By STEPHEN HODGES

CEDAR RAPIDS—Holding in Des Moines today, the Iowa Republican precinct committeeman, Arrival Connally called for a "down-to-earth campaign" as a way to win in November. The third-place finisher in the Iowa caucuses, Connally said: "We have to have a good campaign, if we're going to be in contention." The former vice president, who was an early supporter of Ronald Reagan, said: "We have to go to the people and tell them what we stand for."

Connally, in the second of nine time slots, said his campaign is "a campaign for the people, a campaign for the working man, a campaign for the middle-class man." He added: "We have to go out and tell the people what we stand for." Connally's campaign was one of the few to receive substantial media coverage, although it has not yet achieved national prominence.

In C.R., Kennedy attacks Carter energy policy

By VIVIAN RICKERT

The Iowa City Council on Tuesday that the United States is spending $88 billion syn- thetic fuels would be "an astronomical waste." The council also criticized the president's call for a moratorium on nuclear plant construction, saying it was "not a viable solution." The council's decision to oppose the president's energy policies is part of a broader trend among local governments to challenge federal efforts.

In O'Malley, a celebrity: One woman who appeared at the rally said, "I'm a big supporter of O'Malley." Another added, "I really believe he's the right man for the job." The rally was attended by a diverse group of supporters, including students, teachers, and community leaders.

In Kennedy's case, he's not just a politician, he's also a celebrity. Many people who attended the rally said they were inspired by Kennedy's vision for the future of the United States. "He's the kind of leader we need," one attendee said. "He's not afraid to speak the truth and stand up for what he believes in." Kennedy's message resonated with many in the crowd, who were eager to hear his ideas on how to improve the country.

Kennedy
(Republica's party) commented, "The Senate is up for grabs. There's a lot of money being spent on both sides in the Senate. It's a perfect place to spend money."

The Senate's role is to confirm or reject presidential nominations, and it's often seen as a key battleground in elections. The quote suggests that politics is a business of money and influence rather than a representation of the people's interests.

Reaction
President Kennedy's comments are likely to stir controversy and debate among politicians and citizens. The quote points to the influence of money in politics, which can lead to discussions about campaign finance reform, transparency, and the role of money in shaping the political landscape.

Connolly
Connolly's remarks indicate a focus on the relationship between the government and the people. He mentions the government's failure to act on or even address the situation, highlighting the disconnect between the government and the public sentiment.

Woodfield's
Woodfield's quote suggests a critical and perhaps frustrated perspective on government and politics, with a call for action despite the challenges. The mention of a "great need" and "an open verdict" implies a sense of urgency and a need for decisive action.

Steam tunnels
Steam tunnels are a common feature in older buildings, particularly in historical buildings. They were used to circulate hot water or steam for heating purposes. The quote about their maintenance and the problems associated with them reflects the ongoing efforts to preserve and maintain these systems.

Etcher florist
The florist's quote points to the demanding nature of their profession, which involves long hours and physical labor. The quote also highlights the importance of maintaining a strong work ethic to succeed in such a competitive field.

DOT head: No new F-518 route

Support Iowa PIRG on your optional fee card
The quote suggests a call to action for PIRG supporters to contribute to their efforts. It highlights the organization's role in advocating for consumer interests and encourages individuals to support their cause.

PRAIRIE LIGHTS
The sign for "PRAIRIE LIGHTS" likely refers to a light display or event, possibly related to agriculture or rural life, given the context of "Prairie." The event may be a local or regional celebration or attraction.

Everything you always knew about neuroscience, blido, and nanotechnology... but which somehow slipped your mind.

The quote provides a humorous and engaging summary of the vast amount of scientific information that is often difficult to keep track of. It suggests that the reader will find insights into various areas of science that they might not have considered before.
Hello, I must be going

It has been an interesting, irritating, fascinating year and a half for all of us. I’ll wager. And with it comes mixed feelings that I take leave of the October 4, 1979 edition of the Des Moines Register. Never have we had such a bounty of events to consider for the first time in years. That being the case, I think it is probable for the best that I move on, just turn the backside of my cell phone, and start doing something else.

If you haven’t noticed, we have tried (and failed) to come up with a creative title for this piece, but the idea that our newspaper is the first one to do so in years is an important matter of fact — but for all intents and purposes, forget it.

In the first place, we have failed. We have tried to come up with a creative title, but the idea has been that our newspaper is the first one to do so in years. The creative title has been an important matter of fact — but for all intents and purposes, forget it.

Don't be surprised if you receive a new Atari, Intellivision, or Pong as a gift this Christmas as the nation's Overseas Oil Expense is hurting their business.

"I've been away to bile in tax, but it in a oil for the this crude

MERRIT, secretary manager of Yoders, 10 E. Washington St., said there are few Christmas gifts in the store this year.

Most merchants admit that the 'Christmas rush' has started, but they expect it to get much heavier, especially during the week before Christmas.

"We are looking at a Christmas season like no other," said Dennis Malone, manager of Talman and Brubaker's, 8 S. Clinton St. "We are looking at the season that the Hawkeyes football team is looking at this year.

As the cold weather before "Thanksgiving" his people think that "Christmas is further away than it actually is," he said.

Most downtown Iowa City merchants started staying open longer after Thanksgiving. Also, about 15 of Yoders' employees were overseas.

However, he said that the "Christmas gift" -- the dress skirt or tie -- is not selling as it always does.

People coming from the market this year, said David Ross, manager Supply 5 S. Clinton St., really like the season's "best" showing the Hawkeyes football team is looking at this year.

Most merchants admit that the 'Christmas rush' has started, but they expect it to get much heavier, especially during the week before Christmas, and that the season will be like no other.

"This season will be a lot more like Christmas," said Dennis Malone, manager of Talman and Brubaker's, 8 S. Clinton St. "This season has been slow for us, but we hope to get our business to other areas.

The mild weather before "Thanksgiving" his people think that "Christmas is farther away than it actually is," he said.

Huskies test Iowa in opener

By DUANE BEAN
The Gazette

A number of players felt bad about Iowa's performance last season because the women cagers took on the world of sports, the winner of a tournament last November. Now that Washington Street has reopened, the 4-3 victory.

The loss, which ended Iowa's 1978-79 campaign, was an early exit from the Big Ten Conference.

Iowa was off and running in the first half against Drake. By halftime the score was 4-3. The Hawkeyes had made their only basket of the half and had been outscored 3-1.

The Hawkeyes were better from the free throw line in the second half. By that time, Iowa was shooting 50 percent from the charity stripe, while Drake was shooting 22 percent.

Iowa led 48-45 going into the final minute of the game. Then Drake scored on a put back and later on a three point shot at the buzzer to send the game into overtime.

Hawk senior forward Joni Rensvold, who had 10 points, said, "I think we were fatigued at the end. We didn't have any energy left. Iowa had a big lead and we were down 10 points."

"I think we played good defense and you can't((t)) blame coming back on defense. It's just that 10 points is too much to come back."

The Hawkeyes tried to come back on defense in the overtime. They played tough defense and held Drake to 26 points in the extra period.

In the overtime period, Iowa led 50-49 with 1:16 left, but the Bulldogs scored 10 points in the final minute of the game, while the Hawkeyes scored only three.

"I think we were just tired and we couldn't get any rhythm going. The girls were doing everything we could, but it just wasn't enough."

Iowa, which had to battle back from a 10-point deficit, was down 10 points at one point in the overtime.

"We just couldn't make any shots and we just couldn't make any baskets."

"I think the game was lost in the first half. We just couldn't make any baskets and we just couldn't make any baskets."
