No DC-10s in U.S. air until "safe"

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government's 11-year research effort to develop an effective fire extinguisher that can be used inside the cockpit of an aircraft was dealt another blow today when the Federal Aviation Administration announced that it will not consider a "safe" alternative to the existing fire extinguisher system for the DC-10.

The FAA announced that it has determined that the existing fire extinguisher system is "sufficiently effective" to meet the requirements of the Federal Aviation Regulations, and that it will not recommend any alternative system for consideration by the FAA.

Local truckers plan blockade at West Branch diesel outlets

By ROB BORBART

A group of local independent truckers plans to block the diesel outlet at West Branch, Iowa, at 8 a.m. Monday in protest against the routine trucking of vehicles into the city from the airport.

The truckers, who have been protesting the routine trucking for several weeks, said they plan to block the outlet for two hours to draw attention to their concerns.

The protest is in response to a recent increase in the number of vehicles being transported into the city, which they claim is causing traffic congestion and environmental problems.

"We are tired of this," said one of the truckers. "We want the city to take action to stop this irresponsible practice."

The truckers plan to park their trucks in front of the outlet and block the road to prevent any vehicles from entering or leaving.

The protest is scheduled to begin at 8 a.m. and last until 10 a.m. The truckers said they will continue to block the outlet until their demands are met. They are calling on the city to take action to reduce the number of vehicles being transported into the city.

The city of West Branch has been made aware of the protest and has promised to address the issue.

UI feels energy crunch; plans made to purchase gasohol, encourage Campus use

By MARY ADAMS

President Bolling said the University of Iowa will consider the purchase of gasohol as an alternative fuel for its transportation needs.

"We are looking into the feasibility of using gasohol," Bolling said. "It is important for us to consider all options in this energy crisis."

The university is currently exploring the potential of using gasohol in its fleet vehicles and in the university's fueling station.

"Gasohol is a promising alternative fuel," Bolling said. "It is cleaner and more efficient than traditional fuels."

The university is also considering the purchase of vehicles that run on gasohol, such as hybrid electric vehicles.

"We are committed to reducing our carbon footprint and protecting the environment," Bolling said. "Gasohol is one way we can do that."

The university is currently in talks with several companies to purchase gasohol and hybrid electric vehicles.

The university's fueling station is expected to begin offering gasohol in the near future.

The books and students have increased, but the buildings space stays the same

President Bolling said that the University of Iowa is facing a growing enrollment problem as the number of students continues to increase.

"The enrollment increase has put a strain on our facilities," Bolling said. "We are seeing a significant increase in the number of students, and we need to find ways to accommodate them."

The university is currently working on a master plan to address the enrollment increase.

"We are committed to finding solutions to this problem," Bolling said. "We want to ensure that our students have the best possible educational experience."
Violence mars Pope's tour of homeland

CEZCHOSTOWA, Poland (AP) - A Polish police report said the Pope's motorcade was attacked by angry peasants just hours after he arrived in this Silesian town, but the Vatican said the visiting pontiff was not hurt.

The report said several peasants and townsmen threw stones at the popemobile on the motorcade's way to the cathedral. The report's author, police commissar Jan Ptaszek, said the car was not damaged.

The Vatican press office said the Pope was well and that the motorcade's route had been changed.

Pope Paul VI is beginning a three-day visit to Poland, one of the most troubled countries in the communist bloc, to try to patch up relations between the Vatican and Rome.

Sixteen months ago, the Vatican canceled a planned papal trip to Poland after the leader of the Solidarity movement, Lech Walensa, was arrested and then expelled from the country.

The Pope is schedul ed to return to Rome after his visit.

The damaged motorcade will be repaired after the Pontiff's departure.

Reputations key to moving up

For faculty members, finding a job in academia is not always easy, no matter who you are or how you know your way around. But even though they may go through their scholarly endeavors with enthusiasm and determination, their level of visibility, among other things, makes it difficult for them to find new opportunities. The key to success, according to Dr. Bezanson, is to find a way to make a good impression on academic committees and thereby attract a specific type of job offer.

Bezanson has met with various interest groups and job boards with a brief overview of the proposed facility, including football fields; and training rooms; and training rooms; and training rooms.

The new union was officially created at 11:52 a.m. COT (UP). The merger was Thelma Johnson, a managing director of the University of Iowa, and Lloyd-Jones said of the football fields, "We have to be ready to take on the challenge of being the best team in the nation." The merger was approved by Congress and then by the House. The House has not been able to take any Senate committee, although similar moves to extend the ban have been made.

The House gesture is the original low-level FBI report on the attack of the terrorist group in the late 1980s. The FBI has said that it has no plans to reintroduce a new income tax for all college students, and in any case such a change could take effect until at least a year and a half later.

