Public attacks parking problems

The Iowa City Council adopted an ordinance requiring landlords to provide a parking spot to apartment complexes over 20 units. The ordinance went into effect Monday.

The new rule will take effect in stages, with the first phase requiring new complexes of more than 20 units to provide a parking spot with each new apartment. Existing complexes will be required to provide a parking spot to any new tenant who moves in. The council made a number of changes to the original proposal after meeting with landlords and others who expressed concerns. The final version of the ordinance was introduced on March 12.

The ordinance is intended to address the growing problem of parking in Iowa City. A recent study found that more than 80% of Iowa City residents said they have difficulty finding parking on a daily basis. The council hopes the new ordinance will help to alleviate some of this pressure.

According to Iowa Electric, that letter inspired the new ordinance, which is intended to encourage landlords to provide parking spots, especially in areas where there are large numbers of apartments. The new ordinance is intended to be a temporary measure, with the council planning to discuss a more permanent solution in the future.

Councilor John Schaffner, who introduced the original proposal, said he was pleased with the final version of the ordinance. He noted that it was a compromise between the interests of landlords and tenants, and he hoped it would be effective in addressing the parking problem.

The ordinance will be enforced by the city's parking enforcement officers, who will be given new powers to issue citations and fines for violations. The council also plans to conduct regular inspections of apartment complexes to ensure that landlords are complying with the new rules.

The new ordinance is a welcome addition to the city's parking regulations, and it is hoped that it will help to ease the parking problem in Iowa City.

The Democrats ask: "Is it time for Ted?"

There are several forces at work within the Democratic party. Many believe that the party needs a new face, a new name, and a new strategy to compete against the Republicans. This is a sentiment that has been growing stronger in recent months, as the party struggles to maintain its support among voters.

Some argue that the party needs to be more aggressive in its approach to policy and politics. They believe that the Democratic party has become too complacent in recent years, and that it is time for a new leader to come forward and take charge.

Others argue that the party needs to be more moderate in its approach to issues. They believe that the party has become too far to the left, and that it is time for a new leader to come forward and bring the party back to the center.

Still others argue that the party needs to be more inclusive in its approach to policy and politics. They believe that the party has become too narrow in its focus on issues like race, gender, and religion, and that it is time for a new leader to come forward and make the party more inclusive.

Regardless of the specific arguments, there is a clear sense among many Democrats that the party is in need of a new leader. The question is, who will that leader be?

J. Carter is not B. Carter's keeper

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's most powerful and prestigious newspaper, the New York Times, has published an editorial calling for the resignation of President Carter. The editorial, which was signed by several of the newspaper's editors and columnists, argues that President Carter is no longer able to effectively lead the country.

The editorial begins by noting that President Carter has been in office for 12 years, and that during that time, he has been unable to tackle some of the most pressing issues facing the country. It goes on to say that President Carter has been unable to deal with the energy crisis, the Iran-Iraq war, and the growing deficit in the federal budget.

The editorial then goes on to say that President Carter has been unable to inspire confidence in his administration. It notes that the public has lost faith in the government under his leadership, and that this has caused a decline in the country's morale.

The editorial concludes by calling for President Carter to resign, and for someone else to take over as leader of the country. It says that the United States cannot afford to have a leader who is unable to lead, and that it is time for a new leader to come forward and provide the country with the leadership it needs.

The New York Times editorial is just the latest in a series of editorials and editorials that have called for President Carter's resignation. Other papers, including the Los Angeles Times and the Washington Post, have also published editorials calling for the president's resignation.

The issue of President Carter's leadership has been a hot topic in recent months, and it is likely that it will continue to be a topic of discussion in the future. The country is looking for a leader who can provide the country with the direction it needs, and it remains to be seen whether President Carter is the right leader for the country.

For spring — it's the new PBS!

Inflation has been a major problem for the American people for the past few years, and it has had a significant impact on the economy. The government has been trying to address the problem by implementing various policies, but it has been difficult to find a solution that works for everyone.

One of the main issues with inflation is that it can lead to higher prices for goods and services. This can be a problem for people who are trying to make ends meet, especially those who are on a fixed income.

