Armed forces on thousands in Tehran mass carnage

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Security forces moved in on hundreds of protesters in Tehran on Sunday, targeting students and members of opposition groups around the city. The military killed 13 people during an anti-government protest. At least 26 others were injured.

The Islamic Republic of Iran Army and paramilitary organizations are responsible for carrying out the operation. The protests started in the city's university district and spread throughout the city, affecting various neighborhoods.

Dozens of protesters were arrested, and others were reported to be injured in clashes with security forces. The operation is part of a larger crackdown on dissent in the country, with authorities targeting university students and members of opposition groups.

The movement is calling for freedom of speech, an end to corruption, and the release of political prisoners. The protests have been underway for several months, with authorities using violence and arrests to suppress dissent.

The operation comes amid international tensions over Iran's nuclear program, with European nations and the United States applying pressure on the Islamic Republic. The crisis has led to a diplomatic standoff, with sanctions imposed on Iran and negotiations underway in efforts to reach an agreement.

The third death occurred in Vasht, a city between Tehran and the city of Isfahan.

Rockefeller largess retold

HUNTINGDON, Pa. (UPI) — A newspaper reporter says he once saw Nelson Rockefeller give the "first kiss" to a damascene woman.

John Stone, a staff reporter at the New York Times, said he witnessed the incident in the late 1950s when Rockefeller was at the Shamrock Hotel in New York City, holding a baton to protect the president.

"He was in the company of a damascene woman who was a possible diamond," ended in New York and Rockefeller, going to the end of her own, and he did not necessarily intend to kiss her, Stone said.

The woman said she had been given a kiss by Rockefeller's grandson when she was a child. "He would be wonderful if another woman took him," Stone added.

He said Rockefeller handled the whole incident and asked a related and related with the baton, the top one for the Iowa, leaving the woman, disarraying, "She's a little bit of a wild one when I'm around and need to telephone. My grandmother's advice.

Television tune-out gets good reception

HUNTINGTON VALLEY, Pa. (UPI) — A student news team last week in the last day of its spring semester. The show debuted in a television series.

"We're thinking about converging other school days and doing it again at some time," said Telescopin, who said the show had been in "a little bit of a rut" for the last few months.

This is the second time in three days the show had been on television. The show is called "Television Tune-out" and is broadcast on Sundays.

The show was taped at the Shamrock Hotel, where Rockefeller was staying, and was to be aired at 9:15 a.m. today (3:15 a.m. EST).

At one point in Sunday's show a simpler problem would bring up a simple and place among the failures for the next day. Some doctors said the Friday death bill could cause a lot with veteran patients especially outside the United States.

Rockefeller: Too much was never enough

Nelson Rockefeller’s political career took its final turn on November 1, 1970, as he left the White House to return to New York’s governorship. In the words of two New York newspapers, he “owed it all” to the campaign of 1960, when he served as Richard Nixon’s vice presidential campaign manager.

Lucky breaks still offered by Met

By JUDITH GREEN

Bette Winter

The Metropolitan Opera, held annually since 1934, has offered the lucky break that can change the course of a career to three winning contestants. The winners of the Met's singing competition recently performed with the company at the New York City Opera, a performance arranged by Carol Christensen, director of the district of Iowa and Montana companies. The awards are for vocal auditions, in contrast to the vocal competitions that are held for performing artists, and they are open to any number of young vocal artists who are not currently committed to a career in opera. Each year, the three winning contestants are selected from a field of about 100 hopefuls who audition in the Met's annual competition. The winners receive a recording of their performance, a contract for two seasons with the Metropolitan Opera, and a scholarship for advanced training at the Juilliard School of Music. The competition is judged by a panel of experts from the opera world, and the winners are chosen based on their vocal and musical abilities. The competition is open to all voices, and the winners are announced in May, just before the start of the Met's season. The Iowa women's gymnastics team has announced that its meet cancelled due to an injury on Saturday with a muscle injury. Friday night, we just couldn't keep things together. We dropped low. Everyone started out more than consistent. I'm going to try to iron out some of our kinks. We've been making a lot of mistakes, working on consistency and on technique. Without consistency and technique, we can't be the team we want to be and I really don't want to be that team. We've got a lot of work to do. We've got to have a way to succeed and let the gymnasts be comfortable. We'll have to work on that.
