a seven-woman lineup the night before the meet. "We're trying to get everyone to run, including some of our injured runners who are coming back like Becky Krekeler and Diane Schlader," Hassard said.

"Blossfeld is still improving, still coming along well. She's starting to put pressure on our front runners," the coach said. "Fishwild and Griffin are currently fourth and fifth, and they need to be closer to our front runners. Both have been putting in a lot of miles, and I'm pleased with their increased devotion to running."

"Marshall is really picking up. She went out last week with the top two and stayed with them for the first mile," he said. "Weber and Stormo have been our top two runners. They've both gone under 18:30, and that's competitive with most of the top Big Ten runners."

While Hassard feels his team could do well in the meet, he's not making any predictions. "I don't expect anything. It's all up to them (the runners). It would take momentum away from the team if we expect things. The team has to go out and do something dynamic. When you expect something it sounds like its gonna drop in your lap," he explained.

Hassard is hoping the meet will make the rest of the conference aware of Iowa. "The greatest thing is not what we expect but the opportunity we have to go out and show other teams what we can do," he said. "If we can place as well as we did in outdoor track (fourth in the Big Ten), it will be a tribute to our cross country team, especially because it is a much younger program and team. It will indicate bigger and better things to come for indoor and outdoor track."

Hawks prepare for tennis finale

Coach Cathy Ballard's tennis squad hopes to finish its fall season with a victory over Minnesota and Illinois, despite the absence of Kelly Harding, the Hawkeyes' No. 4 player.

The absence of Harding, who is sidelined with an ankle injury, will force Iowa's No. 5 and 6 players to move up a step against a Minnesota squad which qualified for the national meet last season. Ballard will still be able to count on Karen Kettenacker, the state collegiate champion, to handle the No. 1 singles match and Nancy Smith and Laura Lagan to compete at No. 2 and 3.

Sophomore Rita Murphy will move up one spot to play No. 4 while junior Joy Rabinowitz will also move up to take the No. 5 spot.

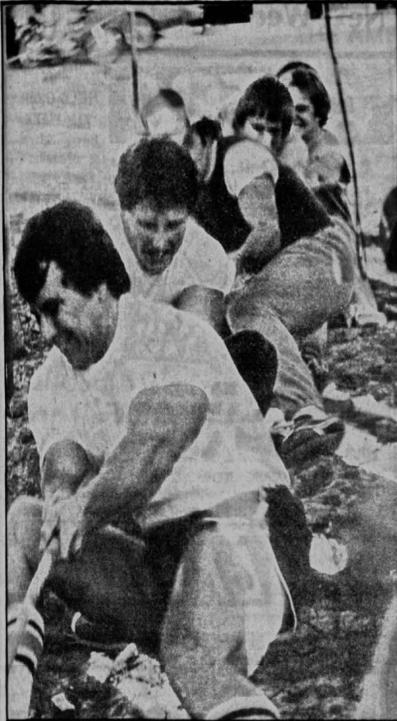

Freshman Mary Larsen will play her first singles match for Iowa at the No. 5 position for the Hawkeyes, who will host the Gophers in a match scheduled to begin at 8 a.m. at the Rec Building. Iowa State and Illinois will join Minnesota and Iowa in the quadrangular meet whose remaining matches on Friday will be at the Library Courts. Iowa will rise with the sun again on Saturday to play Illinois at 8 a.m. in the Rec Building.

Iowa is fresh from the state tournament where the Hawkeyes picked up their first ever state crown by unseating Drake, the champion since 1973. "The entire squad has been working on consistency and applying the pressure through aggressive play. The squad is eager for this match, particularly because Minnesota qualified for the national meet last year and it should be a good indication of our strength against a national calibre team. And of course they're an old rival that we just like to beat," Ballard explained.

Although the quadrangular will mark the end of the fall season for the UI women, Ballard will continue working with her team throughout the winter in preparation for next spring and the AIAW regional meet.