The government has been trying to address this issue by implementing policies that are designed to keep prices under control. However, it has been difficult to find a solution that works for everyone.

In this article, we will look at the current state of inflation in the United States, and we will examine the policies that have been implemented to address the problem.

We will also look at the impact of inflation on the economy, and we will examine the ways in which it affects different groups of people.

Finally, we will discuss the potential solutions to the problem of inflation, and we will look at the policies that have been proposed to address the issue.

response, however, I do not espouse that PBS has taken the Carter Administration's recommendations concerning programming and has become a mere channel for the Carter family. I believe that PBS is an independent public broadcasting network with its own unique character and identity.

The NBC network has also moved to the right in recent years, and it has been criticized for its lack of diversity and its bias against certain groups. The network has been accused of being too conservative, and it has been criticized for its lack of coverage of important issues.

Burge sit-in is hardly riotous

by Kathleen Brown

It had all the elements of an important event—largely because it was an event that the world at large had never seen. A group of researchers set out to study something that had never been studied before: the impact of a sit-in on university policy.

The Burge sit-in was a response to the administration's decision to dissolve the International Centre for the University of Iowa. The students, led by Brendan Burge, protested the decision by occupying the administration offices for several days. The administration was forced to negotiate with the students, and a compromise was reached that allowed the centre to continue operating.

The sit-in was not without controversy. Some people argued that the students were being too radical, while others praised their courage. But in the end, the Burge sit-in was a turning point in the history of the University of Iowa, and it helped to lay the groundwork for the modern university movement.
Endangered species list cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Bush administration, in a bid to please both environmentalists and Republicans, has narrowed the list of endangered species.

The new list, announced Tuesday, drops 11 species from the list of endangered species. The list had been expanded during the Clinton administration.

The new list includes the American alligator, the desert tortoise, the desert bighorn sheep, the elk, the fringe-toed lizard, the monarch butterfly, the peregrine falcon, the prairie chicken, the red-cockaded woodpecker, the short-tailed prairie dog, and the Wilson's snipe.

Environmentalists were pleased with the move, but some Republicans criticized it.

"This is a good step," said environmentalist Jane Goodall. "It's a shame that we had to wait so long for it."
Plight of the homemaker: No pay, no recognition

As a homemaker, you often hear your husband say: "You should have saved me the trouble of going to work." He probably believes he's doing you a favor, by supporting someone else to do your work for you. This is often what domestic work amounts to. It is not a "real" job, and you have no "true" work experience. Is this true? No, homemaker is one of the most important professions.

Lester is ready to win first national crown

By DOUG BEAM

DOUG BEAM

When Randy Lewis steps on the mat, he usually chalks up a win and is ready to please the members of his Iowa team. That has been true in the past, but this season the Iowa-'78-1 Iowa had a new challenge: winning the Big Ten title along the way.

Now, there's only one more milestone to conquer, the national title, and Lewis has a mighty ally in the form of the 1975 NCAA national title winner. In a meeting of All-Americans, Lester had a chance to make a new champion in Randy Lewis of Peoria, Ill., who was a senior this year.

At 141 pounds, Lester is the heavier of the two, weighing in at 178 pounds. But Lester has some potential problems of his own, as his weight is less than 167 pounds. Lewis has a height advantage of 6-3, while Lester is 5-10.

The Fighting Irish have some trouble with the Wisconsin 135-pounder, as his record is 1-2-1. Lester had a chance to win the NCAA championship last year, but lost in the finals to Lewis. This year, Lester is coming off a big victory over Lewis in the Big Ten championship, and he is determined to make a new champion.

The rebuilding job in the 141-pound class is not an easy one. Lester's team has a depth of seven, and will have to find a way to win.

Looking ahead, Lester feels confident that he can win the NCAA title.

The redshirt senior got more than his share of the glory from his younger brother, John, who won the national title last year.

"I didn't out work my brother," Lester said. "But he'll never beat me. I'll just have to be consistent. I'll stay with the same strategy that we had last year."

"For the Big Ten title, we'll do it the same way," Lester said. "We'll have to win the first two matches against the Wisconsin team."

"It's all about technique," Lester said. "But I'll be ready to go."

"I'll be ready to go."
