DC-10 crashes in Mexico; 72 killed

MEXICO CITY (UPI) - A Western Airlines DC-10 crashed in a forest on an exurban runway here Thursday afternoon, bringing immediate evacuations of survivors from a small airport to a site where it is expected the plane went down as a result of a runway closure at the airport.

Details and debris from Western Airlines Flight 218, which flew from Los Angeles with 307 passengers and seven crew members aboard, were scattered for hundreds of miles.

Survivors and hospital officials reported 51 on the plane dead, including six children. The airline's head offices, the Capitol, Charles Gilbert, was not immediately available.

THREE PEOPLE were injured slightly.

In Los Angeles, Linda Director, head of public relations for Western Airlines, said the officials were trying to reach the site.

"We know of survivors and there are no serious injuries," Director said.

REDIGERS officials said they believed five of the survivors were scattered in the trees.

"We are not sure, initially, whether they did not have any injuries," Director said.

It was the sixth crash involving a DC-10 in 10 years.

PEOPLE who live near the crash site may have reached a special phone line that has been set up to handle questions and report injuries to the area.

"Everyone's mind is on the right side of the plane hit something and brought it down," said westbound engineer Paul Silana, who had been in the air for two hours.

"There were a few minutes without power in the plane," Silana said.

"It was not my way of the last but one," he said. "The last one was in the runway...." Silana said.

"We were free of the plane for a short while," Silana said.

Readers take creationist to task

To the Editor:

I was very impressed by Paul Provey’s challenge to keep John Morris of the Institute for Creation Research. I very much regret to have to warn your "fair" editor of problems with the John Morris. I must present him to my personal clients as a source of information and he has always been a reliable source of that information. I have been in the past on his mailing list and have always received a prompt response to any letter I have sent him.

Unfortunately, I feel that there is only one people who can make a decision on creationism in general. That person is to be found in John Morris. He has been quoted on many occasions in the past. This is a very serious matter to him. I have always enjoyed hearing about the work of the Institute for Creation Research, and I very much regret to have to warn your "fair" editor of problems with the John Morris. I have always been impressed by his work and have always received a prompt response to any letter I have sent him.

I hope you will agree with me that John Morris is a very reliable source of information and I would ask that you continue to support him in his work.

Sincerely yours,

Students need ERA

by KATHY STOKER

The state ERA has been passed by the Iowa legislature and will be on the ballot in the November 1980 general election as required by the Equal Rights Amendment. The proposed amendment reads in part:

"...for the purpose of securing equal rights for women in regard to security of life, liberty, and property, under the protection of laws of the State of Iowa..."

Vicki Feldman, chairwoman of the Community Change Coalition for Women's Rights, said the group opposed the ERA, said the ERA group, organized this fall, is needed because feminists find that they've never been in the legislative process before. Their goal is to prevent changes in property rights and the limitation of the free market system.

"There is a strong groundswell of organizing activity, especially by women, and an awareness that the ERA is necessary for the protection of women's rights," Feldman said. "The ERA provides a base for protection of women's rights, a base for a new communication and care. But at the same time it's to be admired for the protection it gives to the law..." she said.

Feldman said that she personally has been able to speak to the state group's strength.

"I have been able to speak to the ERA coalition, and the ERA coalition is the only one that is organized and aware of the ERA coalition. They've been able to have meetings, and they've never been in the legislative process before..."

We were missionaries carrying our feminist published material. We were doing self-help downstairs. 'I thought this was for the law students...',' Feldman said.

"I preach to you is to learn the very first time the female vagina and cervix, I who had given birth to five children and had one miscarriage..."

The ERA was a tremendous opportunity to share gynecological self-help. Frequently they'd just do self-help concepts into mainstream health care.

"It's almost a rhetorical question: Why are 'they're just ripping off the idea? Many women who are not even aware that it can be done. Many women who are not even aware that it can be done..."

"...on the basis of gender. The ERA guarantees the right of self-help..."

Balmer fears backers may be too complacent

By ROB DOBSHART

The uncertain political climate is putting increasing pressure on the Iowa City Council, with more than half of its members expressing concern about the city's direction. The current four-member liberal majority, including Bill Gerlts, John Lazes, and Donnelly, is facing a challenge from the Republican Party.

"We have seen a shift in the political landscape," said one council member. "The council has been dominated by a small coalition, but now we're seeing a realignment of power." The council is divided on issues such as spending, budget priorities, and the future of the Iowa Municipal Airport.

The council is expected to vote on their budget plans this week, and the issue of airport funding is likely to be a major point of contention. Some council members are calling for a comprehensive plan to address the airport's needs, while others are pushing for immediate funding.

"The council has a responsibility to ensure the airport's growth," said another council member. "We need to make sure we're not just looking at short-term solutions." The airport is facing significant challenges, including increased construction costs and changing demands from airlines.

On a personal note, the council's behavior is concerning. The members seem to be more concerned with protecting their own careers than serving the city's best interests. This is especially concerning in the face of the ongoing pandemic, where the council's decisions could have a significant impact on public health.

"The council needs to prioritize the health and safety of our community," said one concerned citizen. "We need leaders who are dedicated to the city's well-being, not their own agendas." The council is expected to meet again next week to discuss the budget and airport plans.

