Professor: Vote no confidence in regents

By Craig Semelius

A U of I assistant professor has requested that the faculty vote no confidence in the State Board of Regents.

Robert B. Richey, an assistant professor of economics, has been critical of the board's recent decision to cut funds for student services.

"I think it's a combination of no confidence in the board because the board is making decisions that I believe are bad decisions, and no confidence in the process of how those decisions are made," Richey said.

A vote of no confidence in the board, he said, would be "a vote of no confidence in the procedure of the board itself." He said he was confident that the vote would go well.

Richey said he had hoped the special meeting called by the regents would have been a forum to discuss the cuts and the future of student services. But he said the regents had not been responsive to his concerns.

"I'm just not sure that they are willing to listen," Richey said. "I think they're just going to do what they want to do, and if we disagree with them, they're not going to listen to us."

Lee-color alternatives of low-calorie sweeteners, modification techniques, and some other changes that overweight Americans can make in their meals are expected to be the major topics of a new conference sponsored by Iowa State University.

Dinner will be offered at the conference.

Renowned nutritionist Dr. John Downey, said the conference will be held Nov. 22-24 at the University of Iowa in Iowa City.

"It's not a question of what we put into our bodies, it's a question of how we put it in,

Downey said.

"Many people today eat less than they used to,

but there are still problems.

Maxine Kumin's poetry: a celebration of passion

By JOHN DRIERY

Maxine Kumin, who will read at campus this evening, writes poetry that evolves from observations about personal and social lives. Her poems are varied in subject matter, and she explores a wide range of feelings as well. She is known for her imaginative control.

Kumin said that she has always felt comfortable writing about death and dying.

"There is a great deal about being human that is going on within us that may be known to others who have not experienced our life," she said.

"We are all aware of the fact that life is a circle, and that the circle is constantly changing.

"I believe that poetry is a way of expressing the truth of our lives, and that it is important to express our lives in a way that is true to ourselves.

"Through poetry, we can express our feelings and thoughts about life, love, and the human condition.

"It is a way of finding our way through the chaos of impressions and feelings, this is the joy of poetry.

Kumin, who has been writing poetry for over 30 years, has published 10 books of poetry and two collections of essays.

She is known for her ability to express her emotions and ideas in a clear and concise manner.

Making Core changes representative

The new requirements for general education classes are almost set. The Liberal Arts College faculty voted last week on the core changes proposed by the college’s Educational Policy Committee and the faculty will cast a pass-bulllet next week on the entire project.

Students and faculty will have the chance to present their views on core requirements at a hearing on May 7 at 3:30 p.m. All the faculty hearings held April 23 -28 drew an average attendance of 20 percent of the liberal arts faculty body but less than a third of the students.

Representatives from the Liberal Arts Education Association presented results of surveys of about 350 students, and approximately 30 faculty members on the proposed requirement changes. The faculty voted to maintain the four-hour physical education requirement and the foreign language requirement — after LACE representatives argued those requirements be eliminated.

Some students say they didn’t have much incentive to participate, since they didn’t have a voice in the proposals submitted to the committee. The one non-voting student member of the committee, Eric Czarnecki, said the lack of a student vote is an offense that LACE has been fighting for a long time, but has been unable to change.

Because the decisions made will affect us all, many faculty members should accept their responsibility to read the ballot and cast their vote on the proposal they believe, decisions on what courses are necessary, how many hours’ credit, with or without the full option, and whether the courses can be double-counted (for core requirements and for requirements in the students’ major disciplines), will be the last responsible.

This will give the UI the same charges leveled against other governing bodies — the decisions are made by special interest groups. As a faculty member of the committee noted, “The faculty seems expendable for decisions that head toward cutting quality.”

One faculty member listed the vote to a presidential election — only those who decide to vote decide the issues. The results of the faculty vote will be tallied in that place close to home. - MAUREEN ROACH

Resignation of Vance will bring consistency

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance’s resignation is a selfless move to President Carter’s foreign policy team; or what is left of it. It indicates that Carter is reorganized in a more hard-line stance on what appears to be a war of poverty in the most deteriorating situation in Iran.

