Iranian strike grows

TEHRAN (UPI) — A violent general strike in Iran began Tuesday and was reported to be spreading rapidly throughout the country because of the lack of food, reports said.

Buses and trucks were stranded throughout the country because of the motorway blockades, officials said. The strike ended the day after the workers walked back to work, officials said.

Carrier rejects call for mandatory controls

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. government rejected Tuesday afternoon a call for mandatory controls on the sale of consumer goods.

The move came as a surprise to many in the industry, as it was expected to be made on the same day as the government announced it would begin a new inspection program.

Westinghouse, TVA get secret jury tapes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge Wednesday granted Westinghouse's and TVA's motions to keep sensitive information from the public.

The information is being sought by union leaders who have been arguing for years that the companies are not doing enough to protect their employees.

Advice for carry-on luggage

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department has issued a new set of guidelines for passengers flying abroad.

The guidelines address the issue of how to pack carry-on luggage in a way that will minimize the risk of items being lost or damaged.

The guidelines recommend that passengers:

1. Use strong, sturdy bags
2. Pack loose items separately
3. Check the weight and size limits

The guidelines also advise passengers to:

1. Avoid packing delicate items
2. Use clear, visible labels
3. Keep liquids in Ziploc bags

Weather

We have just received a report that the weather in Iowa is expected to be sunny and warm for the next few days.

The temperatures are expected to reach the high 60s in the afternoon, with a slight chance of showers in the evening.

The overall weather is expected to be clear and pleasant, with no significant weather events expected.
GUARD SCANDAL LOOMS OVER RAY

Hickory, N.C. (AP) — It was the perfect place for an official to be during a time of national political turmoil. Following the return of troops from Vietnam, the White House was being besieged by demonstrators and the 1972 presidential campaign was heating up. A national guard unit from Hickory was stationed just a few miles away.

The Hickory unit, under the command of Maj. Gen. James Ray, was in charge of providing security for the White House. Ray, who had been in charge of the unit for several years, was well known to the Nixon administration.

But Ray was also known for his controversial leadership style. He had been involved in several incidents, including the 1971 Kent State shootings, where he was accused of ordering the use of tear gas.

The guard unit was also involved in a scandal involving the sale of weapons to the country of Korea. The weapons were being sold to fund the war effort, but it was later discovered that the money was being used to finance the campaign of President Nixon.

Ray was also under fire for his gestion of the guard unit. The unit was accused of using excessive force and violating civil rights. The guard unit was also accused of using the facility to host parties and other events.

The scandal ultimately led to Ray's resignation in 1973. The guard unit was taken over by the Department of Justice, and the investigation into the activities of the guard unit continued.

The scandal served as a reminder of the dangers of guard units being used for political purposes. It also highlighted the need for better oversight of guard units.

The guard unit was eventually disbanded in 1974. The members of the unit were allowed to return to their regular duties, and the guard unit's activities were investigated.

The guard unit's activities were eventually found to be legal, but the scandal served as a warning to other guard units. It also highlighted the importance of proper oversight of guard units.

The story of the Hickory guard unit is a reminder of the importance of proper oversight of guard units and the need for accountability in government.
Washington D.C.: A congressional report Wednesday accused South Korea’s Park Chung Hee of plotting a "killing and theft operation" based on a new Mission Organization report that found thousands of U.S. citizens were kidnapped by Korean organizations.

The Mission Organization report, which led to the indictment of South Korean officials, has sparked worldwide concern. The report detailed a series of kidnappings and disappearances of U.S. citizens, including prominent Korean Americans.

The report found that South Korean organizations were involved in kidnapping and stealing U.S. citizens, particularly those with sensitive information or connections to the U.S. government. The kidnappings were often orchestrated by influential Korean figures acting on behalf of the South Korean government.

The report also accused the South Korean government of providing support and protection to these organizations, which were engaged in kidnapping and stealing activities tied to U.S. intelligence operations.

The report’s release has prompted a wave of international condemnation, with governments and organizations around the world expressing concern over the reported activities.

Juvenile justice plan debated

Washington, D.C.: The U.S. Congress is currently debating a new juvenile justice plan that would establish a system of adult-like sanctions for juvenile offenders.

The plan introduces the concept of "juvenile accountability," where juveniles who commit serious crimes would be held to the same standards as adults. The proposed law aims to address the current system, which treats juveniles as children, often leading to lenient sentences and insufficient punishment.

The new plan includes provisions for adult-like sentences, such as mandatory minimums, longer maximums, and the possibility of life sentences for certain offenses. It also establishes a system of graduated sanctions, allowing judges to tailor punishments to individual circumstances.

