Plastino asks for hold on 2nd ramp

By ROG ROBERT

IOWA CITY Public Works Director Robert Plastino recommended the City Council defer awarding a contract for constructing the second parking ramp after what he appeared to be a long and vocal presentation by the public opposed to the project.

Plastino said the hold on the project has nothing to do with the recentAwsion meeting, but is purely an economic decision.

"It is a good time to do this," he said. "I am not saying we are not going to build it, but I think we need to hold it and re-evaluate the situation." Plastino said the cost of construction for the ramp is now approximately $600,000.

"We are doing the project when the market is lower," he said. "I don't think we can build it for $600,000 now." Plastino said the city staff will need a week to review the staff report and then that report will be available to the public.

The recommendation of the city commission will determine whether the hold on the project will be lifted."

Dakin the night away

With Friday night being the opening of the UI Student Union, the residence halls and some of Iowa City's bars were packed with students looking to have a good time.

"I know a lot of the boys are just stoned or drunk," said one UI student.

"I think it's great. I get out and meet people," said another UI student.

In addition to the UI Student Union opening, UI football fans were in town for the game against the University of Missouri.

"I'm looking forward to the game," said one UI student.

"I'm not really interested in the game," said another UI student.

"I'm just here to have a good time," said a third UI student.

Fort reinstated, but city disputes decision

By STEPHEN HEDGES

The Iowa City Civil Service Commission reinstated temporarily Saturday the appeal of Fort Parker, an Iowa City police officer, and granted Fort the right to participate in the proceedings.

The commission's decision means that Fort will have the opportunity to represent himself in the appeal process.

Fort appealed the demotion and was granted the right to represent himself.

"I believe in the due process of law," said Fort. "I was denied that right."

Ford to consider '80 candidacy

Ford's attorney and former aide David Blovart, in a recent interview, said Ford's office has not received any complaints about the handling of the situation by the university. He declined further comment.

Ford's campaign chairman, Jack Kemp, said Ford's decision to run in 1980 would be based on a comprehensive analysis of the situation. Kemp said Ford would consider the issue after he had completed his term as governor of California.

Ford also said he would consider the issue if he were to become the Republican candidate for the 1980 presidential election. Kemp said Ford would consult with his family and advisers before making a decision.

Ford's campaign will begin a series of meetings with potential donors and supporters in the coming weeks to discuss the issue.

Ford's decision to run in 1980 could have a significant impact on the Republican presidential race. The issue of Ford's potential candidacy has been a topic of speculation for months, and Ford's decision could influence the outcome of the primary and general elections.

Ford's campaign has been focusing on building support among conservative Republicans, who view Ford as a reliable candidate. The campaign has also been working to build a strong network of donors and supporters in key states.

Ford's decision to run in 1980 will likely be a controversial one, as many Republicans have been critical of his record as governor of California. However, some have also expressed support for Ford's candidacy, saying he could be a strong candidate to face off against the Democratic nominee in 1980.

Ford's campaign has been working to build momentum in the early states, and the decision to run in 1980 could give the campaign a boost in those states. Ford's potential candidacy has also raised questions about the future of other Republican candidates, who may be forced to step aside to make way for Ford.

It was not at the meeting but members had voted not to continue with the delay of open meetings question since it was more for their benefit than Ron Tresco's or the public's good. Jay Honohan, Fort's attorney, said the lawyers are not being unreasonable by demanding that money be paid.

Attorney Jim Holman made some rather strong charges during a Civil Service Commission hearing on whether to reinstate Civil Service Police Captain Robert E. Holman.

Holman, Fort's lawyer, said that his client's rights had been violated by the "devious" action taken by Bob Holman of The Daily Iowan and the University of Iowa Newspaper Cooperative.

"We find as evidence that the two acted deviously in the manner and further he did not believe Fort's story," Holman said.

When the commission announced that it was going into closed session, Sept. 17, it is making a ruling after seven hours of testimony. Holman and Fort left the room in the Recreation Center where the hearing was held.

Outside, the two reporters consulted Holman's copy of the Iowa law on media law, which showed that the commission must use one of ten exemptions specified in the law or justification for a closed session must not be a little over from one hour to one hour and ten minutes.
The stall was in fact for a way that it does not involve Fort.

A mongoose among cobras

The official unveiling of Iowa City's new Downtown District was a celebration of a milestone, a moment that marked the transition of a once bustling area into a vibrant hub of activity. The event hummed with excitement as the sun set over the Lucas fountain, illuminating the scene with a warm, inviting glow. The presence of the council members, dressed in their finest, added to the festive atmosphere.

The ceremony was a fitting tribute to the enduring spirit of Iowa City, a city that has always been at the forefront of progress. The council members were joined by local dignitaries, all of whom were eager to witness the opening of the new district. The speeches were filled with praise and anticipation for the future.