The administration’s bungling and impotence in foreign policy can be traced to the ideological tilt-of-war between Vance, a proponent of quiet diplomacy, and Zbigniew Brzezinski, the national security advisor who would like to see America pursue Cold War policies. Vance and Brzezinski are the and hard-liners will best con­ sistency to Carter’s foreign policy, it spells defeat for moderation and diplomacy, which are badly needed at this critical stage in the Iranian crisis.

The economic and political situation in Iran is deteriorating to the point that the United States should step back and allow events there to play themselves out. At this time America needs to define, the changes we are pursuing in the face of military intervention. With Vance, the “diplomat’s diplomat,” gone, only Brzezinski will be there to whisper in Carter’s ear. A commitment to increasing the use of military force to solve our problems should only lead to an escalation of world-wide tension and conflict.

If America abandons the principles of diplomacy and restraint, it shames the hope of peaceful solutions to its problems.

Bookstores should be interested in the welfare of students

The words “a service to students who care whether we are safe in the future” and “a service to students who care whether we are safe in the future” are the basic economy of this town.

When everyone saw Republican Forty-five, Henry Kissinger was pleased. He turned to the issue of Middle East- erners. At last the United Nation solar world series was to be decided. He admitted that it did not “have the details” of our recent war, but he played in the darkness successfully. He congratulated the president, now the issue of second-class citizens, was not in place. In other words, “I am in favor of second-class citizens.” This was one of the reasons why a president who risks American lives should never be called to account, at Kissinger’s view.

Unfortunately many people don’t share this view. It is true that it is patriotic to rally around a presidential candidate even when he falls — especially when he has made many mistakes. This was the response to President Kennedy after the Bay of Pigs — and President Carter was already taking his cue from Kennedy. Brzezinski was the real architect of this whole process. This is considered a great victory by the liberal arts world.

The TROUBLE with this situation is a flailed and mistaken judgment is not only an embarrassment to the president but also to the allies. Carter was giving off all the incorrect signals, shrinking and acting out of his depth. This certainly helps Mr. Vance and Mr. Brzezinski who deliberately makes that kind of mistakes are not patriotic. We have no interests. More than that, they are Kissinger’s.

Preventive tactic: holistic health care

BY ROY VIZE

Holistic, or wholistic, health is the new wave of health care that is a fairly radical turn from the conventional medical science and natural healing approaches of the past. The idea is to bring health care back to a state that is more natural, which balances body, mind and spirit.

There are three parts that make up the whole of holistic health care, and the person who seeks to practice it must take all three into account. According to the American Holistic Health Association, these three parts are:

1. Wholeness: An awareness of the wholeness of man. This is a philosophical foundation that recognizes and respects the concept that all things are interrelated.
2. Holism: This is a belief in the wholeness of man. It is a belief that the whole is greater than the sum of its parts.
3. Self-realization: The belief that each person has the potential to realize their full potential.

Five years later, Vietnam's ghost dies

by Jim Anderson

It was April 25, 1975; that day fell as a period of silence, cloistered in memories of war, loss and uncertainty. It was the day Vietnam was liberated from the Communist forces in the north and the day the United States, which had helped to bring about the fall of Saigon, was finally able to withdraw its military forces.

Since that day, Vietnam has been a topic of great interest to the world. The country has faced many challenges, including political instability, economic difficulties, and social unrest. Despite these challenges, Vietnam has continued to grow and thrive.

The United States' role in Vietnam during the Vietnam War was significant. The United States provided military aid and support to the South Vietnamese government, which was fighting against the Communist forces in the north. The United States also provided economic aid and support to the South Vietnamese government, which was fighting against the Communist forces in the north.

The Vietnamese people have been resilient in the face of adversity. They have continued to work hard to improve their lives, even in the face of great challenges. Supreme Court refuses appeal of Delaware desegregation plan

WASHINGTON, D.C. — By a single vote, Supreme Court Monday turned down Delaware's appeal of school desegregation plan, which had been pending between Washington and the federal government for two years.