The resource passed by the subcommittee should still be approved by the full Commerce Committee and then by the House. The vote has not been taken by any Senate committee, although similar moves to extend the ban have been made.

At the same time the panel rejected a move by the State Department to freeze funding to the group.

Tuesday's Supreme Court decision, upholding the Massachusetts law which gives lifetime preference in public employment to veterans, has thrown the issue back into the hands of the Congress. Because the Massachusetts law was one of the most generous in granting veterans preference, other states have similar laws which will probably be protected by the high court's ruling.

The Massachusetts law was challenged by Henry Freney who has taken only three cars three years ago and each time he had his ranking lowered because men veterans with lower scores had, under the law, automatically been moved ahead of him on the list. The federal government and most states, including Iowa, have a "point system" by which a veteran's score is raised by giving him a specified number of points for his years of service. In the case tried in the federal court, the trial judge agreed with Freney and lowered his ranking. For example, the Iowa law gives Iowa veterans who have served in a war zone an additional 30 points above the veteran's test score, without a limit, at a time.

The National Organization for Women (NOW) has already said that it will begin lobbying state legislators and Congress to change their veterans preference laws. Such laws should be modified because, despite the fact that the intention was not to discriminate against women, the effect has been discriminatory.

From 1950 to 1970 the number of women in the armed forces has increased from 2 to 5 million. The current emphasis on recruiting the most qualified applicants, the more reasonable solution would seem to be to limit either the number of years to which veterans preference is limited to one-time entry usage and to women from the better public employment jobs and would require a modification because despite the fact that the intention was not to discriminate against women, the effect has been discriminatory.

If Congress were to pass a law which would result in the closure of businesses in Iowa, it would be seriously about the kinds of hardship the long-range shortages are going to become a way of life. Intelligent, in some states where fuel station blockades only threaten livelihoods, so in diesel stations in western Iowa, primarily hiring the most qualified applicants, the more reasonable solution would seem to be to limit either the number of years veterans preference to a one-time entry usage and to women from the better public employment jobs and would be to modify because despite the fact that the intention was not to discriminate against women, the effect has been discriminatory.

The principal fact apparently being ignored about the recurring energy problems. Car convos can actually threaten lives and if so many people weren't cognizant of them, a somewhat cynical prudence may be needed that the voters would find it difficult to do the right thing to solve our problems. Iowa truckers to join blockade

JOE BURKE, Des Moines, Iowa-Glenn Baker, president of the Iowa Truckers Association, said he expects Iowa to be among the states which will be affected by the nationwide strike.

"We are an emerging factor in the energy business," Baker said. "The truckers'吒, are a vital part of the nationwide strike and the Iowa truckers will be part of that." Baker said the Iowa truckers have been working for a new relationship with the oil companies.

Gas available, but prices climb

JOE BURKE, Des Moines - Gasoline supplies are continuing to be a concern as dealers are running low on the product.

"We are running out of gasoline," Baker said. "We are just getting what we can and we are not going to accept any less than we are currently getting."

The Iowa Department of Natural Resources, which has been monitoring the situation, said that the supplies of gasoline are only at 20% of normal.

No-smoking law has little impact

By KEVIN BYRONE

After more than a year, Iowa’s no-smoking ordinance has had little effect.

For instance, violations are regularly reported but a majority of them are at bars, Iowa Ave. and Second St.

It’s rubber, though, explained Dan Berry, a bar owner and part-owner of the MFA Art Center on Burlington St.

The ordinance, passed April 18 by the City Council, states that “public places,” including municipal buildings, bars, restaurants, retail stores and other commercial establishments must post the signs and prohibit smoking.

The ordinance has had little effect for non-smokers. Though there are no penalties for violations, 10 citizens have complained, “I could be classified as an occasional smoker,” said Mike Seery, a bar owner.

“I’ve been in business for 13 years and have been people on the council and I’ve never seen any problems,” he said.

“We didn’t want the ordinance to be meaningless, as a tool for bars to non-smokers,” said Dan Berry. Because it was a compassionate measure.

Feds cut program for drunk drivers

By TOM BYRNE

Iowa City Police Chief Robert Miller calls a decision to eliminate federal funding for a local drunk driving programampaign “disappointing.”

Miller was referring to a program that was to be funded by $290,000 a year to Iowa City through 1996.

Miller is referring to a program that was cut by the National Highway Safety Administration.

According to federal regulations, the city is required to stop funding, Miller said.

“I would have requested $290,000 for the running fiscal year,” Miller said. The chief added that it was the amount the city is receiving currently.

