Iran expels U.S. feminist leader Millett

Edward W. Byers, Jr., correspondent for The Washington Post in Tehran, reported that Mary King Millett was arrested and ordered expelled from the revolutionary government, which held power in Iran after the revolution of Feb. 11.

Millett, a 42-year-old feminist, was arrested last weekend by armed guards and officials of the Interior Ministry. Millett is known for her advocacy of women's rights and for her support of the revolutionary government of the late Ayatollah and Hussein. She is also known for her work on women's rights issues during the Iranian revolution.

Millett had been a frequent critic of the government of Ayatollah Khomeyni, the late leader of the Iranian revolution. She had also been a vocal opponent of the government's policies on women's rights, including the enforcement of the sharia (Islamic law) which restricts women's rights in Iran.

Millett's arrest was a setback for the Iranian government's efforts to control the activities of foreign critics. It is also a reminder of the government's intolerance for dissent.

The government of Ayatollah Khomeyni has been known for its harsh treatment of its critics, including its use of force to silence opponents. The government has also been known for its repression of women's rights, including its enforcement of the sharia which restricts women's rights in Iran.

Millett's arrest is a reminder of the government's intolerance for dissent and its commitment to control the activities of foreign critics.

Briefly

Holloway retial

A retrial has been scheduled for April for the murder of a U.S. citizen in Saudi Arabia. The retrial will take place in a court in Riyadh, the capital of Saudi Arabia.

The defendant, a U.S. citizen, was convicted of murder in a court in Riyadh in 1979. However, the conviction was overturned on appeal and a retrial was ordered.

The retrial will take place in a court in Riyadh, the capital of Saudi Arabia. The court will be composed of judges appointed by the Saudi government.

The retrial will be a significant event for the U.S. citizen, who will have the opportunity to present new evidence and to challenge the prosecution's case. The retrial will also be a test of the Saudi judiciary's commitment to fair trials and to the rule of law.

Sealers at work

ST. ANTHONY, Nebraska (AP) - Three Sealer workers were killed on March 11, 1979, in a freak explosion at a Sealer plant in St. Anthony, Nebraska. The explosion occurred during routine maintenance work at the plant.

The three workers who died in the explosion were identified as James Miller, age 23; Donald J. Adams, age 25; and Robert E. Johnson, age 27. All three were employees of the Sealer company.

The cause of the explosion is under investigation. However, preliminary reports indicate that the explosion was caused by a malfunction of the equipment at the Sealer plant.

The Sealer company is a manufacturer of precision metal products. The company has factories in several states, including Nebraska, where the explosion occurred.

The explosion at the Sealer plant in St. Anthony is a tragic event that has shocked and saddened the entire community. The Sealer company and its workers have expressed their condolences and their support for the families of the victims.

The Sealer company has also announced that it will conduct a thorough investigation of the explosion to determine the cause and to identify any safety improvements that can be made to prevent similar accidents in the future.
Workers: Kerr-McGee safety concern inadequate

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — The first witnesses in the $1.5 billion civil suit against Kerr-McGee Nuclear Corp. by the family of nuclear reactor worker Bill Clark, who died in a radiation accident, testified that the reactor did in fact cause his death.

"The reactor was the cause of it," said Coola Clark, the reactor's life-long employee. "We were all worked hard, but we were all worked hard for a reason... to make money for our families." Clark was killed in a explosion in 1983, while working on the reactor.

Another witness, John Doe, who worked at the plant for 30 years, said he had never seen a safer workplace.

"I've worked on reactors in every state and I've never seen a plant like this," Doe said. "It's clean, it's safe, and it's efficient."

The trial is expected to last several weeks, with testimony from more than 100 witnesses. The case is being heard in federal court in Oklahoma City.

Cat's fatal

WOODSTOCK, N.Y. (UPI) — A man trying to rescue a kitten stranded on a tree fell and died after a branch snapped.

Edward Brown, 47, of Woodstock, was at a friend's house when he heard a kitten crying in a tree. He climbed up to the tree and tried to save the kitten, but a branch broke as he reached for it.

"I was just trying to save the kitten," Brown said. "But the branch was too weak and it broke."

The kitten died at the scene, and Brown was taken to a hospital where he later died of his injuries.

SYNERGY—one excellent reason why Advanced Audio is the place to purchase a music SYSTEM.

There are 4 more:

1. The Infinity On tour has proven its accuracy and clarity. VHF is more than thoroughly enjoyable.

2. The PHILIPS Button Receiver is built here in the U.S. by Philips workers at 110 cents per channel. VHF is absolutely outstanding.

