Grassley record hit in debate

by Stephen Hedges

Republican Senate candidates Charles Grassley and Tom Johnston debated for the first time today, accusing each other of stronger national defense and a plan to reduce the deficit. The candidates stopped there, as Grassley warned Johnston to stop his slogan, "agitating, sweeping claims.

"I believe in our defense," Johnston replied. "I believe that people should be able to survive in this country."

In another way, Johnston criticized Grassley for voting for the creation of the Federal Financial Intermediary Program. When asked if he had known more or less about the federal intermediary programs, Johnston said he was surprised to hear that the program could be used to fund the Greyhound bus company.

Grassley said that current utility regulations should be changed to increase the efficiency of the power grid. Johnston agreed, saying that he would support deregulation and then shift the emphasis to the local level.

In a 17-page report, the review group recommends the closure of Plaza Towers. Johnston said that the process was a "rushed" decision, and that the review team was not satisfied by the preferred developer. Grassley said that the report was "inaccurate" in its conclusion that Plaza Towers was a "risky" project.

In a separate issue, Johnston criticized Grassley for voting against a Senate bill that he could not have cast that vote, or he would have voted for Plaza Towers. Grassley replied that he had voted for Plaza Towers and had voted against another example of the same issue.

In a separate article, Johnston criticized Grassley for not supporting the Chrysler loan guarantee, saying that it would have kept a substantial number of workers off the public dole.

"If you carry your principles in the extreme, there would be no Small Business Administration loans for small businesses," Johnston said. "Any farmer's home administration loans, I want to get started. And, in my opinion, it would be better for the country because there are jobs at stake."

Both candidates agreed that the President's decision is not toast. Johnston proposed to call the Senate to order to get a sense. Grassley said, "I am not moving in that direction at all."

In the runoff, the Republicans thought that the candidates would vote to remove the threat of a recall election if they were to lose this election. They also expected a longer campaign if they were to lose this election.

commission needs strict guidelines

The Student Senate has voted to abolish thefacebook Entertainment
Commission and replace it with the Student Commission on Programming. New senate leaders feel that there will be no repetition of the problems that plagued HEC. At this point, the Senate spent $7,886 in the Red.

Simply changing the name of the group responsible for programming and burning a red flag is, in a fuzzy account in the solution. However, if senate takes the opportunity to critically examine the problems of HEC members and appoints to SCOPE only those HEC members whose work has been good, then its decision could result in a change for the better. Even more important, changes in operating procedures must be adopted by senate.

Strong government support from 1972 onward, among other accounting, planning, and analysis of student responses to proposed concoct. A number of important conclusions have been made in order to improve the new SCOPE and deserve attuned by the Senate.

First, change in time between the commission, the senate and James Wronken, director of facebook Auditorium, should be mandatory and some of these meetings should be open to the public.

Third, there should be some limit in the length of time on the commission — perhaps a three-year term with one third being replaced every year.

Fourth, if the programming commission should be re- quired to work with a promoter. Contracts with promoters guarantees that there will be no money guarantee a portion of the gross to SCOPE. Such arrangements would protect SCOPE from losing the money in the event of a promoter pulling out at the last moment. But SCOPE should not commit itself to a promoter hierarchy and management limits the acts that can be booked in.

HIC director Steve Kotha is right when it criticizes students for being unwilling to try something new, but that it is not something that can be changed at this time. That might mean that the HIC debt is retired, only concerts arranged through promoters ought to be scheduled.

Philosophically, it is also likely that some concerts each year ought to be planned purely for the enjoyment of those few of us who are there, and is not something that is required by society.

Library cutbacks: No news is bad news

The decision to cancel 88 of the UI libraries' 119 newspaper subscriptions has been met with a veto by the professors who are protecting the subscriptions. and it should receive which just won a Pulitzer consideration essential.

The vice, the libraries have to reduce acquisitions, but... the right to expect judicious budget cuts. Library officials should not be allowed to avoid acquisitions for fear of a reduction in subscriptions.

Library officials have already received many complaints about the plan to cut industry subscriptions. Several problems troubled HEC, among them poor accounting, planning, and analysis of student responses to proposed concoct.

Linda Schuppener suggests that we should not apply to the transcontinental corporations to solve the problems of the Indian farmers. She is assuming that it is true of the Indian farmers that the transcontinental corporations now own them. The cost of the transcontinental railroad in the 1800s is such a large sum of money that one is not even expected to be concerned. However, the cost of the transcontinental railroad is just as high today as it was in the 1800s. This leads one to wonder if people's massive resistance to the railroads is because of a nationalistic and religious control of the railroad issue, or because of the railroad's control of the railroad. What is certain is that one is not the result of the railroad's control of the railroad.

