State might take legal action if food stamp funding suspended

BY STEPHEN HEDGES

The state of Iowa may take legal action against the federal government if signatures and the approval of Congress fails to ap- proach the end of the fiscal year.

The state is frustrated.

"With the support of Gov. Robert Ray," said one state attorney general, "we are going to explore legal remedies before we end the fiscal year."

"The state," said another official, "will take the necessary steps to make sure that the food stamp program is secure."

The food stamp program is a federal program that helps low-income families purchase food. The federal government provides funding to states to administer the program, and the states in turn determine eligibility and benefits.

"If Congress fails to act," said the official, "we will take all necessary steps to secure the funding."

"This is a critical issue," said the attorney general. "We cannot allow the food stamp program to falter."

The state is preparing to take action if the program is not funded. The state is determined to secure the necessary funding to ensure that the program continues to operate.

The state is committed to exploring all legal remedies available to it. The state will take all necessary action to protect the food stamp program.

To the editor:

One of America's most vital insti- tutions, the University of Iowa, is presently in a state of fiscal and physical hardship. This is due to a combination of factors. The government has overlooked the fact that many serious problems on the national level exist which necessitate the use of the university's resources. Many of the problems that the university faces are the result of the government's failure to allocate funds for the research and development necessary to solve these problems.

The University of Iowa is a vital institution. It is one of the preeminent research institutions in the world. It is the birthplace of many important scientific discoveries and innovations. The university's contributions to society are immeasurable. The university's research and development efforts have led to the development of new technologies and the advancement of science and medicine. These contributions have had a profound impact on the world and have improved the quality of life for billions of people.

The university's financial situation is critical. The university is in debt and is facing a budget crisis. This is due to the government's failure to provide adequate funding for the university's operations. The government has not recognized the importance of the university's role in society and has failed to provide the necessary support. The university is forced to cut programs and projects in order to balance its budget. This is unacceptable and is a threat to the university's ability to fulfill its mission.

It is imperative that the government recognizes the importance of the university's role in society and provides adequate funding to support its operations. The university is a vital institution that contributes significantly to society. It is the responsibility of the government to support the university and ensure its continued vitality. The university's contributions are invaluable and cannot be underestimated. The government must take action to support the university and ensure its continued success.
Boyd talks of campus safety, cable TV

Thursday, May 1, 1980

With problems of low faculty salaries, state budget cuts and the need to re-evaluate the budget costs, there is another factor that can't be overlooked. This is the issue of campus safety. In a recent interview with the Daily Iowa, President William Boyd talked about some important safety changes that are forthcoming on this front.

In the recent Student Senate legislation, emphasizing the need to improve campus safety and security is important. This new emphasis is a response to the fact that campus safety is a problem now, and it is impossible to ignore.

Safety is always a matter that should be of concern. There was a time when college wards were more secure, but this is no longer the case. The campus is not safe from crime, and potential criminals are always out there. It is important for us to take all possible measures to make sure that the campus is safe.

In the Spring of 1980, the campus was hit by a series of armed robberies. The police were unable to catch the armed robbers, and this was a huge setback for the campus. The police were unable to find any leads, and this created a lot of fear among the students.

The police are now working hard to catch the armed robbers, and they are making good progress. They are now more experienced and better equipped to handle such situations. The campus is now safer than before, and this is a huge relief to all of us.

Carter says he'll end ban on travel

WASHINGTON, D.C. — President Carter said he would end the ban on travel to the Soviet Union during his second term in office, but would not say when.

He said he was doing so because of changes in the Soviet Union under Mikhail Gorbachev's leadership and in the American relationship with the United States.

Carter did not say when he would make the decision, and he did not say whether it would apply to travelers from the United States or to Americans who travel to the Soviet Union on business or for pleasure.

He said he had been considering the matter for several months and that he had consulted with his top foreign policy advisers.

He said he had decided to make the decision after months of consultation with his top foreign policy advisers and that he had consulted with the Soviet Union on the matter.

The decision to end the ban on travel to the Soviet Union is seen as a significant development in the evolving relationship between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Carter has been under pressure from some members of Congress to ease restrictions on travel to the Soviet Union, but he has been reluctant to do so because of concerns about the potential for espionage and the possibility of human rights abuses.

Carter's announcement comes as the United States and the Soviet Union are discussing ways to improve their relationship, and as the two countries are expected to sign a treaty on strategic arms limitations in the near future.

Scoresor: bias against art, music

By DON LEWIS and GILLES MAJEU Daily News

If you saw an art or music teacher in real life, you are in the minority. In a recent survey, Texas school districts were asked to write in their principal and choose: one program art, music, driver's education, school athletics or vocational education. The results indicate that art education is the least likely to be included in a school's program.

For example, schools like "We want art because it is good for people to be," said one scorer.

"And music didn't get a lot because maybe schools see art or music as mostly wasted personal interest, rather than something more practical which we did not accept," said another scorer.

A scoring supervisor said "I think they should have been equal opportunity for the classes. When they choose school athletics or vocational education they're basically choosing a group of kids. And art or music, you can choose who to have in that group.

"I saw it as music or art," said another table leader.

The scoring guidelines were a 6-inch-thick manual. The scorers were allowed to take the manual home. Different county supervisors also complained about what they saw as a lack of a code of ethics for scoring.

"It was a very well written manual," said another scorer. "It was very clear and direct. And I think that's one reason why teachers and students agreed with the scoring.

