To The Editor:

I would like to respond to Miss Fitzgerald's letter to the editor of October 30, in which she mentions her concern over the fact that ads and sex do not always go together. I, for one, am concerned about the use of sex to sell a product.

An ad is a tool that can be used to influence a person's opinion about a product. When sex is used in an ad, it is often done to create a desire for the product. This can be seen in the advertisement for Frye shoes, where a male and female are shown in an intimate setting.

I would suggest that advertisers consider the impact of their ads on the public. As a consumer, I feel that the use of sex in ads is manipulative and unethical. I believe that there should be stricter regulations on the use of sex in ads.

I hope that advertisers will take this into consideration in the future.

A sense of humor helps in Peace Corps

Karen Lokensgard

Karen Lokensgard didn’t know what she was serving as a Peace Corps volunteer would be like. Not that she hadn’t dreamed of being over there, but she said she never expected to find a young man asleep in the mud with a termite nest on his face.

The Peace Corps is a U.S. government agency that sends volunteers to help developing countries.

Storytelling, which appeared in the frame holder career, is often used to soften people through an emotional experience.

Karen Lokensgard is a Returned Volunteer from Bangladesh.

“Living in the Peace Corps is a story telling experience. It was being flown to an airport. The plane taxied. The story was over.”

Sadat demands W. Bank accord

Sadat's remarks appear to have been unexpected news to Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, who was not present at the meeting because he was in the Paris Conference of the Middle East Peace Process.

Sadat's comments were made during a meeting of the Egyptian cabinet on Tuesday. He said that Egypt will not sign any agreement with Israel until the question of Palestinian self-determination is resolved.

Sadat also said that Egypt would not sign any agreement with Israel that would undermine the rights of the Palestinian people. He added that Egypt would not recognize Israel as a state until the Palestinians have their own state with Jerusalem as their capital.

Sadat's remarks were made in response to a question by a Swedish journalist about the possibility of an agreement between Egypt and Israel.

Sadat's comments came as the Paris Conference of the Middle East Peace Process continued. The conference is being held in Paris to discuss the possibility of a peace treaty between Israel and the Palestinian Authority.

Sadat's remarks are likely to be received with skepticism by some Israelis, who have been critical of Egypt's stance on the Middle East Peace Process.