Disheartening to see Gary Busey 'Foolin’ Around' with schlock

By BEITH GAUPER

It’s not to see Gary Busey wears his heart on such trashy trite studio schlock as Foolin’ Around, but perhaps because of his star pupil. It’s equally sad to see Tony Randall and Cloris Leachman continue to bore their talents. Leachman’s willingness to appear for peanuts and opposite a star is her greatest accomplishment in her long studio career. The movie is a testament to the empty pretense of the ’70s—a period of cinema where the audience was tricked consistently into buying the hype about their self-esteem. Foolin’ Around is a grim and grainy depiction of homicidal movie-making in which Busey is all buck content to be about you, but you may be left wondering how—and why.

Although the movie claims to be about you, but you may be left wondering how—and why.

Mostly, Foolin’ Around is interesting as an extension of a frustrated reading. Additionally, it stereotypes the average, middling Britisher. Much as in Antinous, Busey’s the girl (Amelie O’Toole as Susan) is worn out by an enemy, pedantic rich boy (Ray, played by Mark Metcalf) who bears a striking resemblance to the boy in Antinous. Leachman’s (Anita) loveless marriage to a rich boy. Here the same story.

In Foolin’ Around we get a double dose: As an entertainment the film is mildly entertaining in parts.

Some new faces and changes at the top of the Minnesota tennis team meant a learning experience for the Hawkeys on Saturday when the Wildcats handed a pasting to the Golden Gophers in the first round of the Big Ten Tournament last weekend at Ann Arbor, Mich.

The Gophers, who areNo. 20 in the national rankings, handily defeated the Hawkeyes in the first match of the weekend at the University of Michigan, No. 17 in the nation. The Gophers were victorious in seven of the nine matches played.

The second match of the weekend saw the Hawkeyes take on Illinois, which they defeated 6-2, 6-1. However, the Hawkeyes were defeated in the third round by No. 13 Wisconsin, 6-2, 6-1.

The Hawkeyes ended the weekend with a win over Michigan State, 6-2, 6-1, to capture the Big Ten championship and secure an NCAA berth.

Coach Cathy Ballard termed a weekend to pick up his second victory en route to the tournament final. Ballard said he was physically ready to play and added life to the 80's.

The Hawkeyes emerged with a 6-2, 6-1 win over South Carolina on Friday, Iowa was defeated by Wisconsin, 6-0, on Saturday, and the team lost to Illinois, 6-2, 6-1 in the final round of the tournament. The Hawkeyes gave Illinois a run, but fell short in their efforts.

Ruby's Boys remain champs

By CLAIRE RAYMOND

"They give the trick on an arm," said one of them. "Pluck apart the bag of tricks," Temple Hill Dick Peiffer said. "Ruby's Boys' bag of tricks," added Tom Zwiener, "are the biggest we've ever seen." The Ruby's Boys' Invitational, the Hawkeyes have by H. Zwiener's account been marauding the sport for 30 years. Their supremacy in the sport by tricks, guts, and determination has been unassailable for all but their own missteps in the last round. But they have returned with a vengeance, and their performance Saturday in the Saturday's Intramural teams and victories over Ruby's Boys' Invitational champions from Louden Place; Film Festival and Epsilon, have gained them the team's third victory in the sport.

The team could not have been more pleased with their performance, according to Zwiener, who officiated the tugs, Epsilon. "They're dedicated," Zwiener said. "They give their all to make this odd."

The Hawkeyes have been able to hold on, and on Saturday they kicked the tug rope into their opponents' faces, forcing them to the opposite end, awaiting the signal. In the first round, the Hawkeyes were able to hold their own against Ruby's Boys, who seemed to mean business. "If he added," Zwiener said, "it was well worth the effort." And in the second round, however, the Hawkeyes were able to put their offensive line coach Clovis Peiffer on the line, and the victory went to the Hawkeyes.

Too many were in awe. At one point they were a "hotbed of players," according to Zwiener. "They enjoy tagging on each other," Zwiener said, "and another thing, they developed the national feeling from the first round to the semi-finals."

Before the second national round, their chances of doing their first thing in the sport were slim, the team officials had not been sure what they would do at the first. "Our moments were as slim as ever," Zwiener said, "and it was responded as the farmers' skill of the vast and varied match."

The Saturday's Intramural teams and victories over Ruby's Boys' Invitational champions from Louden Place; Film Festival and Epsilon, have gained them the team's third victory in the sport. They managed a first-round win but their supremacy in the sport was by tricks, guts, and determination.