In his speech, the mayor of Iowa City, Tom Drury, highlighted the importance of the occasion. "This event is more than the opening of a new district; it's a celebration of the community's resilience and determination," he said. "We've come a long way since the days when the area was something to be avoided. Today, it's a symbol of what we can achieve together.

The mayor's words were met with applause, as everyone present shared in the excitement of the occasion. The mayor then turned to address the crowd, outlining the history of the area and the challenges it had faced. "This district has been a battle ground for urban renewal in this strong siloing and against the Lucas fountain. The mill dedication ceremony.

The official opening of Iowa City's downtown district was a moment of triumph, a testament to the city's commitment to progress. The new district represents a new chapter in the city's history, a chapter that promises a bright future. And it wasn't just the official opening that was celebrated. The entire day was filled with events and activities, all of which contributed to the overall atmosphere of joy and celebration.

As the sun set over the Lucas fountain, the official opening of Iowa City's downtown district came to a close. The council members shook hands, and everyone gathered to toast to the future of the city. The festivities continued into the night, with music and dancing filling the air. The night was one of celebration, a celebration of progress, of community, and of the enduring spirit of Iowa City.

The mayor of Iowa City, Tom Drury, summed it up best: "This event is more than the opening of a new district; it's a celebration of the community's resilience and determination. We've come a long way since the days when the area was something to be avoided. Today, it's a symbol of what we can achieve together."
Congress must pass major bills before start of new fiscal year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three major bills — all debated in the House last week — are on the agenda this week as Congress faces the first prospect of a prolonged session.

The bills to ease the public debt limit and to provide continued funding for agencies whose budgets have not yet been approved must be passed by the Oct. 1 start of the new fiscal year. The Senate, which can only act after the House, is also expected to take up the Panama Canal treaties — also needed by Oct. 1, because Congress has the exclusive right to approve or reject treaties.

In the meantime, the Senate took the first step toward ratification of the Panama Canal treaties — with a 90-3 vote, expected to be concluded next week.

Women improve barrier times

The Iowa women’s cross country team continued to improve their performances in aftering personal best times. Guiding the Hawkeyes throughout the meet was a powerful distance runner, who powered her way to the front of the race. The runner’s strength and speed were key factors in her success. She completed the course in a record-breaking time, setting a new personal best.

The Iowa State team continued to impress, placing second overall. Led by their star runner, who finished in a time of 19:39, the team demonstrated their impressive running ability. The runner’s dedication and training paid off, as she consistently ran at a high level, pushing the limits of her physical endurance.

The Iowa State men’s cross country team also impressed, finishing third in the meet. Runner X, known for his incredible endurance, completed the course in 26:17, demonstrating his strength and determination. The runner’s ability to maintain a high pace throughout the race was a testament to his training and dedication.

Callas wins playoff as Iowa takes fourth

The Iowa's Elena Callas parred the final hole for the win and breaks two Iowa records in the process. She became only the second player in school history to win the conference championship, and the first woman to ever do so.

Callas, who earned rounds of 71 and 70 for a 141 total, tied tee for tee with Illinois' Dian Thomason. The two went to a playoff after regulation, and Thomason had to make a birdie on the first extra hole to force Callas to make par to win.

Spikers' sweep spoiled tennis win big, then loses to Missouri

The Iowa women's tennis team clinched the Big Ten conference title last week, but the team's momentum was short-lived as they dropped both matches over the weekend.

On the line

Last week's win over No. 7 Indiana was just too easy. This week's match against Ohio State will be a true test of our team's ability to fight for a win.

Kettiwonk, Iowa's top player, had a solid match, but the team fell short in their efforts. We need to regroup and come back stronger for our next match.

Iowa plays well but loses three games on road

The Iowa field hockey team played brilliantly this weekend but lost three games in a weekend-long tournament.

Coach Judith Davidson couldn’t help the team’s performance, which was uncharacteristically poor. The Hawkeyes, who are nationally-rated teams, lost all three games despite fighting hard in each contest.

The loss of the opening game, fought against the Western Michigan, was particularly disheartening for the team. Iowa’s defense was solid, but the Hawkeyes couldn’t convert their chances into goals.

In the second game, against the Cincinnati Reds, Iowa held its own for the first half but was outplayed in the second half, yielding three goals and ending the game with a 3-0 loss.

The third game, against the Houston Astros, was even more disappointing. Iowa led early but couldn’t hold onto its lead, eventually losing 2-1.

Iowa’s performance over the weekend was a surprise to many, especially given the team’s reputation as one of the top programs in the country. Coach Davidson said she was disappointed with the results but believed her team will bounce back soon.

 lệnh

BoDStOtt (1P) — George Puller hit a solo home run and Dan Vogt drove in two runs to help the Boston Red Sox to their second consecutive victory in the American League East.

Davidson said her team “would have liked to have won,” but added that the loss was “not a big deal.”

The Hawkeyes’ next game is against the Texas Tech Red Raiders on Saturday, where they hope to get back on track. Davidson said her team “is still in the hunt” for the conference championship.