3. The Advanced Audio Car Stereo is a product of the company that invented the cassette.

4. The FJX5 Phone Cartridge is sometimes seen mounted on a truck. VHF is quite affordable.

It came from the production section

It all began inauspiciously. No one expected it, no one thought anything like this could happen. Have you ever had warnings of it, vague forebodings that things weren't quite right? What, what would you say in such a case?

When Louise returned from the supermarket that day, she noticed that along with the usual stack of frozen dinners, were a number of oranges, a box of raisins, and a bag of cornflakes. She was surprised to see these items in their refrigerator, usually she saw only milk, bread, and butter in there. She wondered if perhaps something was wrong, or if perhaps they had suddenly decided to eat healthier.

The next day, when she arrived at work, she noticed that the usual cup of coffee, sitting on the counter, was now accompanied by a small bottle of milk. This was odd, as she usually only drank water. She wondered if perhaps she had been forgotten, or if perhaps someone had forgotten to take their own drink.

Over the course of the next few weeks, other strange things began to appear. A small box of chocolates was found on her desk, which she knew had been placed there via the vending machine. A small stack of books was found on her desk, which she didn't need. A small bouquet of flowers was found on her desk, which she didn't like.

Louise thought that these things were probably just a trick or a prank, but as time went on, the strange things became more frequent. A small cake was found on her desk, which she didn't want. A small note was found on her desk, which she didn't read.

At first, Louise thought that these things were probably just a prank, but as time went on, the strange things became more frequent. A small cake was found on her desk, which she didn't want. A small note was found on her desk, which she didn't read.

Until one day, when the strange things became almost overwhelming. A small box of chocolates was found on her desk, which she knew had been placed there via the vending machine. A small stack of books was found on her desk, which she didn't need. A small bouquet of flowers was found on her desk, which she didn't like.

It was at this point that Louise realized that something strange was happening. She began to investigate, and discovered that the strange things were being placed on her desk by someone who was trying to communicate with her. She realized that she was being contacted by someone who was trying to communicate with her.

Louise decided to contact the police, who investigated the case. They found that the strange things were being placed on her desk by someone who was trying to communicate with her. They found that the strange things were being placed on her desk by someone who was trying to communicate with her.

Louise was grateful that she had been contacted by someone who was trying to communicate with her. She was now able to communicate with someone who was trying to communicate with her.

The end.
Albee ensemble uneven

BY JUDI GREEN

Edward Albee, 82, a master of bitter and biting observation, has died. His plays, often set in witty, often sharp, sometimes sardonic, often satirical, always searing, have been performed around the world. In his 53-year career, he has written 23 one-act and eight full-length plays, winning a Pulitzer Prize, a Tony Award, a Drama Desk Award and a Drama League Award. His works have been translated into more than 30 languages, and he is the only American playwright to have won the Pulitzer Prize, the Obie Award, the Drama Desk Award and the Drama League Award in the same year.

Albee began his career in the 1960s, with plays such as "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" and "The Zoo Story," which were both produced on Broadway. He went on to write plays such as "A Delicate Balance," "Three Tall Women," "The American Dream," and "The Lieutenant of Inishmore." His latest play, "Dendrology," was produced in 2018.

Albee was a prolific playwright, with over 20 plays produced during his career. He was known for his dark humor and his ability to create characters that were both sympathetic and repellent. His plays often dealt with themes of love, death, and the human condition, and he was praised for his ability to create a sense of suspense and intrigue.

Albee was born in Washington D.C. on June 24, 1929. He was the son of a newspaper publisher and a teacher. He studied at Harvard University and the University of Virginia, and he later attended the University of Iowa's graduate writing program.

Albee wrote his first play, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?," at the age of 22, and it was produced on Broadway in 1962. He won the Pulitzer Prize for Drama for that play, and he went on to write many more successful plays, including "The Zoo Story," "A Delicate Balance," "The American Dream," and "Three Tall Women." His last play, "Dendrology," was produced in 2018.

Albee was a member of thehappy list, which also included playwrights such as Tennessee Williams, Arthur Miller, and Angels in America. He was known for his outspokenness and his willingness to express his opinions, even if they were controversial.

Albee was married three times, and he had four children. He was also a frequent collaborator with director John Guare and playwright David Henry Hwang.

Albee is survived by his wife, the actress Joy predecessor; his children, Price, Tish, and David; and his grandchildren. He died on May 16, 2016, at the age of 87.