Lawmakers and stakeholders have expressed mixed reactions to the plan, with some advocating for its implementation and others calling for further discussion and revisions.

Are UFO spotters ‘boggled’ people?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A recent survey of incidents and investigations involving mysterious glowing ball-like objects in the sky — from electric lights to fireflies — shows that UFO spotters are a peculiar people.

The survey, conducted by a group of researchers at the University of Iowa, found that UFO spotters are typically middle-aged, middle-class individuals who tend to be highly educated and have a keen interest in science and technology.

The researchers interviewed 100 UFO spotters and found that they share a common interest in the unknown and often experience a sense of wonder and excitement when they encounter unfamiliar phenomena.

Many UFO spotters believe that they have witnessed phenomena that cannot be explained by conventional science and often feel a sense of responsibility to investigate and understand these phenomena.

The survey also found that UFO spotters are often considered to be ‘boggled’ people by others, who may view them as strange or eccentric.

However, the researchers believe that UFO spotters are simply people who are curious and interested in exploring the unknown, and that their experiences can provide valuable insights into the nature of consciousness and the universe.

The survey is ongoing and the researchers hope to continue to study UFO spotters to better understand their motivations and experiences.

Schlitz Co. settles in kickback case

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Schlitz Brewing Co Wednesday agreed to pay $63,750 and settle a government claim that it committed a massive kickback scheme involving the sale of illegal kickbacks.

The government discovered that the company had paid as much as $10 million in kickbacks to retailers, in exchange for the promise to stop selling the beer.

The settlement, approved by a Milwaukee Federal Court judge, authorized the government to pay the company $63,750 and to forgive it $63,750 in back taxes.

The government claimed that Schlitz had paid the kickbacks in exchange for the promise to stop selling the beer and to stop using illegal kickbacks.

Conservative Jepsen: master of the political game

By JOE BROWN

Washington Post

Eugene Jepsen's campaign had come full circle. For the first time since he entered politics, Jepsen was back on the stump, making the case for a balanced budget amendment and for the issue that has propelled him into the Senate race in the past: inflation.

"I'm still a conservative," Jepsen said. "I've always been a conservative."

But the issue of inflation has taken on new meaning for Jepsen, who is running against incumbent Sen. Chuck J. Mathias, a Democrat.

Jepsen, a former top economic aide to President Nixon, has made inflation a central issue in his campaign, and his message has resonated with voters.

"It's not just a matter of economics," Jepsen said. "It's a matter of principle."

Jepsen is a strong believer in the American Dream, and he believes that the best way to keep the American Dream alive is to ensure that all Americans have the opportunity to work hard and achieve their goals.

"And that's why I'm running," he said. "Because I believe in the American Dream, and I want to make sure that all Americans have the chance to实现 their dreams."
Euripides’ play Chryses challenges modern sensibilities

By JUSTIN GREEN

University Theater’s production of Euripides’ "Medea" is an entertaining and thought-provoking account of the ancient Greek myth. The play, directed by Professor of Humanities E. Benton Honeyman, explores themes of revenge, love, and family, as well as the complexities of human emotion and morality.

The play opens with the arrival of Chyrses, an old man who has come to collect his daughter Medea. He is met by the king of Corinth, Jason, who has fallen in love with Medea. The scene is set in the city of Corinth, where the audience is introduced to the main characters and the setting of the play.

As the play progresses, Medea’s relationship with Jason becomes strained. She is forced to choose between her love for Jason and her loyalty to her brother, Egeus, who is the king of Colchis. Medea must decide whether to follow her heart or her duty, leading to a tragic conclusion.

Euripides’ play "Medea" is a timeless story that continues to resonate with modern audiences. The play’s themes of revenge, love, and family are universal and continue to be relevant today. The play also explores the complexities of human emotion and the impact of love and duty on an individual’s actions.

Overall, University Theater’s production of "Medea" is a captivating and thought-provoking account of the ancient Greek myth. The play’s themes of revenge, love, and family continue to be relevant today, and the production is a testament to the timeless nature of Euripides’ work.

Carter dollar support boosts market

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Justice Department is investigating charges that U.S. banks contributed to the dollar's recent climb on an overvalued market by engaging in illegal short-selling practices.

The investigation, which began in late March and is continuing, is centered on the trading of currency options, according to sources close to the inquiry.

Voters to decide county home rule

By MIKE CONNELLY

By MIKE CONNELLY

At the polls Tuesday, Iowa City voters will not only determine whether the city's government has the power to enact a local option tax but may also decide whether to allow their elected leaders to alter the state's constitution. The issue has come before the state's voters in recent years, with the most recent attempt to be voted on this year.

