Wage limits loosen; profits restricted

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The administration Wednesday allowed increased profits to oil companies operating in the Persian Gulf, but softened earlier wage restrictions that wage earners in the area had been suffering.

Officials said the revenue-sharing agreement will be in effect until May 1971, when a new agreement is scheduled to begin. The agreement also included a clause that allows companies to sell their earnings in the area.

Cleveland reforms hit; default looms

CLEVELAND (121) — Protests for the city of Cleveland ended Friday, after two days of rallies and meetings. The city councilists welcomed the new proposal with mixed reviews, saying it was a step forward in addressing the financial crisis.

Is "the city's financial rehabilitation plan"

Elected officials of the city council expressed hope that the plan would help stabilize the city's finances. Council members also acknowledged that the plan was a first step in addressing the city's debt crisis.

The plan includes the following:

The city councilors are scheduled to vote on the plan next week.

The plan was developed in response to the city's financial crisis, which has been exacerbated by a downturn in the local economy. The city has been struggling to meet its financial obligations, including payments on its debt, and has been forced to cut services and raise taxes.

The plan, which is subject to approval by the state's courts, is expected to provide a framework for the city's long-term financial stability.

Islam gives women 'dignified status'

By Lizette Green

The E. Meriwether, the Iowan's editor-at-large, is usually known for his expertise in matters related to the East. However, this week, he has decided to focus on the role of Islam in the promotion of women's rights. In this viewpoint, he argues that Islam provides women with a dignified status that is not always found in other religious traditions.

Islam is often highlighted as a religion that promotes gender equality and the empowerment of women. In this viewpoint, the E. Meriwether discusses how Islam provides women with a dignified status that is not always found in other religious traditions. He argues that the religion's teachings on women's rights, such as the prohibition of polygamy and the requirement for men to provide for their wives, contribute to the empowerment of women.

The E. Meriwether also points out that Islam's emphasis on education and the importance of women in the family and community contribute to their empowerment. He cites examples of women in Islamic society who have made significant contributions, such as Fatima al-Zahra, the daughter of the Prophet Muhammad, who is considered a model of virtue and wisdom.

Overall, the E. Meriwether's viewpoint provides a nuanced perspective on the role of Islam in promoting women's rights, challenging stereotypes and highlighting the importance of understanding the religion's teachings in context.

Tunnel vision

By John Smith

In this viewpoint, John Smith argues that the Greek poet Archilochus' famous saying, "The dogs bark but the suspension continues," is not just a metaphor for the futility of certain political and social actions, but a powerful commentary on the human condition. Smith suggests that, like the suspended chandelier of Archilochus' imagery, we are often too focused on the minor details of our lives to see the bigger picture.

Smith draws parallels between the poem's imagery and contemporary issues, such as the ongoing conflicts in the Middle East and the corruption in the banking industry. He argues that, just as the chandelier continues to swing despite the barking of the dogs, we must resist the temptation to become distracted by the noise and instead focus on the underlying issues.

Smith's viewpoint offers a thought-provoking perspective on the importance of maintaining a broader perspective in the face of daily challenges.

Letters

Commitment is...

By Jane Doe

In her letter to the editor, Jane Doe highlights the importance of commitment in various aspects of life. She suggests that commitment is not just a characteristic of personal relationships but also plays a crucial role in professional and social endeavors.

Doe draws parallels between the commitment required in romantic relationships and the dedication needed in career choices. She argues that commitment is a key factor in achieving success and fulfillment in both realms.

Her letter serves as a reminder of the value of commitment in various aspects of life and encourages readers to reflect on the importance of this quality in their own lives.

Juggling fanatics

By Mary Jane

In this viewpoint, Mary Jane explores the challenges faced by jugglers, a group of performers who balance multiple balls, plates, or other objects simultaneously. She highlights the physical demands and mental discipline required to juggle successfully.

Mary Jane argues that juggling is a skill that requires practice, coordination, and a keen sense of timing. She suggests that the principles of juggling can be applied to other areas of life, such as problem-solving and time management.

Her viewpoint offers a unique perspective on the demands of juggling and the lessons that can be learned from this art form.

Act: in the theater

By Ethan Allen

In his piece, Ethan Allen discusses the role of the audience in the theater and the importance of active participation in the performance. He suggests that the audience is an active participant in the theater experience, rather than a passive spectator.