"I feel the progress we've made this year has been considerable. We've increased the level of tennis at Iowa tenfold, but we still have quite a way to go. We reached one goal which was the state championship and now our next major goal is to win at regionals. But for this weekend our goal is to beat Minnesota and there is a lot of pressure on us since we're missing one of our players. We'll just go out there and do our best and I guess win it for Kelly," Ballard added.

Retaining the men's tug crown was Delta Sigma Delta with a triumph over Burlington Northern in a time of 19 seconds. DSD won preliminary matches against Rienow 5th, Spectrum and Sigma Phi Epsilon. Team members were Mike Fuller, Brian Harvey, Russ Fortune, Terry Donnelly, Tom Swoyer and Mark Essy.

Chi Omega out-pulled Out-of-Season to gain its second women's tug title in a time of 12.5. Alpha Phi and Highlanders fell victim as the champs made a path to the finals. Dianna Muhs, Nancy Foster, Mary Larson, Suzy Showers, Susan Devitt and Patty Trestenjak provided the team's muscle power.

Another two-time winner were the Carroll Hawkeyes, who easily overcame Ethel's Gang in an impressive 5.5. The co-ed champs earned their spot in the finals by defeating the Highlanders. The sextet consisted of Fred Kinkaid, Jerry Runtia, Bill McCleau, Peg Augspurger, Deb Onken and Sue Flanders.

Participation was good as 22 men's, 11 women's and four co-ed squads entered the sixth annual competition. In order to advance to the finals, teams competed in single elimination tugs.

The final tugs provided good competition, according to Ann McDonnell of the IM department. "I thought we had some real fine teams in the finals," she said. "Burlington Northern gave the DSDs a run for their money as all the rest of the DSD's matches were under 10 seconds."

When asked for the key to their win, a DSD tugger revealed that it was their technique and strong teeth.

The finalists did not go away empty-handed as the Field House bar donated three pitchers of beer to the winners and two to the runners-up, according to McDonnell.

IM flag football playoffs will kick off Tuesday with the top two squads from each division earning a place in the schedule.

Two important games are to be contested before football playoffs begin. Top-ranked One will be out to prove their supremacy when they face No. 9 Pessio Reomers at 1 p.m. Sunday. Rienow 5th will attempt to clear a forfeit blemish from their record as they challenge Kelly's Heroes at 5 p.m. Sunday.

Kessinger named White Sox manager

CHICAGO (UPI) — Veteran infielder Don Kessinger Thursday accepted a job he neither wanted nor sought — manager of the Chicago White Sox for 1979.

Announcement of Kessinger, 36, as the third playing manager employed by Sox' President Bill Veeck came in a room packed with reporters. Kessinger replaces Larry Doby at the White Sox' helm.

Veeck, who previously had both Lou Boudreau and Marty Marion as playing managers, also announced former Oakland A's manager Bobby Winkles, Joe Sparks and Fred Martin would coach under Kessinger.

Doby will be batting instructor for the entire White Sox system, Veeck said.

Winkles, 47, who coached Arizona State to three national collegiate championships, managed the California Angels for two seasons and coached at California, Oakland and San Francisco. He was manager of the Oakland A's this season and had the team in first place in its division when he resigned May 23.

Sparks, 40, played 13 years in the minors and has managed White Sox farm teams for the past seven years.

Martin, 63, who was credited with teaching the Chicago Cubs' Bill Sutter the split-finger fastball, has been in the Cubs' organization for several years. Kessinger said he would rely heavily on advice from Winkles, Sparks and Martin.

"To say I'm inexperienced would be an understatement," Kessinger said. "But Winkles is one of the best around and Sparks has managed many, many guys on the club and everyone speaks of him in the highest terms. I know he'll be strong on fundamentals and I wanted Martin to help with a young pitching staff."

Kessinger said he signed a one-year contract and asked for no more.

"Managing was not one of my great aspirations," he said. "I never had any idea of managing. I think it was the challenge of managing the team that made me accept."