Carter pledges $400 million to research

By HENRY WILSON

John Carter, the founder of the Carter Research Corporation, has pledged $400 million to support medical research. The pledge will fund a new research institute focused on treating neurological disorders.

"I've long been passionate about finding cures for neurological conditions," said Carter. "We need to invest in research to find new treatments and cures." The institute will be located near the university's medical campus, providing access to cutting-edge facilities and talent.

The institute will focus on research into neurological conditions such as Alzheimer's, Parkinson's, and multiple sclerosis. It will also invest in research into brain injuries and trauma.

"Our goal is to make a difference in the lives of millions," said Carter. "We need to work together to find new treatments and cures for neurological conditions." The institute is expected to begin operations in two years.

Comedy opens season for I.C. Community Theater

By JUDITH GREEN

The authors of Three Men on a Horse are thrilled to have their play featured in the Season Opener. "It's a great opportunity for our theater," said one author. "We're excited to see how our audience responds." The play will be performed at the University Theater, located on the university campus.

The play follows three friends who are on a road trip and end up in a small town. The town is having a festival, and the friends are caught up in the festivities. The play is a comedy, and the authors are hoping it will be a hit with the audience.

"We want to make sure our play is accessible to everyone," said one author. "We want to provide a fun and enjoyable experience for our audience." The play will be performed over the weekend, and tickets are available online.

Gas supplies last through extra day in October

By United Press International

The extra day in October reignited gasoline rationing in some parts of the nation, but most Americans will not feel the pinch despite the Economy Act, a spot check by UPI showed Wednesday.

Some Midwestern cities have halted self-service pump prices by a peso to 5 cents a gallon in some places, and the AAA said approximately a sizable percentage of their members avoided the end of the month. Meanwhile, some cities to 50 cents in their states as a result of the Economy Act, which the AAA said produced a temporary halt in the state of New York's or- ders and along the New Jersey Turnpike.

By large the rest of America is not facing this problem, said an AAA official. "What gas lines we have have been considerably shorter than they were over the summer."

TWO WEEKS AGO, D. L. Tenney, oil analyst, predicted certain shortage conditions in the last two days of the month. But, he said, "It looks to me like it's getting very difficult to continue with the same sort of shortage the AAA has been talking about, with all the cutting being done by all the automobile owners to save money and fuel."

It's impossible to save fuel if the lines are breaking up and down systematically," he said.

Poulsen also indicated that, con- trary to an advertisement published by a group called the Motorcraft Court, insurance that has beenand held over, and another set of the insurance policy that he's been using.

Halpern, poet-publisher, to read from his works

By Carl Wuhrer

Lewiston Daily Sun

Sunday, August 6, 1978

HELEN SARAH HALPERN, poet-publisher of The American Poetry Review, will read from the volume she has compiled, "One Step Closer," beginning at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at the University of Southern Maine Student Union Building Ballroom. The event is sponsored by the USM Department of English and the Maine Poetry Society.

The volume, written by 45 poets in the U.S. and Europe, is dedicated to "the struggle to bring poetry into the world in the next generation." The poets included are the most prominent and up-and-coming voices in the country.

"One Step Closer" is the most ambitious project ever for The American Poetry Review and is a provocative collection that aims to bring poetry to a new audience.

The evening will feature readings by Halpern, the editors, and other poets who contributed to the volume. The event is free and open to the public.

The American Poetry Review is a leading literary magazine dedicated to the promotion and appreciation of poetry and related arts. The organization is known for its innovative approach to publishing and for its commitment to diverse voices and perspectives.

Friday's success managed to continue points from the Big Ten meet and they were in the thick of the battle.

"Thinking about a Wisconsin team that will take care of them."

Gable believes that perennial "perennial powers" Michigan State and Illinois will give the defending national champions a tough contest, but he's most concerned about the progress of the new people and the newcomers to pick up the slack.

"They've lost a lot of people from Iowa," Gable said. "But that's just workouts, you've got to wait and see."

"For the game designated or her favorite team, call 353·6255. I'll try to help you with the problem you have.

But that doesn't mean that the Iowa coach is selling the Hawkeyes short.

"I have every right in the world to believe that we're going to beat them," Gable said. "I've got no doubt that we can do it."

The Hawkeye coach also calls the winning streak "awesome," but he notes that all the hard work has paid off.

"It's easy to handle," Gable said. "We've got a couple of guys who can beat these guys."

For the record, the Hawkeye lineup includes two All-Americans: Dan Gable and Dan Glenn, who are both expected to be in the thick of the battle.

"The progress is very good," Gable said. "They're thinking about a Wisconsin team that will take care of them."

But the real test will come when the Hawkeyes face Ohio State and Michigan State in the Big Ten meet.

Rusk wrestles, waits for another tryout

By DOUG BERN

When you look at the Iowa wrestling line-up for this season, there could be a new face present but a familiar face back in Iowa this weekend. The former Iowa wrestler and current University of Iowa head coach, Dan Gable, will be in town as part of the wrestling team's annual meet. The meet will take place at 11 a.m. on Saturday.
