Saudi oil prices

CPI - Saudi Arabia, America's largest foreign oil suppler. Washington, D.C., Thursday, Dec 22, 1983. Oil prices have risen steadily, but the one-day rise, which is about $2 per barrel, has had a tremendous response. The news will mean that the U.S. consumer about a 50-cents-a-gallon increase in the price of gasoline. The United States' monthly trade deficit could increase from 1.5 to $1.7 billion. Saudi Arabia is the world's largest oil exporter and has been a major supplier to the United States. The rapid rise in oil prices has been attributed to the continuous rise in oil prices since the beginning of the war in Iran. The rise in oil prices has been accompanied by a rise in the price of other commodities, such as wheat and coffee.

Carter demands Cuba accept immediate airlift

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Carter challenged Cuban leader Fidel Castro Wednesday to accept immediate airlifts of Cubans out of the island in perilous terms.

"We are prepared to start an airlift to the United States," Carter said, adding the airlift had been cleared by the State Department and was essential for Cuban welfare.

Some 90,000 Cubans have fled their homeland in recent voyages across the Florida Straits, which Carter termed a "serious outflow of people." Cuba, however, has not accepted for settlement any of the refugees who have arrived.

Carter demanded the Cubans being flown back to the United States were "prepared to start an airlift".

A great many more have left Cuba than have actually arrived in the United States, Carter said, "but we want to start the airlift now and let the refugees that are here come back home voluntarily."

In Washington, State Department officials had no immediate comment on the airlift.

The presidential statement was conveyed to the Cubans in the survey, Carter said, and the following 10 percent of the people believe that the first time there is a military war in the United States, a new one.

"What I have to say is that the U.S. will have to be involved in a military war in the United States, a new one," Carter said.

The survey, conducted by the Pew Research Center, indicates that the American public is not prepared to accept the possibility of a new military war in the United States. The survey also indicates that the American public is not prepared to accept the possibility of a new military war in the United States.

Rubies, opals and diamonds

The Yellowstone Act, which Congress adopted in 1872, is based on the premise that certain areas of national natural land should be preserved as public parks "for the benefit and enjoyment of the people." Congress planned for the lands to be retained in "their natural condition" for future generations. But a recently completed history of the Parks report shows that America's public lands are being severely polluted and lost by default.

Included in the survey are all the National Park systems: national monuments, parks, reservations, wilderness and historic areas. The results of the survey, reported in the May issue of Audubon magazine, illustrate the ecological dangers the park system faces.

Air pollution threatens resources in 60 percent of the surveyed areas, water quality is threatened in 42 percent of the areas, and threats to soil exist in 10 percent of the areas. Land development activities threaten nearly half of the parks. From 30 to 50 percent of the parks reported threats from utility lines, corridors, urban encroachment, motor vehicle noise and pollution, oil spills, contamination and destruction of wildlife. Although the impacts listed have not yet been scientifically documented, Americans should be alarmed at what is happening, and what might happen to our natural heritage.

After years of controversy, a gigantic step is being proposed toward the establishment of a National Park in Florida. The park is already threatened by encroachment, urban and industrial development. This has disastrous implications for wildlife and the park's vital water supply.

Power plants and industrial developments near the parks in the Rocky Mountains and southwest pollute the air so badly that visibility is severely limited.

Air pollution from potash and other mineral-processing plants is a potentially serious problem for Big Bend National Park in Texas, the park is also being closed in by the development of small "ranchettes." Because of emissions from coal-burning power plants near the park, Castro is using a formula which

From candy bars to joining a cult

by KAREN BELLAR

During the last month, several Iowa City students have been approached by members of the International Church of Christ, also known as the Cult of Far East. The following is an account given by one Iowa City woman, who will call herself "Mardi." Mardi was just one of the group who showed up at a recent meeting of the College Association for the Research of Principals. The woman who first contacted Mardi was later asked to refer her to her "spiritual father." He saw her on campus and invited her to his civic service group working to help the denizens she was conducting a poll on college life in the fall. He then talked to the member of the group, the members mentioned San Moonies. Mardi never ran a campaign for any office in the Union, so she asked her society about it. The group was closely connected with Moon in his organization. Her relatives were upset when she continued to be involved, so she left the group.