Berman subtle, technically strong

BY JUDI GREEN

Stanley T. Berman, 82, a founder and sometime director of the American Symphony Orchestra, died April 20 at his home in Manhattan. He was a devoted husband, father, and grandfather, and a dedicated musician, who had been a part of the New York musical landscape for more than 50 years.

Berman was born in New York City on July 17, 1933. He began playing the piano at the age of five, and he entered the Juilliard School of Music at the age of 13, where he studied with the legendary pianist Artur Rubinstein.

After graduating from Juilliard, Berman joined the New York Philharmonic, where he played under the baton of the great maestro Leonard Bernstein. He later went on to become the concertmaster of the New York Philharmonic, a position he held for more than 20 years.

Berman was known for his technical mastery and his ability to bring out the best in his colleagues. He was a key member of the orchestra's wind section, and he was frequently called upon to play the solo parts in symphonies and other large-scale works.

Berman was also a gifted teacher, and he taught at the Manhattan School of Music for many years. He was a dedicated mentor to many of the city's finest young musicians, and he was a tireless advocate for the arts in New York City.

Berman is survived by his wife, the actress Joy predecessor; his children, Price, Tish, and David; and his grandchildren. He died on May 16, 2016, at the age of 87.
Health administration job market good

By P. J. ROBERTS
Daily Reporter

Although the number of hospitals in the United States continues to remain stable, there are job openings in the field, especially in the area of health economics, according to a U.S. Chamber of Commerce report. The report claims that there are less hospitals in the United States, but the number of jobs in the field will continue to grow, and the demand for health administrators will continue to rise.

"There are plenty of positions in health care," he reports. "The reality of the moment is that there is a shortage of health administrators in the country. There will probably be less hospitals in the near future, but the need for health administrators will increase."
Dam failure floods Denver suburb

WHEAT RIDGE, Colo. (AP) — A small water control dam made of an inflated rubberified fabric collapsed last Saturday, sending floodwaters into a Denver suburb and forcing about 1,900 people from their homes.

There were no deaths or injuries in the flooding, and damage was minor. Officials said the flood was caused to two homes in the far north of the city by the rain.

The officials and their police said the water damaged what caused the hole, but damage was not ruled out.

"There are a couple of houses in the flooded," they said. "It's not a big flood, but it's a big flood."}

Talks iron out Sinai withdrawal

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Egyptian and Israeli officials put the final touches to a week-long meeting here Tuesday on details of Israel's withdrawal from Sinai, which is under Egyptian military occupation.

The Syrian announcement came as the United States took important steps to ensure that American diplomats in the Middle East receive adequate protection from Israeli military personnel over the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

The Americans are concerned that the Lebanese, as the only country in the Middle East with a large presence of American citizens, may be targeted by the Israeli military, which has been accused of mistreating and killing civilians in Lebanon.

The Israel Sinai withdrawal is expected to begin in the next few days, and the two countries have agreed to work out the final details of the peace treaty.

Shanghai, China (UPI) - Shanghai is one of the world's largest ports, and a walk on the famous " Bund" reveals a variety of architectural styles and monuments from various periods. The tallest building in Shanghai is the Oriental Pearl Tower, which stands 468 meters tall and offers panoramic views of the city. The Bund is a popular tourist destination known for its European-style architecture and is located on the banks of the Huangpu River.

Kelsner, 'Magic' send Spartans to Utah

INDIANAPOLIS (CPI) — Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote finally concedes he has a "very, very good team." The Spartans have won 26 straight games since losing to Loyola on Dec. 4, and are in the NCAA tournament final four for the fourth time in five years.

Heathcote made the statement moments after the fourth-ranked Spartans, sparked by Greg Kelser's 19 points, pounded Notre Dame 93-78 for the Midwest Regional title last night and advance to the final four.

"The only disappointing thing is we had a couple of points late in the second half that we thought we should have made," Heathcote said. "That's the only disappointment. But we can say we've played well in the last 26 games. This is the best team we've had in a long time, believe it or not. The only thing that's disappointing is we had a couple of points late. But we can say we've played well in the last 26 games. This is the best team we've had in a long time, believe it or not."

The victory gives the Spartans a shot at their first national championship. But Heathcote hasn't told his team. He said he would prefer to keep it to himself and have the Spartans concentrate on what's ahead.

"We're going to have a chance to show we can be a very, very good team," Heathcote said. "We've got a chance to show we can be a very, very good team."

The Spartans are one of four teams in the final four. They joined Kentucky, Duke, and others who also advanced to the final four.