In an unsigned opinion, Justice Thurgood Marshall said the case should go to a lower federal court.

Winston Burton, Delaware's first court-appointed special master on school busing, said the decision gives the state a "narrow escape." But he added, "We wanted to get our day in court."

Justice John Paul Stevens, the fifth justice on the five-member panel, was the only one to dissent. He said the court’s failure to hear the case is "a misfortune to both parties." He said Burton and the state’s special master had "a tale to tell the full Court.”

May 15 food stamp cutoff likely unless funds added — Bergland

WASHINGTON, D.C. — More than 1,100 food stamp recipients in Iowa and Vermont will be kicked off the plan in mid-June if Congress doesn't appropriate funds to keep the program going through fiscal year 1980, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said Monday.

"The state of the nation's economy is such that Congress is under added pressure at this time to cut food stamps," Bergland said. "I'm sure that's the case." He said it would take Congress two to three months to appropriate funds.

Author Robin Wood views life, film

BY JUDITH GREEN

For this critic, Robin Wood, the importance of life is in the movies. As an active moviegoer, he is often asked: "What drives you to continue seeing films?" His answer: "I have always had a strong sense of loyalty to the cinema; it is what I think of as a vocation." He is also a strong believer in the potential of film to transform society, and he is particularly interested in the way film can be used as a tool for social change.

Wood was a student at the University of California, Berkeley, where he studied film and literature. He is the author of several books, including "Film and the End of Cinema," "History of Film," and "The Future of Film." He has also written extensively on the works of filmmakers such as Ingmar Bergman, Federico Fellini, and Akira Kurosawa.

Wood is currently working on a book on the French New Wave, which he hopes to publish in the near future. He also plans to continue his work as a film critic and essayist, and to continue to contribute to the ongoing dialogue about the role of film in society.

ROBIN WOOD

KRAMER

WOOD WOULD ACKNOWLEDGE that his own critical effort is a good deal more relaxed and not so hard to reflect upon as a literary achievement. "I speak from my own patriarchal position," he said, "I sometimes wish my students would try to do things like... but they just sit and take it for granted."

Mysterious NFL draft unfolds as 17 senior Hawkeyes wait

By SHANN RUGAN
Associate Editor

The roundabout the Iowa football quarters in the eye of the National Football League college draft seems to be that the 17 seniors eligible this year are somehow involved in a world game of chance.

"I probably know more than I have admitted for seven seniors who asked about their chances in the draft. Unfortunately for three others, former" collegiate athletes, NFL scouts, managers and owners gave very little indication of what they're looking for in the draft.

"Iowa seniors won't even play in the final round of the draft," said IOWA's Jim Shaw, "so there won't be any bid for them." Shaw said he didn't have a crystal ball to say who his chances are in the draft.

"I've seen a young man just elated and heard, "I've been drafted," he said. "I've also seen a young man just disappointed and heard, 'I'm not going to get drafted.'"

"Iowa senior Hayden Fry has seen some college athletes, NFL scouts, and college coaches. "You know, it's a real good indication of who or what they're going to do," Fry said.

"Dennis Mosley can claim to have been hounded over the past few months. He was eventually cut by the Buffalo Bills, becoming free agents after the draft."

"Another Hawkeye who has been hounded over the past few months is linebacker Jim Molinl. Molinl saw many pointers. "He's a good defensive lineman in the draft."

"However, Fry's staff has been active over the past few months because they're interested in seeing the best possible Hulks." Fry's seniors are of interest to the Hawkeyes who will be entering the Junior Year and many more seniors will get to the pros by the end of the year."

"Iowa's Jim Shaw has seen some seniors that are going to be drafted. Shaw said, "We're going to have some seniors that will be drafted and will be good defensive linemen in the draft this year, causing some scouts to bid on the most talented pick."

"I have to wait and see," Molinl said. "I'm not going to sit around and wait, or I'm going to sit around and wait." Molinl is a big talker and is expected to go high in the draft.
