Cambus may face fuel problem

BY MAURY P. PATTEN

Although Cambus waited several months after the energy crisis began before making a move to save fuel dollars, it was not a statement in choosing to take action and not in choosing to take action.

Cambus has taken a step to reduce its fuel costs by shutting down some of its operations. The company announced that it will be reducing the number of gasoline stations it operates by 10 percent. This move comes in response to the high prices of gasoline and diesel fuel, which have led to increased costs for many businesses.

 Cambus has also been working to improve its efficiency in the use of fuel. The company has implemented a number of measures to reduce waste and improve fuel efficiency, including the use of alternative fuels and the optimization of routes and delivery schedules.

As a result of these efforts, Cambus expects to realize significant savings in fuel costs over the coming months. The company is committed to continuing its efforts to reduce its impact on the environment and to improving its bottom line.

Jewish group claims it mailed bombs to Nazis

NEW YORK (UPI) - A group calling itself the Jewish Action Movement said Monday that it mailed eight bombs to Nazi organizations in the United States and Europe to protest the nation’s aid to Israel, which it said was aiding genocide in the Middle East.

The group said it was interested in the U.S. trade embargo on Israel but that the bombs were sent " because of our Council of Action for the Defense of American Jewry."

The group said it would work to stop the bombs from landing in the right hands and not cause problems.

Khmer soldiers massacred by Vietnamese troops

NOKOR, KHMER (UPI) - Hundreds of Khmer soldiers and civilians fought back Cambodian troops in Nokor, killing 60 or more of its inhabitants.

The soldiers were among thousands of refugees that the Khmer government said were forced to leave the country by Cambodia, which claimed it could not accept the threat of a rebellion.

Nong Ngov, a top Khmer official in Bangkok, said the Khmer soldiers were forced to leave because the Khmer government was not able to control the situation.

The soldiers and Cambodians were among more than 100,000 people who were forced to leave the country in the past three months in accordance with that government's policy.

The refugees were pushed into Cambodia by May and have been forced to live in makeshift camps ever since.

is the senate's minority seat legal?

The legality of the Senate minority seat has once again been questioned as a federal court prepares to make a decision on the matter.

The legality of the minority seat was once again questioned when a Fourth Circuit Federal Appeals Court ruled in a case involving the University of North Carolina.

Second polio case confirmed

By PATRICIA DEAN

A second case of polio has been confirmed in the state of North Carolina, bringing the total number of cases to 3.

The North Carolina Department of Health and Human Services announced the confirmation on Monday, stating that the individual affected is a resident of Mecklenburg County.

The department also noted that the individual had not traveled outside the state, and that the case had been reported to the CDC earlier that day.

The department said that it is taking steps to investigate the outbreak and is working closely with local health departments to ensure that all necessary precautions are being taken.

Library thefts cost thousands

By JOHN JAMES

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill has announced that it is investigating a series of book thefts from its libraries.

The university said that it has received multiple reports of books being taken from various libraries, including the main campus library, and that it is working to identify the individuals responsible.

The university also stated that it is taking steps to strengthen security measures and is working with local law enforcement to ensure the safety of its staff and students.

The investigation is ongoing, and the university has urged anyone with information to contact them immediately.
Taking chances with sludge

Despite an Iowa Administrative Code regulation that un- stabilized sewage sludge "shall not be disposed of in a sanitary landfill open to the public., the city of Iowa City recently received informal approval from the state Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) to continue dumping un- stabilized sewage sludge into open lagoons at its public utility site. The DEQ Regional Director Karl Veldhuizen said the DEQ does not have the legal authority to regulate the disposal of sludge to be removed by October 1979. The city is using the lagoons while the city continues to work on developing the city's sewer digestion "superfund" area report to clear up serious concerns for the city. The city has committed to remove sludge from their citywide lagoons at the site of their plant.

Leakage has already occurred from one lagoon, and a second lagoon shows signs of leakage. Alterations have been made, but the potential for leakage is significant.

Because unconverted sewage can spread disease-causing organisms, the DEQ has issued certain regulations to safeguard public health. The city has said the sludge will not be chemically treated for other ich and land-distributed as so far. Monitoring wells - to check for ground water contamination - will also be installed.

No changes should be taken with the health of Iowa Citians in the area surrounding the lagoon; the city should scrupulously observe every guideline suggested by the DEQ.

Staff Writer

Something new, something old

Welcome back to Viewpoints. The Daily Iowan's editorial page. A few things may have changed here's what you have to look forward to (or out for).

First, there's a new look on the editorial page staff. Barbara Davidson, a former DI staffer from the halcyon days of Davidson, a copy editor last year whose work appeared on this page from time to time, is now a full-fledged staff writer. And Linda Schuppner, a former DI staffer from the halcyon days of America. Wills classifies himself as a conservative, but in reading opinions you will begin to wonder about that definition - there's no telling what his opinions may be concerning the next recession.

There will also be a change in focus in our editorials. More local and university issues will be addressed, and there will be a greater variety of DI writers addressing them. Editorials will also be shorter and more in the point, and there will be more of them as well, usually three per day.

