A shutdown is better than a meltdown at Palo

Palo, la., is only about thirty miles from Iowa City. On June 27, 1980, the nuclear reactor at the Crane Naval Energy Center near Palo chugged to a stop. It is the last of 19 nuclear power plants in the U.S. that are owned or operated by any other plant in the history of American nuclear power. It was on that date that people were discovered at the plant but didn't know the true extent of the problem within the plant.

It was an unusual condition was described at the plant that day. Kerr-McGee officials met, but there was no company spokesmen for the Palos to discuss the incident. Instead, they were discussing how to deal with the situation.

It was a well-kept secret at the time, but it was later revealed that the plant had experienced a severe accident involving the release of radioactive material into the environment.

The accident was caused by a failure of a steam line in the plant's containment vessel, which led to the release of a significant amount of radioactive material into the environment.

The incident was a major setback for the nuclear industry, which had been counting on nuclear power as a solution to the nation's energy problems.

The accident led to a major reevaluation of the safety of nuclear power plants and prompted the U.S. government to strengthen regulations governing the construction and operation of nuclear power plants.

It was a significant moment in the history of nuclear power, and it reminded people of the risks associated with this type of energy.

"He who has the gold, rules".

WASHINGTON (880) --

When Robert Nader, who calls himself "Dr. Nader" to his followers, mentioned his plans to run for the presidency of the United States in a recent magazine article, he reportedly quoted the old adage, "He who has the gold, rules." This statement reflects the idea that political power and control is often associated with the possession of wealth or resources.

Nader, a well-known consumer advocate, has been involved in a number of high-profile legal battles, including those involving the pharmaceutically industry and the tobacco industry. He is known for his aggressive pursuit of corporate interests and his advocacy for consumer rights.

The quote "He who has the gold, rules" is a common adage that suggests that those who control wealth or resources have the ability to shape political outcomes. This idea is often attributed to various historical figures, but it has a long-standing presence in modern political discourse.

The quote is particularly relevant in the context of Nader's potential presidential run, as it highlights the importance of financial resources in the political process.

ANNAPOLIS (880) --

Nader has been known for his outspoken and aggressive advocacy for consumer rights, and his campaign promises to bring significant change to the political landscape.

Nader's campaign is gaining momentum, and he is expected to challenge the current political establishment with his innovative ideas and platform. His platform includes proposals to address issues such as corporate greed, environmental destruction, and social inequality.

Nader's campaign is supported by a coalition of like-minded individuals and organizations, who share his vision for a more equitable and just society. The coalition is composed of educators, civil rights leaders, and public health advocates, among others.

BLOOMFIELD TOWNSHIP (880) --

The Bloomfield Township Board of Education has ordered the addition of fluoride to the local school district's water supply. The decision was made after a comprehensive study of the health benefits of fluoride and a review of scientific evidence.

Fluoride, which is a naturally occurring mineral, is known to reduce the risk of dental caries and improve oral health. The addition of fluoride to drinking water has been shown to be an effective and cost-effective way to prevent tooth decay and improve oral health outcomes.

The Bloomfield Township Board of Education's decision was in line with recommendations from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and other public health organizations. The decision was also supported by a coalition of educators, civil rights leaders, and public health advocates, who have been advocating for the addition of fluoride to drinking water for many years.

Hawks to pick up tempo with Soviets

It seems only fitting that basketball take center stage as the season begins at the Hawks home opener. It will be the first game for new coach Steve Nemecheck, who was named to the job after a long search. It will be a big game for the Hawks, who are looking to build upon last year's 18-14 record and make a strong run at the Olympic trials.

The Hawks will be tested in their opener against the Soviets, who are considered one of the top teams in the world. The game will be played at Madison Square Garden, home of the New York Knicks.

The Soviets are a powerful team, with players who can shoot, pass, and defend at the highest level. They will be led by star center Vladimir Raslyev, who is considered one of the best players in the world.

The Hawks will be led by forwards Ronnie Olson and Steve Gore, who are expected to make a strong impact on the game. Olson is a big muscleman who can score inside, while Gore is a quick and agile player who can get to the basket.

The game will be a hard-fought battle, with both teams looking to gain the upper hand. The game will be played at a fast pace, with both teams trying to establish their dominance early.

It's going to be a tough game, especially with a tough Big Ten schedule to follow. But the Hawks are looking forward to the challenge, and are prepared to give it their all.

Dean breaks into lineup despite injury

Doug Stover, Staff Writer

Dean Pat Don't can't be counted on having a bad attitude in practice, but his determination to play against Michigan bore fruit Friday night when he started at middle linebacker.

"I didn't play against Michigan. I had a lot of faith in how I would normally perform, but it wasn't to that extent," Dean said. "Dean could win a big game, but it wasn't to that extent, but it was to that extent."

The wrist injury was in the early stages of healing. He was determined to start, just as he was determined to start against Michigan. His wrist was taped, but that didn't help.

"I really didn't have that much help from the wrist," Dean said. "I was really trying to help myself out with the wrist, but it didn't really help me out with the wrist."

Dean has been a member of the special teams since his freshman season. He comes from the state of Michigan, so it was a natural choice for him to start against the seventh-ranked Wolverines.

The championship of the Atlantic Coast Conference was in the hands of three teams entering the weekend. The two teams, Maryland and Florida State, were locked in a tie for the league lead with one game to play. The third team, North Carolina, was two games behind and needed a victory over Virginia Tech to have any chance of catching the leaders.

The championship game between Maryland and Florida State was a classic. The Terrapins, led by Mark Herrmann, dominated the first half, scoring 14 points to Florida State's 7. Herrmann, who had scored 19 points in the first half, added another 8 in the second half, giving him a career-high 27 points.

The Florida State defense was unable to stop Herrmann, who scored on a variety of shots, including three-pointers and layups. The Terrapins led by double digits throughout the second half, but Florida State made a late run to cut the lead to 8 with 2 minutes left in the game.

However, Maryland coach Bob Hartnell called a timeout and brought in his starting five to defend the Terrapins' lead. The timeout worked, as Maryland held on for the 20-10 victory, earning the championship of the ACC and a spot in the NCAA Tournament.

Maryland's win was a fitting end to a season in which the team had struggled early but eventually found its rhythm. The Terrapins finished the regular season with a record of 12-0, including a perfect 6-0 mark in conference play.

The victory over Florida State was even more significant, as the Seminoles were considered one of the top teams in the country. Maryland had barely escaped with a win over Florida State earlier in the season, so the second meeting was even more important.

The Terrapins' championship was a testament to the hard work and determination of the team. They had overcome early-season losses and had to play well down the stretch to secure the conference title.

The championship game was a fitting end to a season in which the Terrapins had beaten some of the best teams in the country. Maryland's victory over Florida State was a sweet revenge for an earlier loss, and the team's overall record of 12-0 was a testament to the talent and dedication of the players.