He said the possibility of managing the White Sox was not "discussed until after the season. It was not something I solicited."

Kessinger has played 14 years in the major leagues, 11 of them with the Chicago Cubs after a stint with the St. Louis Cardinals. He came to the White Sox in 1977 and last month signed a $125,000-player contract with the White Sox for 1979.

"I guess I have two contracts now," he said.

Kessinger started games at second base, shortstop and third base for the White Sox last year and said he could play any of the three positions in 1979. How much he plays, he said, "will depend on how the other guys do."

Kessinger will scout potential players in the instructional league in Florida, where he already has spent one week with Veeck, studying players and talking contract. Veeck said Kessinger will have a voice in any trades the club might contemplate.

"I don't know whether I can give a picture of me as a manager," Kessinger said. "I've never been there. I'm going to make mistakes, a lot of them."

Kessinger, rating the managers for whom he has played, said "I think I learned more from Leo Durocher than anybody else." But he emphasized that he would not attempt to "pattern" himself after any manager.

"I didn't say I agreed with everything Durocher did. I think my personality would lean toward the Bob Lemon type."

Then, after the Royals had dropped their third game to the Yankees in the playoffs, Herzog hinted that the club had backed him into a corner because it would not talk contract until after the playoffs.

"It doesn't seem right," Herzog said at the time. "They haven't said a thing about me or my coaches for next year. I think they should tell me something."

Happy N.Y. Yankee fans hold parade for champs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Nearly two million deliriously happy New York Yankee fans Thursday threw a massive "computer card" ticker-tape parade for the World Series champs in the Wall Street area.

Leaning from windows, sitting atop traffic lights, crushing police barricades, they showered their comeback heroes — and the streets — with paper tape, multicolored computer cards, shredded computer programs, IBM magnetic tapes and perfumed love letters.

The usually pinstriped Yankees, dressed in unfamiliar civies, blew back kisses, signed autographs, wagged their fingers to proclaim their No. 1 status and prayed that their 650-member police guard would hold the fans back as the parade wound its way up Broadway.

"This is great — but then it's always great in New York," said Hall of Famer Yogi Berra, a Yankee coach, as he surveyed the pandemonium.

Unofficial police estimates said about two million people packed the parade route, sidestreets and surrounding skyscrapers to pay homage to the Yankees.

At City Hall, a crowd of more than 20,000 jammed into an area that usually holds 7,000, topping barricades and forcing their way to the makeshift platform, within inches of the players.

Officers quickly surrounded the players and forced fans back, only to have them surge in and again. Police said no arrests were made but one patrolman and one spectator suffered minor injuries. Six children were reported lost.

Yankee shortstop Bucky Dent, the Series' Most Valuable Player, clearly reveled in the crowd — even enjoying the slightly ribald signs drawn by adoring teen-age girls.

"I love it. It's a good feeling," he said, with his wife, Stormy, adding, "Yeah, I keep pointing 'em out to him."

"Hope I get out of this alive," said Manager Bob Lemon. "I haven't come back down to earth yet. Since July 25, it's been wonderful. I thought I'd be lying on a couch watching the series."

Lemon was fired by the Chicago White Sox earlier this year and then hired by the Yankees after Billy Martin resigned.

The crowd chanted "Reggie, Reggie" until they got their wish, with Jackson begging the crowd to calm down. "I wish the whole thing was a lot cooler," he told one reporter worriedly.

Mayor Edward Koch, his semi-bald pate covered with technicolor confetti, called the parade the biggest since World War II and declared Thursday "New York Yankee World Championship Day" to the cheers of fans.

Lemon and Dent were to be presented with keys to the city but the ceremony was cut short because of the pressing crowd.

Herzog signs one-year contract

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The Kansas City Royals resigned Manager Whitey Herzog Thursday to a one-year contract, apparently coming up with enough money to sway Herzog from his insistence on a multi-year pact.