Allen argues that the audience's engagement with the performance can enhance the overall experience for everyone involved. He encourages readers to think critically about the theater and to engage more fully in the experience.

His viewpoint offers a fresh perspective on the role of the audience in the theater and the importance of active participation.

Thorpe faces murder conspiracy trial

MINSK, England (UPI) — A court Wednesday ordered former Liberal Party leader Jeremy Thorpe and three others to stand trial on charges of conspiring to murder a man who claimed to have been tried for being a homosexual in 1968. In addition Thorpe also will be tried foracking the charge.

At the request of the defense, the trial will be held at Old Bailey, London's most famous criminal court. No date was set for Thorpe's chief alibi, Sir David Sanders, to go on trial. It could be as late as next spring.

After the court adjourned to deliberate, the 48-year-old Thorpe, introduced in gray suit and double-breasted waistcoat, looked tense but not worried. I'd impose guilt and walk vigorously down the stairs.

The other defendants also claimed they were seeking only personal protection from their present neighbors. They were tried for conspiracy to murder, to murder and to incite to murder.

The trial date for the six defendants charged with conspiracy to murder Thorne in May has been postponed again, the third time allowances were granted.

It has been alleged that the charge was brought against Thorpe at the urging of his chief alibi, Sir David Sanders, to go on trial. It could be as late as next spring.

The trial of the defendants charged with conspiracy to murder Thorpe is scheduled to begin in the spring of 1968. In all, they have been charged with murder or attempted murder.

Merwin's formal virtuosity has been acknowledged by poets, critics and other writers. His translations of Latin, Portuguese and Russian poetic structures surrender to his need, his desire for an echo except that it is repeating no sound.

His own verse has become surrounded by translation. His translations of the works of Auden and Stevens.

First evidence of gravity waves

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A team of University of Minnesota scientists has found solid evidence that classical, or Einsteinian, theory of gravity is not the only way to describe gravity waves, the fundamental building blocks of the universe.

The work, which has been reported in the journal Physical Review Letters, has been hailed by many as a major breakthrough in understanding the nature of gravity and its role in the universe.

The researchers, led by physicist John R. Taylor, found that when a large, rapidly rotating object such as a black hole or neutron star is present, gravity waves can be produced that are different from those predicted by classical gravity theory.

These waves, known as "Einstein waves," are predicted by general relativity but have never been observed before. The new findings suggest that they may be more common than previously thought.

"The discovery of these waves is a major step forward in our understanding of gravity," said Taylor. "It means that we can now observe the universe in a completely new way, and that may lead to new insights into the nature of gravity itself."

IM basketball squads claim crowns

BY BEVERLY MILLER

Although there were no particularly sensational pre-holiday games, the major teams continued in great fashion with victories over out-of-town foes. The University of Kentucky dominated the University of Louisville, 78-66, while the University of Southern California (USC) edged the University of Oregon, 64-61.

At the University of Kentucky, the Hawkeyes exploded for 21 points in the second stanza - in which every shot dropped - and took the game away from the top-ranked Michigan team. Michigan was held to 18 points in the second half, its lowest output of the season. The Hawkeyes, on the other hand, scored 89 points, their highest total of the year.

In the third period, the Hawkeyes went on a 12-3 run to take the lead for good. Michigan never recovered from the onslaught.

The game was played in front of a sellout crowd of 20,000 at the University of Kentucky's Memorial Coliseum. The Hawkeyes dominated the game from the start, outscoring Michigan 44-28 in the first half.

In the second half, the Hawkeyes increased their lead to 169-56, and the game was never in doubt.

The win was the 14th in a row for the Hawkeyes, who are now 14-0 on the season. Michigan, on the other hand, is now 10-3. The Hawkeyes will play their next game at home against Ohio State on January 10.

In other action, the University of Southern California (USC) defeated the University of Oregon, 64-61, in a close game that went down to the wire.

At the University of Southern California, the Trojans were led by senior guard John Voelkel, who scored 18 points in the game. USC, now 13-0 on the season, will play their next game at home against the University of Washington on January 8.

In the other game, the University of Louisville dominated the University of Oregon, 78-66.

At the University of Louisville, the Cardinals were led by senior guard Tom Carroll, who scored 20 points in the game. Louisville, now 13-0 on the season, will play their next game at home against the University of Kentucky on January 8.
