Shah installs military gov't, seeks 'unity'

TIHERSH, Iran (UPI) - The Shah declared the Imperial government out of office and appointed a new military cabinet to replace the civilian one, and suspended the constitution.

"This is a step in the right direction," said a government spokesman.

The Shah has been under pressure from the至上级, October 26. Iran's military government has been established.

The Shah declared a state of emergency and suspended the government.

"We are determined to implement the Shah's program," said the government spokesman.

The Shah's program includes reducing the size of the armed forces, increasing the role of the military in government, and ending the flow of aid to the rebel regime.

The Shah also called for a referendum on the constitution to determine the country's future.

Guerrillas released Nicaragua

By Maria Elena Paredes

The Sandinista National Liberation Front (FLN) has released 10 guerrillas who joined the Sandinista forces during the 1978 revolution.

The guerrillas were released from a prison in Managua on Monday morning.

The FLN has been negotiating with the government to release the prisoners for several weeks.

The prisoners had been held since 1978 and were accused of various crimes.

The release of the prisoners is a significant step towards a peaceful resolution of the conflict.

Sinai withdrawal plan affirmed

By Charles L. Brown

The Egyptian government has announced its support for the withdrawal of Israeli forces from the Sinai Peninsula.

The statement was made by Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who said that the withdrawal is necessary for a lasting peace in the region.

The withdrawal is expected to take place within 90 days.

The announcement was met with mixed reactions from the international community.

If Bob Baker had won the Republican Primary for State Senate, here's the kind of campaign he would have run:

"I'd have to admit that Smalt has been a good state legislator. Art Smalt is a good person — there's not many of them in politics — and it would be hard for me to run against him. I'd have little chance of winning. But I had this great idea for an ad. The ad would have a picture of Smalt and would say Art Smalt is creative. Art is a great leader. Art Smalt works with friends. Then at the bottom of the ad it would say Paid for by the Bob Baker for Senate Committee. I think that would be a cool ad."—Bob Baker

P-rule group still unsure of proposal

By JERRY SJOVIK

Iowa City Daily Iowegian

Iowa City's proposal to create a cable TV joint venture has been met with considerable skepticism by officials who have been studying the matter for months. They say the city is rushing into a decision and that the terms of the proposal are not clear.

The proposal was introduced at a meeting of the City Council last week by Mayor Jack W. Dooley. He said the city was considering a joint venture with Cablevision, a cable television company, to provide service to the city's residents. The proposal would involve Cablevision providing the service, with the city owning a 20% stake in the venture.

The City Council has not yet made a decision on the proposal, but several members have expressed concerns about it. Councilor Bob Baker, for example, said he was concerned about the city's role in the venture and the potential financial risk.

"I think we need to be careful about how much money we invest in this venture," Baker said. "We don't want to be locked into a long-term contract with Cablevision." He added that he was also concerned about the impact of the venture on the city's budget.

Councilor Stanley DeBoer said he was concerned about the city's ability to control the terms of the agreement. He said he was concerned that the city might be locked into a long-term contract that could be expensive.

"I think we need to make sure that we have the ability to negotiate the terms of the agreement," DeBoer said. "We don't want to be locked into a contract that could cost the city money in the long run." He added that he was also concerned about the potential for conflict between the city and Cablevision.

Councilor Sandy Hansen said she was concerned about the impact of the venture on the city's residents. She said she was concerned that the venture could increase cable rates for residents.

"I think we need to be careful about how much money we invest in this venture," Hansen said. "We don't want to be locked into a long-term contract that could increase cable rates for residents." She added that she was also concerned about the potential for conflict between the city and Cablevision.

The City Council is scheduled to hold a public hearing on the proposal on Monday, October 18. The meeting is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. at the City Hall, 120 S. Linn St.

Most expensive campaign in Iowa is, gladly, over

The general election campaigns in Iowa are expensive, but the most expensive campaign of all was the 1978 Senate race between Democrat Donna Younger and Republican Jim Jeffords.

The campaign took place in a state where the population is currently 2.9 million, and the total campaign spending was estimated at $2.5 million. The candidates spent money on television ads, mailers, and canvassing in the hopes of winning the race.

According to the Federal Election Commission, the candidates spent a total of $2.5 million on their campaigns, which is a large amount of money for a state with such a small population.

The campaign was controversial due to the use of negative advertising, and the candidates were accused of using money to buy votes. However, despite the controversy, the campaign was seen as a success for Younger, who went on to win the race.

The campaign also raised concerns about the role of money in political campaigns, and the issue of campaign finance reform continues to be a topic of discussion today.

Stay-at-home vote may settle election

The election results are in, and the winner is... drumroll please...

Bobby Jindal for President!

Just kidding! The results of the election were not as dramatic as one might think. In fact, the most expensive campaign in Iowa was the 1978 Senate race between Donna Younger and Jim Jeffords.

The campaign was a close race, with Younger ultimately winning by a narrow margin. The candidates spent a total of $2.5 million on their campaigns, which is a large amount of money for a state with such a small population.

The campaign was controversial due to the use of negative advertising, and the candidates were accused of using money to buy votes. However, despite the controversy, the campaign was seen as a success for Younger, who went on to win the race.

The campaign also raised concerns about the role of money in political campaigns, and the issue of campaign finance reform continues to be a topic of discussion today.

However, one thing that is clear from the election results is that the American people are tired of the politicians and the corruption they bring. It is time for a change, and the people have spoken. The candidates who are not interested in the good of the country will be voted out of office, and new leaders will be elected.

Stay tuned for the next election, and let us hope that the candidates will listen to the people and work for the benefit of all Americans.

New York (UPI) - Bullpen king Mike Hupe's nemesis the Colorado Buffaloes' quarterfinals match with the No. 1 runner and enabled Oklahoma to remain No. 1 in the AP football poll this season. The No. 1 Sooners earned their second straight win over the Buffaloes with their 17-14 victory on Saturday in Boulder.

The Sooners' first-round victory over the Buffaloes in Boulder was a major upset, but the Sooners' second win over the Buffaloes in Boulder was even more surprising. The Sooners, who had been ranked No. 1 in the AP football poll for most of the season, were ranked No. 1 in the AP football poll for the first time in their history.

NIU violates scouting rules

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Northwestern Coach Pat Chitwood and Minnesota Coach Bud Grant have been given a "judicial" suspension by the NCAA for what the conference said was a breach of conference rules Sept. 4.

The rules of the Western Collegiate Hockey Association, as well as conference regulations, state that "no person shall gain an unfair advantage through unlawful means." The NCAA considered the rule to have been violated.

The conference has also announced that the two schools will be placed on probation for one year, with the probationary status to be reviewed at the end of the probationary period.

United experiences inline congestion, furnish, $2,000

"We have agreed with the conference that we will follow the rules," Chitwood said. "We have agreed to accept the penalty, because we feel it is the right thing to do."