Terms of the contract, predictably, were not disclosed. Herzog, however, was one of baseball's highest paid managers last season when he earned approximately $90,000.

Herzog has been one of the most successful managers in baseball since taking over the Royals on July 24, 1975. He finished that year 41-25 and has since directed the Royals to 90-72, 102-60 and 92-70 records to win three straight Western Division titles. His 325-227 overall record breaks down to a .589 winning percentage.

His signing ended almost two weeks of speculation that he would not return to the Royals following Kansas City's elimination in the American League playoffs for the third straight year by the New York Yankees.

Herzog voiced displeasure with the Royals on the eve of the playoffs, saying he was annoyed that the front office had not given him a vote of confidence nor offered to extend his contract during August when the club was making its successful stretch run in the Western Division.

Then, after the Royals had dropped their third game to the Yankees in the playoffs, Herzog hinted that the club had backed him into a corner because it would not talk contract until after the playoffs.

"It doesn't seem right," Herzog said at the time. "They haven't said a thing about me or my coaches for next year. I think they should tell me something."

Free agent Rose wants more money

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Free agent Pete Rose said Thursday he is seeking more money than the Cincinnati Reds have offered him because, "I feel I'm at the top of my profession and I can't live with the fact that 13 or 14 other guys can make more money than I can playing baseball."

"My whole point is, I've worked awfully hard the past 16 years and I really dedicated myself to the fans, the city of Cincinnati and to baseball in general," Rose said. "I think last year when I accomplished the hitting streak and the 3,000th hit, I finally made it to the top of my profession. And, I feel I'm at the top of my profession, I shouldn't be anywhere from 12th, 13th, 14th, or 15th on the payroll."

"I may be wrong, but I just can't live with the fact that 13 or 14 other guys in this country can make more money playing baseball than I can."

"That," said Rose, "is the whole thing in a nutshell."

Although Rose has not disclosed what the Reds have offered him, it's believed to be close to $400,000 a year.

"There are other players with lesser records making $600,000, $650,000, $550,000," he said. "How do you think that makes me feel?"

Rose figured the Reds can afford to pay him what he wants.

"We've got the greatest fans, we've got the greatest players, we draw 2.5 million people every year, we're the winningest team in the 70s. So, if all this is true, you should have the highest paid players in baseball too."

"When they said they offered me the highest salary in the history of the Reds, that was true," added Rose, "because up till last year the highest salary ever was $265,000."

However, Rose insisted that because of bonuses to some Reds' players, the club's offer to him of its highest "salary" ever still would not make him the top paid Red in total money.

Dodgers top 1978 All-Star selections

NEW YORK (UPI) — First baseman Steve Garvey, the Los Angeles Dodgers' leading hitter, and three other members of the National League champions were named Thursday to the 1978 UPI National League All-Star team.

Dodgers named to the squad along with Garvey, whose .316 batting average ranked third in the league, were second baseman Dave Lopes, outfielder Reggie Smith and pitcher Burt Hooton.

The remainder of the squad was composed of third baseman Pete Rose and outfielder George Foster of the Cincinnati Reds, starting pitcher Gaylord Perry and relief pitcher Rollie Fingers of the San Diego Padres, outfielder Dave Parker of the Pittsburgh Pirates, shortstop Larry Bowa of the Philadelphia Phillies and catcher Ted Simmons of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Iowa volleyball team faces a challenge to Saturday when it travels to Drake University for a 30-team Invitational. The team is divided into three pools with Iowa meeting Dakota State at 7 p.m. before advancing to elimination rounds. Coach Georgeann Greig is optimistic about the team's chances. "I'm capable of winning over the larger colleges. We've got a lot of the teams, but we know what to expect from South Dakota." "We're going to try everything going and on the execution of the fundamentals, which is exceptional during our at Northern Iowa." "Greene said she plans as many players as adding that many are to mid-terms. "I think well if we're rested, we've been hard on and a lot of the girls tally exhausted. We've the fast sets, but will improve the basics." "The Hawkeyes will be the services of junior Roche, who will be sidelined for the invitational may be back for next Big Ten tournament." "I'm going to try to the players. Everyone equal ability right now can get out offense and going we should do re at this tournament a Big Ten," she concluded.