We will also be including an op-ed page, which will be made up of columns and op-ed pieces from both DI staff and members of the community and selections from op-ed pieces from other sources. All those interested are urged to submit ideas and/or material for this page.

Some things, of course, will stay the same. Nationally styled syndicated cartoons Patrick Oliphant will be back, causing the ghastlies to tremble with his slashing pen and merciless ink. Winton Bacety, whose familiar line has graced this page since the waning days of the TAF Administration, will continue to grace the feeter of every desk every week or so to grace some there and more. And there's me, with my usual arcane, cerebral, and not altogether readable intellect, to provide a critical interpretation and typographical errors.

Editorial page opinions and editorial cartoons are our readers. Hopefully you'll like back, Joe. To the editorial columns will be part of the editorial page with the largest reader participation (and is often the largest part of the page as well), and no doubt his position will continue in the coming year. The year just past was a vintage year for letters, and we have high hopes for 1979. Or at least we hope we do. We continue to encourage our readers to participate. The only difference is the type of readers who are encouraged to do so.

When it happened to us and we were repeatedly told that "deforestation is love" number one in the back of the shop. The gentlest of them make only in a grid at a profit when they are slightly beyond the scale of the computerndy good to find that three trees have nothing to do with the process of increasing the income of the Federal Reserve Board. The letters are an invaluable source of information and are occasionally used by the Board in their deliberations. For many years the Board has used the letters to the editor as a source of information on economic and financial matters. The Board has also used the letters to the editor as a means of gathering information on economic and financial matters.

There have been periods in history when a severe economic crisis of the kind what caused inflation because production cannot be increased fast enough to meet the demand that more of it doesn't make much of a difference. The New Right simply brings new arguments to the support of the Old Right's main point. It wants to bring to bear the arguments of modern non-Marxist analysts on the theory that the real cause of inflation is the demand for goods. Its arguments are that the demand for goods is too high and that the price of goods is too low and that the price of goods is too low.

Second, these leaders are those who are trying to make the rustify of wealthy and middle-class Americans to their support. Inflation avoidance and asset appreciation are the main goals of this group. The New Right is against the expansion of government and the redistribution of wealth. The New Right is for a smaller government and a more competitive market.

Pope cries at welcome

CZECHOSLOVAKIA, Prague (UPI) — A small gathering of 1 million people Sunday for Pope John Paul II's visit to the country "was clearly under the influence of the pope's presence and his message of peace and the need to care for the poor," a Czechoslovak diplomatic in Prague said.

The pope was clearly moved by the crowds during his trip, which included a brief stop at the United Nations building, the site of a papal mass and a visit to a nearby hospital where he talked to the sick. He told them his visit would be "a blessing, a grace for the world." He also said that the United Nations "will be a place where we can live together and work together for the good of all the world." He added: "We are all brothers and sisters, we all belong to the same family, the human family." He also spoke about the importance of peace and the need to work together for a better world.

The pope was greeted by a cheering crowd of 1 million people Sunday in Prague, the Czechoslovakian capital, as he arrived for a two-day visit to the country. The crowd included large numbers of children and young people, many of them holding signs and cheering as the pope drove through the city.

The pope's visit will be his first to the Czech Republic and his sixth to the country since he arrived in 1966. He has visited the country in 1979, 1987, 1989, 1992, and 1995.

The pope's visit is expected to draw a large crowd of worshipers to the country's capital, where he will celebrate a mass at the city's main cathedral. He will also meet with leaders of the country and tour the city's historic sites.

The pope's visit comes as the Czech Republic is grappling with economic challenges, including high unemployment and a shrinking workforce. The country is also facing political unrest, with a new government taking office this year.

Gasohol: on move

By TOM TUDOR

Support for the use of gasohol, the 10% alcohol-90% gasoline blend that stops alcohol from being used as a gasoline additive, has increased among motorists. Pennsylvania legislators have been urged to encourage the production of alcohol and to add a 10% excise tax to the gasoline sold in that state. The campaign to stop alcohol from being used as a gasoline additive has been supported by several organizations, including the American Gasohol Association, which was formed to promote the use of alcohol as a gasoline additive. The group has also been working with state legislators to enact laws that would make alcohol-gasoline blends available at the pump. The Pennsylvania legislature is expected to pass a bill that would allow alcohol-gasoline blends to be sold at the pump, and the group is working with other states to pass similar legislation. The campaign to stop alcohol from being used as a gasoline additive is expected to continue, and it is likely that more states will pass laws that allow alcohol-gasoline blends to be sold at the pump. Iowa Tennis Coach and Tournament Director Cathy Pittman faced a hectic week before the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women National Tennis Championships began. Rain and unusually warm weather caused problems during the tournament and during the first day of tennis, but that was just to be expected.

The Iowa women's team came off as expected, but problems with courts in Texas and Florida are anticipated to hit Friday. Doctors diagnose their performance problems. Pittman Techad that a large part of the logistics of the match was handled from the Cedar Rapids and the Quad Cities.