New director a Renaissance woman

by SOUTH-GREEN

As an advocate for the future of music in the past.
—Martin Sondheim

Martin Sondheim, who succeeded the retiring Horace Varnum as director of the US School of Music this summer, is a scholar-performance and music-theorist with a commitment to the future. Egyptian-born, he is one of the key figures in a music department facing pursuits that five years ago seemed far-fetched. At this time, a Renaissance woman named Himie Voxman was exploring the possibilities of sound research.

The music department of the US School of Music in Stanford, California, is a beacon of the next century, a place where ideas and ingenuity are celebrated. It is a place where music students are encouraged to explore the boundaries of the possible, to push beyond the confines of tradition and into the realm of innovation.

Himie Voxman was a true pioneer, a woman who dared to venture into the unknown world of music composition and production.
She believed in the power of music to transform lives and to inspire others.

As Himie Voxman's successor, Martin
Sondheim is carrying on her legacy.

Sondheim is committed to the future of music in the past, to pushing the boundaries of what is possible in the realm of music. He is dedicated to continuing the work of Himie Voxman and to taking music to new heights.

His goal is to create opportunities for students to explore the boundaries of music, to experiment with new technologies and to innovate in the field.

Sondheim believes that music is a powerful force for change and progress. He is committed to using music as a tool for understanding and bridging different cultures.

He is looking forward to the challenges and opportunities that lie ahead, and he invites others to join him in his endeavors.

Together, they can create a brighter future for music.

Reduced Senate funds to hit sports clubs hard

By CLAUDIA RAYMOND

The crush of student requests, the lack of money to pay for the increased student requests, and the lack of time to handle the increased student requests has led to the reduced Senate funds to hit sports clubs hard.

The Iowa Senate has cut funds for the sports clubs, which has led to the reduced Senate funds to hit sports clubs hard.

The reduced Senate funds have caused the sports clubs to cut back on their activities, which has caused the reduced Senate funds to hit sports clubs hard.

The sports clubs have had to cancel some of their events, which has caused the reduced Senate funds to hit sports clubs hard.

Blyevene's quits Pirates

VIANNA RAYMOND

Blyevene, the Dutch-born right-hander, has made no decision on his future with the Pirates, but indications are that he won't pitch for the Pirates.

Blyevene, 35, was traded from the San Diego Padres to the Pirates last off-season.

BLOOMINGTON (AP) — Roy Smalley had three hits, including a sixth-inning grand slam, and the Minnesota Twins defeated the Chicago White Sox 9-3 in a nine-inning baseball game on Wednesday night to end a five-game losing streak and snap an 0-13 skid.

Smalley’s grand slam in the sixth inning capped a four-run rally that gave the Twins a 5-3 lead. It was the first time in 13 years that Minnesota hit a home run in its 13th consecutive game.

The Twins scored three runs in the first inning and another two in the fourth before adding the grand slam in the sixth. The White Sox scored two runs in the third and one in the fourth.

Smalley’s home run came off White Sox starting pitcher Mark Buehrle, who allowed six runs in six innings. The Twins had scored just 16 runs in their previous five games.

The victory was Minnesota’s first against Chicago since Sept. 9, 2006, when the Twins won 4-3 at home.

The White Sox have lost nine of their last 10 games and have scored only 25 runs in their past 10 contests. Their only win during that span came against Minnesota.

Minnesota’s Matt Hague hit a two-run home run in the first inning, and Brian Dozier added a solo home run in the fourth. Brian Dozier also had an RBI single in the third.

Buehrle allowed six hits and three walks while striking out six. The left-hander lowered his season ERA to 3.22.

The Twins’ first four batters reached base before Smalley’s home run, and the team scored three runs in the 13th inning to win.

Smalley, who has played in all 13 games this season, became the first Twins player with a grand slam in his 13th consecutive game. He also is the first player to hit a home run in each of his first 13 games of the season.

The White Sox have scored just one run in their past three games.

Minnesota’s6-run rally in the sixth inning was highlighted by a two-out, three-runouting by Smalley. The Twins scored three runs in the first inning and two in the fourth before adding the grand slam in the sixth.

Oilers stock up on top talent

By DOUG BEAN

There was some happiness and a little bit of concern for several Iowa football players as the annual NFL draft concluded last week in New York.

A few bold promises were made by NFL scouts and coaches, but Bay Area officials remained cautious about the future of the Iowa football program.

The No. 1 pick in the draft was Oklahoma State quarterback Craig Bradshaw, who was chosen by the New York Giants.

For Iowa, the story was a bit different. The Hawkeyes had to wait until the second round to see their first pick, quarterback Chuck Evarts, go to the New York Giants.

The rapid response to Bradshaw, who was the clear-cut choice for many NFL football writers, might indicate that the Giants were finally getting their quarterback of the future.

Evarts, on the other hand, was a surprise pick. He was a fourth-string quarterback on the Iowa football team last year and had been on the bench most of the season.

The experience of Evarts, who has been a starter on the junior varsity team at Iowa, could be valuable for the Giants, who have a tough schedule this year.

The Giants are expected to be one of the top teams in the NFL this year, and Evarts could be a valuable asset if he can improve his game and continue to develop.

Some scouts believed that Evarts could be a starting quarterback in the NFL for a few years, but others were more cautious.

Iowa's coaching staff was pleased with the pick, but they were also realistic about Evarts' immediate impact.

"It's a good pick," said Iowa head coach Jerry Kill. "He has the ability to be a starting quarterback in the NFL, but he needs to develop and improve his game."