Griese s for first t
By United Press Int... Bob Griese is expected to make his first start Sunday when the Dolphins play the New Patriots for first place in the AFC Eastern Division. "Griese played the half of the San Diego Sunday without any all," said Miami Coach Shula. "I said early that he has had a practice week and continues, and if he physically and feels there's a good chance against New England." "New England, Miami at 5-2, is hoping a four-game winning began with a dramatic minute victory at Oakland." "Elsewhere Sunday Bay visits Minnesota at 10 in New York Philadelphia at Dallas at Seattle, Denver at New Orleans at San Francisco, St. Louis at Atlanta at San Diego at Detroit, Tampa Bay and Buffalo. Unbeaten hosts Houston Monday."

Sooners Iowa Sta
By United Press Int... Everybody needs Oklahoma's Billy Sims exception. He missed running backs Thom Kenny King last Saturday 17-16 victory. Ranked 2-3 behind No. 1 Oklahoma game, Lott and hopeful starters against Iowa State Eight Conference. Last weekend, ho shouldering the Sooner ground at Kansas, gained 19 scored a touchdown. Sims ranks 10th with a 123.8 yard a games. "We looked ter Kansas," conceded Coach Barry S. definitely were ball club without I. I'm looking for Iowa as tough as any year. Maybe people listening to coach say there's not in teams anymore. Southern California LSU and Texas A got heat and we didn't." "Southern Cal, d second to the No. losing to Arizona recoup against Saturday; Mich from fourth to Wisconsin; LSU, 10th to 13th, pla and Texas A&M, notches to No. 14, Baylor.

Spikers head to Drake for tourney

The Iowa volleyball team faces a challenge tonight and Saturday when it travels to Des Moines for the 30-team Drake Invitational. The teams will be divided into three pools of 10 apiece with Iowa meeting South Dakota State at 7 p.m. Each team will play four matches before advancing to single elimination rounds.

Coach Georganne Greene said she is optimistic about the team's chances. "I think we're capable of winning over some of the larger colleges. We've seen a lot of the teams, but we don't know what to expect from North and South Dakota," she said. "We're going to try to get everything going and we'll work on the execution of basic fundamentals, which weren't exceptional during our games at Northern Iowa."

Greene said she plans to start as many players as possible, adding that many are tired due to mid-terms. "I think we'll do well if we're rested, but this week has been hard on everyone and a lot of the girls are mentally exhausted. We won't use the fast sets, but will just try to improve the basics," she said.

The Hawkeys will be without the services of junior Marie Roche, who will remain sidelined for the invitational but may be back for next week's Big Ten tournament, Greene said.

"I'm going to try to involve all the players. Everyone is of equal ability right now so if we can get out offense and defense going we should do really well at this tournament and at the Big Ten," she concluded.

Griese set for first test

By United Press International
Bob Griese is expected to make his first start of the season Sunday when the Miami Dolphins play the New England Patriots for first place in the AFC Eastern Division.

"Griese played the second half of the San Diego game (last Sunday) without any problem at all," said Miami Coach Don Shula. "I said early this week that he has had a pretty good practice week and if that continues, and if he holds up physically and feels good, then there's a good chance he'll start against New England."

New England, tied with Miami at 2-2, is hoping to extend a four-game winning streak that began with a dramatic, last-minute victory at Oakland.

Elsewhere Sunday, Green Bay visits Minnesota, Washington is at New York Giants, Philadelphia at Dallas, Oakland at Seattle, Denver at Baltimore, New Orleans at unbeaten Los Angeles, St. Louis at New York Jets, Cleveland at Kansas City, Atlanta at San Francisco, San Diego at Detroit, Chicago at Tampa Bay and Cincinnati at Buffalo. Unbeaten Pittsburgh hosts Houston Monday night.