The proposed amendment would authorize the city to enact a local option tax, which would allow the city to raise additional revenue for local projects. The amendment would be submitted to the Iowa Legislature for approval, which would then be put to a vote of the people. If approved, the amendment could provide the city with the ability to raise additional revenue for local projects.

The proposed amendment would also authorize the city to enact a local option tax, which would allow the city to raise additional revenue for local projects. The amendment would be submitted to the Iowa Legislature for approval, which would then be put to a vote of the people. Burkhed: No knowledge of wiretapping, no typing

By UPI Press International

ANAMOSA, Iowa (UPI) - The Iowa National Guard is facing a political controversy, which started earlier this year with the release of a federal indictment, and now reaches a political boiling point. The controversy began in the late 1970s when the National Guard was accused of having a secret wiretapping operation. The indictment states that the Guard, through its special investigations branch, operated a wiretapping operation that included the tapping of phones and the interception of wire communications.

The Iowa National Guard has always maintained that it has no knowledge of wiretapping, no typing. The Guard has said that it never had such an operation and that all communications were handled through regular channels. However, the indictment states that the Guard was involved in a wiretapping operation and that the typing was done by the Guard's special investigations branch.

Former Guard Maj. Jack Kovalenok and Alexander B. Newell, both former Guard officers, have been charged with wiretapping and other crimes. The indictment also charges that the Guard's special investigations branch was involved in the wiretapping operation.

The Guard has also been accused of wiretapping at a time when the National Guard was facing a political controversy. The controversy began in the late 1970s when the National Guard was accused of having a secret wiretapping operation. The Guard has maintained that it has no knowledge of wiretapping, but the indictment states that the Guard was involved in a wiretapping operation.
Blind may want to stay blind, neurobiologist says

WASHINGTON (AP) - Blind may want to stay blind, neurobiologist says.

A study released in the Japan Journal of Ophthalmology suggests that some blind adults may have lost the ability to see.

The study, which was funded by the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke, found that some blind adults have lost the ability to see.

"It's possible that some blind adults have lost the ability to see," said Dr. John Smith, a neurobiologist at the University of Washington.

"This study suggests that some blind adults have lost the ability to see."
U.S. relations with Vietns by year's end, the say

Bangkok, Thailand (UPI) — U.S. and Thai officials said Wednesday that their nations' relations with Vietnam by the end of the year.

The Thai officials, speaking on condition of anonymity and Wednesday, did not disclose any details.

The officials said that Thailand and Vietnam have asked for talks and have agreed to discuss issues that could not or might not be resolved in other forums.

They said that the talks are expected to be held in the near future and that they will be attended by representatives of both countries.

The officials also said that any agreement reached will be based on the principle of non-aggression.

They said that the talks will be held in a friendly and cooperative atmosphere.

 Persons A and B, who have been blind since birth, are so-called "blind" because they have developed a different visual system than seen by normal people.

The system, which A and B have been using since birth, is based on the use of the brain cells that recognize vertical and horizontal lines, and are therefore not able to recognize shapes.

A, who is a neurobiologist, says that the system is not only used by normal people, but also by those who are blind.

"We have been using this system for years, and it has helped us to understand that the brain cells that recognize shapes are not the only ones we use," A said.

He added that the system is also used by normal people, who use it to recognize shapes by age 10.

A's system is used by A's brain cells, which are located in the frontal lobe, and are responsible for recognizing shapes.

"Our system is not only used by normal people, but also by those who are blind," A said.

He added that the system is also used by normal people, who use it to recognize shapes by age 10.

New York Yankee pitcher Ron Guidry claims the form that ran into the American League's 1978 Cy Young Award.

Hull hangs up his skates

GUIDRY (UPI) — Andy Koenig, club president, announced yesterday at his office in the Coliseum that the team will consider applying for admission to the World Hockey Association. A source close to the team said that the Hull's chances of getting into the WHA would be slim. However, the team is still expected to play in the Eastern Division, where they have been tabulated for the past three years.

The source said that the team is still interested in applying for admission to the WHA, and that the team is still looking for a way to improve its chances of being admitted.

The team has been considering applying for admission to the WHA for several years, and has been in discussions with the league about the possibility of playing in the WHA. The team is hoping that the league will consider its application, and that it will be admitted to the league.

Intramural program offers it all

Hyde体彩的幸运者 will battle Birmingham-... Again, Monday night football preview? Well, not quite, but it might be found in the near future. Yet, there is more to the IM program than meets the eye. There are team names and odd contests feelings:

flags for men, 21 to competition and just plain fun for women plus 13 to some of those strange team participants with more than flag football cited. Just think of the软softball and volleyball - are offered, since it is the only Big Ten school that lacks lights on 1M playing facilities or a better solution, Frama said.
