Anti-nuke organizers query filming

Participants in a November anti-nuclear-protest rally have written to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) to press for military observers to be stationed at the Duane Arnold Energy Center near Porterdale, Wis. The proposed site is the site of a nuclear power plant in Wisconsin.

The NRC, now being sued by a group led by anti-nuclear organizers, said it will not issue a decision on the request before the end of the year. The organizers are seeking to prevent the plant from being used as a site for nuclear weapons.

The NRC has been faced with a growing number of protests against its plans to build nuclear power plants in Wisconsin. The organizers say they are concerned about the safety of the nuclear power plants and the potential for nuclear weapons to be stored at the plants.

Finally, after 20 years of relative isolation, religious communities in China are at long last making their way into the national scene. No longer hidden behind closed doors, these communities are now visible to the outside world. This is the result of a gradual process that has been underway for some time, yet has only recently become apparent.

The Chinese government has been slowly opening up to the outside world, and this has allowed religious groups to begin interacting with the Chinese people. This process has been gradual, but it has now reached a point where it is clear that China is ready to accommodate religious groups.

The most obvious problem left unresolved is that, although it is now clear that the government is willing to accommodate religious groups, there is still much work to be done. The government must now decide how to accommodate these groups, and how to ensure that they are treated fairly and equitably.

In the meantime, religious groups in China are facing a number of challenges. They must navigate a complex political landscape, and they must also deal with the challenges of building new communities and maintaining their identities.

Despite these challenges, however, there is reason to be optimistic. The Chinese government is showing a willingness to accommodate religious groups, and this is a positive step forward. As long as the government continues to support this process, it is likely that religious groups will continue to grow and thrive in China. In the end, it is clear that this is a positive development for all Chinese people.
Two detectives and a bereft attorney on the loose

Performances save cloying 'Inspector'

by EDMUND SHERIDAN Staff Writer

Philippe de Broca's French tradition of muddled detective work is back with three French detectives when 'Dear Inspector,' the brisk comic periphery 'Inspector,' is released next month. The film is based on the earlier story of the same name by Michel Audiard that was based on the novel "Dear Inspector," which was the basis for the American film "Dear Mr. Lincoln." The film is directed by John Korty and stars John Wayne and Robert Mitchum.

The film follows the story of the investigation of the murder of the mayor of the town, and, in the process, the two detectives and the attorney are brought together to solve the case. The film is set in a small town and features a cast of French actors, including Jean-Pierre Cassel, who plays the role of the attorney.

Despite the film's shortcomings, the performances of the three French actors shine through. Cassel is particularly impressive in his role as the attorney, bringing a sense of depth and complexity to the character that is often missing in French films. The other two detectives, played by Jean-Pierre Cassel and Jean-Pierre Léaud, also deliver solid performances, with Cassel's character being the more engaging of the two.

The film's weaknesses include a lack of suspense and a predictable plot. However, the performances of the cast help to save the film, making it worth watching for fans of French cinema.
Kucinich plans layoffs, refuses state-aid strings

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The city mayor in default, Mayor Dennis Kucinich plans an emergency mass layoff of 35 percent of city employees, or 35 percent of the city's 52,000 workers. But the layoff would be voluntary. Kucinich said he has cancelled top 50 million in bank notes. Kucinich was quoted as saying the layoffs are voluntary and the city has $60 million in bank notes. Kucinich has also been quoted as saying the layoffs are voluntary and the city has $60 million in bank notes. Kucinich said he has cancelled top 50 million in bank notes.

FBI efforts continued through the weekend, however, in a situation that would be an embarrassment to the mayor and police and fire departments. Records of the mayor and police and fire departments showed the mayor and police and fire departments as working 110,000 hours per week.

The 35% of city employees who are laid off must be paid by Federal grants. The mayor said he wanted to pay the 35% of city employees who are laid off as they normally would be paid.

Christmas comes early for the Iowa State women's cross country team this year. The Hawkeyes' leaders have done it again, winning the Big Ten championship.

The women's cross country team has dominated the Big Ten for the past few seasons, and this year is no exception. The Hawkeyes took the conference title, finishing in first place with a team score of 37 points. The second-place team, the University of Minnesota, scored 62 points, a significant margin behind Iowa State.

Individually, Iowa State's top runner, Margaret Maree, won the individual title with a time of 17:01.2. Maree's victory was the third in a row for her, as she also won the conference title last year. Her consistency and determination have been key factors in her success.

The Hawkeyes' dominant performance was not limited to their team. Several individual Hawkeyes also made a mark in the competition. Katie Whalen, a freshman, won the 10,000-meter race, while Kendra Johnson placed third in the 5,000-meter event. These strong performances were crucial in securing the conference crown.

The Hawkeyes have established themselves as a powerhouse in the Big Ten, and their success is owed to the strength of their team. They have been able to maintain their excellence despite facing strong competition from other schools. This year's championship win is a testament to their hard work and dedication.

Iowa State's cross country team continues to set new standards, and their achievements are a source of pride for their fans and supporters. With this victory, they have once again set the bar high for the upcoming season, enticing both recruits and spectators to expect more of the same.

In conclusion, the Iowa State women's cross country team has once again proven their superiority in the Big Ten. Their success in the conference meet is a reflection of their talent, hard work, and team spirit. As they look forward to the national championships, the Hawkeyes will undoubtedly continue to showcase their prowess and earn a well-deserved national title.
Eagles gain playoff spot; Minnesota in, Pack out

By United Press International

The Philadelphia Eagles qualified for the NFL playoffs by tying the New York Giants, 37-7, here today, but had to wait until after the season was over before they knew they had made the post-season.

The Eagles defeated the Giants, 37-7, in their final game of the year.

The Eagles were the only team in the NFL to gain a post-season berth on the final day of the season.

Chuck Foreman rushed for 115 yards and two touchdowns as the Minnesota Vikings defeated the Dallas Cowboys, 27-17, in the season finale.

Derek Dooley, the Vikings' head coach, said: "It's a great feeling to know that we've made it to the playoffs."