Sooners test Iowa State

By United Press International
Everybody needs a buddy and Oklahoma's Billy Simms is no exception. He missed injured running backs Thomas Lott and Kenny King last Saturday in a scary 17-16 victory over Kansas.

Ranked 2-3 behind Simms in No. 1 Oklahoma's running game, Lott and King are hopeful starters this Saturday against Iowa State in a Big Eight Conference encounter. Last weekend, however, Simms shouldering the brunt of the Sooner ground attack against Kansas, gained 192 yards and scored a touchdown.

Sims ranks 10th in the nation with a 123.8 yard average for six games.

"We looked terrible against Kansas," concedes Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer. "We definitely were not the same ball club without Lott and King. I'm looking for Iowa State to be as tough as any we've had this year. Maybe people will start listening to coaches when they say there's not much difference in teams anymore. You can ask Southern California, Michigan, LSU and Texas A&M. They all got beat and we were lucky we didn't."

Southern Cal, dropping from second to the No. 7 rating after losing to Arizona State, tries to recoup against Oregon State Saturday; Michigan, falling from fourth to ninth, meets Wisconsin; LSU, skidding from 10th to 13th, plays Kentucky, and Texas A&M, down eight notches to No. 14, goes against Baylor.

Hawkeyes hope offense is real

BY HOWIE BEARDSLEY
Assoc. Sports Editor

It wouldn't be a bit surprising to see either Coach Woody Hayes or Iowa counterpart Bob Cummings fall to their knees in prayer before Saturday's 12:30 (Iowa time) kickoff in Ohio Stadium. For Hayes, the problem at hand is trying to find a way to piece together a defense before the Hawks visit Columbus. On the other side of the field, Cummings will be hoping that his newly-formed offensive attack will keep from coming unglued.

Following last week's 27-16 loss at the hands of Purdue, the Buckeyes find themselves with an unusual 2-2-1 record. Hayes and the boys haven't had a rockier start since the 1967 season—when both Ohio State and Michigan (24-15 upset victims to Michigan State on Saturday) last fell to conference teams on the same day. And, just to be able to enjoy the way things used to be in the Big Ten, '87 was also the year Indiana took the flight to the Rose Bowl—the last league team other than the Buckeyes or Wolverines to earn the trip to Pasadena.

The problem for the Buckeyes has been a defense which has given up 62 points in their last two outings and ranks dead last in the conference against the pass. Opposing quarterbacks have had a heyday with the Buckeye secondary tossing for 1,122 yards for a 224.4 per game average.

"We've had more than our fair share of injuries this season," Hayes said. "We were brand new in the defensive backfield (against Purdue) and teams are aware of that and take advantage of it."

If you're beginning to get the impression that the Buckeye defense is going to lay down and die in front of the Hawkeyes, forget it. Not with the likes of All-American Tom Cousineau and a host of All-Big Ten selections on hand. Cousineau has already accounted for 122 tackles from his linebacker position to help place the Buckeyes third in the league against the rush with a 132.8 average. He'll be joined by end Kelton Dansler and second team All-Big Ten picks Byron Cato at tackle and Paul Ross at the other end position. Mike Guess, a third member of the 1977 all-conference first team, will lend his services toward helping the Ohio State secondary get on track.

Facing the Ohio State defense will be an Iowa offensive attack that was finally able to move the football after five tries in Saturday's 22-20 loss to Minnesota. Behind the guidance of Jeff Green, the Hawks piled up 333 yards while sustaining drives of 93 and 89 yards for three second half touchdowns. Green's achievements included 12 of 23 pass completions for 205 yards and a pair of touchdown runs.

"Jeff Green can really do a number for you. He's got some quickness and honest to God I expect him to have another great game if he gets some help," Cummings said. "If we can continue making headway with our offense, we can still have a good year," Cummings said. "We can't go into the game with the idea that defense can win it for us. But with the idea that the defense can save it for us."