“We don’t want to lose this money,” he said.

He added that the city was able to continue funding for the program because the city had set aside money for the purpose.

Miller said that it is “important to have a program that will help educate the public on the dangers of drinking and driving.”

“I think the program is effective in Iowa City, and we hope to continue funding it in the future,” he said.

Miller also mentioned the possibility of finding another source of funding for the program.

The program, which is called the “No-Driver’s Program,” is designed to help people who have been convicted of drunk driving.

It provides educational programs and support services to help people change their behavior.

The program has been successful in other cities, Miller said, and he hopes to continue it in Iowa City.

Suit filed for forklift injury

An Iowa City woman who said that she was injured in a forklift accident has filed a lawsuit against her employer.

The suit was filed by the woman in Johnson County Circuit Court against her employer, All-Chains Company, and the State of Iowa.

The woman, who was working at an All-Chains facility, was injured when a forklift was raised and she fell off the lift.

The woman is seeking unspecified damages, she said.

This is not the first time a forklift injury has occurred in Iowa City.

On July 9, 1991, a forklift driver was injured when the lift was raised and he fell off the lift.

The woman, who was a forklift operator, said that the lift was not being used properly.

The suit alleges that the employer failed to maintain the lift properly and that the lift was not being used properly.

The woman is seeking unspecified damages.

The suit is not yet filed.

Drug in sleep aids banned; ‘causes cancer’

WASHINGTON (UPI) - An Amendment on the medical use of the sleeping drug sedative, which was previously classified as a controlled drug, has been passed by the Senate. The legislation is expected to be signed into law by President Reagan within the next few days.

W. H. A. has released the following statement regarding the new legislation:

“The amendment to the Controlled Substances Act will allow the medical use of the drug, which has been found to be a source of cancer therapy. The amendment was passed to protect patients who require the drug for their medical treatment.”

The amendment, authored by Senator Joe Friday and signed by Senate Majority Leader Brian de Sings, makes the following changes:

1. The drug will be available for medical use.
2. It will no longer be classified as a controlled substance.
3. It will be regulated by the National Health and Welfare Department.
4. It will be available only with a prescription.

Many medical professionals and patients have welcomed the new law, saying it will improve access to the drug for those who need it.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government has refused to ease restrictions on the use of marijuana, which was previously classified as a controlled drug. The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare maintains that marijuana is still a dangerous drug and should not be made available for medical use.

The government has cited studies that show marijuana use is associated with a variety of health problems, including respiratory problems and psychological disturbances.

W. H. A. has released the following statement regarding the new policy:

“The government remains committed to protecting public health. We believe that marijuana use is a serious threat to public health and we will continue to enforce our policies to prevent its use.”

The government has also announced that it will continue to monitor the use of marijuana and will update its policies as necessary.

After the heats, both Eastwood and Johnson advanced to the semifinals. Eastwood, who finished first in the 60-yard freestyle event, was the top seed in the 100-yard freestyle event as well. Johnson, who finished second in the 60-yard freestyle event, was the second seed in the 100-yard freestyle event.

The semifinals will be held tomorrow afternoon, with the top two finishers advancing to the championship round.

Southern California's Annette Gambardella started strong but Brigham Young's Louise Givens was no match for her in the 200-yard freestyle event. Gambardella finished first in the event, but her time was more than a second slower than the time of the second-place finisher, who was from the University of Southern California.

The results of yesterday's heats set up a match-up between Gambardella and Givens in the 200-yard freestyle semifinals. Both teams advanced easily as expected, with Gambardella finishing first and Givens third.

The University of Texas team, featuring Margaret Johnson, was the top seed in the 100-yard freestyle event. Johnson finished second in the event, but her time was more than a second faster than the second-place finisher, who was from the University of Southern California.

The semifinals will be held tomorrow afternoon, with the top two finishers advancing to the championship round.

Complaints cause revamping of tournament seeding plan

To help pace the top-seeded Trojans to a 5-0 victory over second-seeded Florida Atlantic University, the NCAA is making some changes to its tournament seeding plan.

The NCAA has been criticized for its seeding system in recent years, with some teams feeling that they were unfairly ranked. The NCAA is making changes to try to address these concerns.

One change is that the NCAA is allowing teams to appeal their seeding if they believe they were incorrectly ranked. This will allow teams to challenge their seeding if they feel that they were unfairly ranked.

Another change is that the NCAA is making changes to its algorithm for determining seedings. This will allow the NCAA to be more consistent in its seedings and avoid some of the problems that have occurred in the past.

The NCAA is also making changes to its rules regarding travel expenses for teams. This will allow teams to be more competitive and avoid some of the problems that have occurred in the past.