Defensively, the Hawks will have their hands full facing an Ohio State offense that averages 401 yards per game (251.8 on the ground and 149.2 through the air).

Freshman quarterback Art Schlichter will man a backfield that has gone through a facelift due to a horde of injuries since the start of the season. "For instance, last week we had our second center out there, and of course we have a freshman quarterback, then our fullback was out," Hayes said. "We went to our third and fourth halfbacks and, of course, they had worked out all week, but that was all the work they'd done. So we went with a completely new backfield, right down from the center to the quarterback, the fullback and the tailback."

Cummings will be expecting the Iowa defense to keep an eye on the freshman quarterback who passed for 289 yards against Purdue, ran for an additional 64 and is currently tied with Michigan's Rick Leach for Big Ten scoring honors with 30 points. "Schlichter is a fine freshman quarterback and a premiere running quarterback," Cummings said. "People think of them as a passing team, but they're averaging better than 250 yards a game rushing."

Although Schlichter has completed 41 passes for 675 yards, Hayes seems to agree with Cummings on the rushing game.

"We won't throw as much against Iowa. They're a good football team," Hayes said. "But if you're trying to get me to say something to charge them up or get them mad, forget it. I'm not going to say a hell of a lot about that. That's just bad politics."

The Hawks will be looking for their first win over the Buckeyes in 15 years before the usual sellout crowd of 87,500 in Ohio Stadium.

"We've done crazy things in the last two weeks and we've lost by only six points," Cummings said. "As long as we can play zone and our linebackers are wheeling and dealing we'll do a good job against them."

Tackle Joe Hufford (knee strain) and quarterback Bob Cummings Jr. (rib injury) will not make the trip to Columbus while Buckeye Rod Gerald, switched from quarterback to wide receiver this season, is out with a chipped elbow bone. Ohio State tailback Ron Springs is a doubtful player due to a knee injury. Kevin Ellis will get the call as the Hawkeyes' starting strong cornerback in place of the injured Cedric Shaw.

Are the 'Big Two' dead?

Michigan State and Purdue took a step toward ending the "Big Two" domination in the Big Ten last week by knocking off Michigan and Ohio State, respectively. The last time Michigan and Ohio State lost on the same day was exactly 11 years ago to the day when the same two teams defeated them.

Purdue (2-0 in the Big Ten) will try to keep sole possession of the Big Ten lead Saturday when they travel to Illinois for a regionally-televised game. The Illinois (1-3-2) are coming off a 20-20 tie with undefeated Wisconsin last week. Illinois has been a menace to the Boiler-makers in previous seasons, winning six of the last eight contests between the two schools.

After a 24-15 upset at Michigan, Michigan State will entertain Indiana before a sellout homecoming crowd at East Lansing. Michigan State (1-1 in league play and 2-3 overall) features a potent passing attack with quarterback Ed Smith, UPI and AP Big Ten Offensive Player of the Week, and receivers Mark Brammer, Kirk Gibson and Eugene Byrd among the league leaders.

Indiana displayed a productive offensive attack last week in beating Northwestern last week, 38-10. The Hoosiers rolled up 412 yards, 162 coming from tailback Mike Harkrader. That was the highest rushing output of the year in the Big Ten. The Hoosiers and Spartans played to a 13-13 tie last year in Bloomington.

Wisconsin has yet to be defeated, but dropped the top spot in the Big Ten after the tie with Illinois. The Badgers (4-0-1) will face a tough task this week against Michigan. Michigan, smarting after a 24-15 loss to state rival Michigan State last week, takes a 4-1 record into Wisconsin before a capacity crowd of 79,000 in Camp Randall Stadium. The Wolverines defeated Wisconsin 56-0 last year, after the Badgers' 5-0 start.

Ohio State (2-2-1) will be trying to break out of a third place logjam in the Big Ten when they meet Iowa before the usual sellout crowd of 87,000 in Ohio Stadium. Both the Buckeyes and Iowa (1-4) were defeated last week by Purdue and Minnesota, respectively. The Hawkeyes' comeback effort fell short at Minnesota last week, losing a 22-20 decision to the Gophers. Freshman Art Schlichter is likely to test the Iowa pass defense which is ninth in the Big Ten. Likewise, the Hawkeyes' new-found passing hope, Jeff Green, will be facing the Big Ten's worst pass defense.

Minnesota (2-3) has an excellent chance to move up in the conference race this weekend when they travel to Northwestern to face the winless Wildcats. The Gophers bounced back last week after three straight losses to beat Iowa, 22-20. Quarterback Mark Carlson and tailback Marion Barber led the charge against the Hawkeyes. Carlson has a passing percentage of .631, tops in the Big Ten.

Northwestern has the Big Ten's second leading passer in Kevin Strasser but may find it tough to throw this week against No. 2 pass defense in the Big Ten. Meanwhile, the Wildcats possess the No. 1 pass defense in the league with a 103.3 yards per game average. Northwestern is still trying to get into the win column after a 0-5-1 start.

On the Line with the DI sports staff

After taking such a pounding with the overcast predictions on the World Series, the DI weather staff has a chance to redeem itself in this week's On the Line contest.

According to the weather department's BS-100 black-and-white radar screen and a majority of the readers, the Hawkeyes are in for a bleak day at Ohio State. Our fearless weather-watchers are also predicting hell to freeze over before Colorado will "Buffalo" over Nebraska. But they foresee an Iowa State upset over Oklahoma.

We think the weather people have been gazing at too many stars by predicting Wisconsin to battle Michigan to a tie. If that's the case, you can bet the forecast will be severe storm warnings over Ann Arbor. The radar is also indicating that the sun will shine brighter in the South after Florida State deals Pittsburgh its second straight defeat.

The weather department seems to think it can't go wrong with its picks. After all, look how many times it gets the weather right.

The Bob Harmon Forecast

Highlights for October 21st

Brought to you by

Joe's Place

As they did with Oklahoma just two weeks ago, Texas once more hogs the national spotlight. However, this time they have to share it with THE Hogs, the undefeated Razorbacks of Arkansas. This will be the sixtieth meeting between the two Southwest Conference powers who have fought over the league title more than any other teams in the league. The Longhorns have dominated the series, winning exactly three-quarters of the games. And there's one peculiarity. During this long series, no game has ever ended in a tie. Texas breezed through three opponents before being squashed by Oklahoma, 31-10. And the last time the Razorbacks were impressive, in spite of being undefeated this season, was in the Orange Bowl, squashing the same Sooners, 31-6. Arkansas may be a sleeper as they were last year (they lost to the Longhorns in '77, 13-9), but we're picking Texas to win by seven points.

Michigan is no longer undefeated...however, Big Ten rival Wisconsin is. (Somewhere there has to be a comparison!) That's the best we can do...the rest is bad news. When the two met last fall, they were both undefeated through five games. What happened? Michigan buried the Badgers 56-0. The spread this year in favor of Michigan is 26 points.

We hit a jackpot two weeks ago when we forecast 51 winners out of 67 in major college games. The average through games of October 7th, .744 based on 762 right and 262 wrong.

Action in the Big Eight conference centers on Nebraska-Colorado and Oklahoma-Iowa State. Colorado suffered its first defeat of the season last week, and the Buffs will be 23-point underdogs to the Cornhuskers. The Cyclones of Iowa State were hit by Nebraska and Missouri on back-to-back Saturdays, and now comes Oklahoma. The Sooners will win by nineteen.

In the Southeast Conference, Tennessee hosts Alabama, and in the Atlantic Coast Conference, Wake Forest challenges Maryland. And the Crimson Tide and the Terrapins will continue to roll...Alabama by 21 over the Vols and Maryland by 24 over the Deacons.