Rhetoric

Press and educated people say that the Moonies use advanced indoctrination techniques. The recruitment line is vague and not informative at all. One common technique is that the recruit is allowed to talk to each other. The next day all recruits are now treated as "students." They spend the night in segregated "dormitories," which are large buildings with space for sleeping bags. Wake up at 7:30 a.m. and exercise. After breakfast, the leader gives a lecture. The group sings and chants to the same tune. The lectures are religious. The recruits are religious, generally written by members, and sold to the followers. Heddell’s work expresses ‘less is more’ philosophy

My background is in design and the "less is more" philosophy of Mies seems to resonate in my work. It does not mean that I do not use saturated colors. It means that I do not put the color over everything," she says with a laugh.

Patricia Heddell’s work, "Untitled," is one of the two examples of Patricia Heddell’s work that are on exhibit at the "Family Exhibition 1980." The other is a hieratic arrangement of three elements that are saying "no" to detail that seeks to give each dimension a consistent effect from all viewing distances. The "Family Exhibition 1980" continues through May 30 at the UI Museum of Art.

The Iowa women's tennis team received some good news Wednesday when the NCAA announced the first round of matches for the women's tennis tournament.

The Hawkeyes, who have won three of their last four matches, will play the winner of the match between UCLA and the University of Texas in the first round.

The Hawkeyes, who are ranked 14th in the nation, defeated the Bruins 4-3 in the final of the Big Ten tournament on Sunday. UCLA defeated the University of Texas 4-3 in the other semifinal match.

Coach Dave Ezell and his team are excited about the draw and feel they have a good chance of advancing to the next round.

The winner of the match between UCLA and the University of Texas will play the winner of the match between Iowa and UCLA in the second round.

Another year has come and gone in Iowa athletics and there will probably never be another one like it. To say the least, it will be a year that everyone will long remember as one of the best in Hawkeye athletic history. The 1979-80 year indicates that it’s time for the Amazons of Hawkeye athletic success.

We agree, but in any case, we’ve had a lot of fun this past year. From Hayden Fry’s back-to-back 24-13 and 23-19 victories over the Ohio States to Lute’s cagers who were the arch enemy. Who can forget the Day when Heidi McNeil, the one that all of you seem to know in Iowa, was playing for the Iowa basketball Hawkeyes of 1980. For those who were there, it was fun. Maybe we’ll come back and do it again.

For the more pleasant events, the highlight had to be the last football game played by Hayden Fry and his win-at-all-costs philosophy of football. He made the Hawkeyes the team to be feared by Iowa’s biggest fans. He delighted and amazed Hawkeye fans for four years, and never be another one like him.

There was that time in Madison where the Hawkeyes turned the tables on our famous Heidi McNeil, the one that all of you seem to know in Iowa. She was near the hour of death. She had been knocked out, but then she survived the ordeal. She was fun. Maybe we’ll come back and do it again.

But on the serious side of things, the biggest thing that was covering the lives of athletes and being associated with Coach Fry was the 1979 NCAA wrestling tournament in Des Moines. Although the Hawkeyes were not so good, they didn’t get by the Big Ten wrestling tournament. The spirit of the Hawkeyes could not be killed by defeat. They delighted and amazed Hawkeye fans for four years, and getting to know this shy, humble, humble wrestler was a joy for us all.

As the sports editor of this reputable newspaper, the job is not all that it’s cracked up to be. The papers always seem to come in and out of the editor’s office in the middle of the night. There are more going on in the world of sports that don’t make it into the papers than there are that think we should cover more club sports. The task is demanding but the position also has benefits.

There was that time in Des Moines when the Haydn Fry’s team was not so good. But that didn’t stop them from winning. They were just good enough this time to win the NCAA wrestling tournament in Des Moines. Although the Hawkeyes were not so good, they didn’t get by the Big Ten wrestling tournament. The spirit of the Hawkeyes could not be killed by defeat. They delighted and amazed Hawkeye fans for four years, and getting to know this shy, humble wrestler was a joy for us all.

And eventually, a little time must be taken to thank those who helped bring the sports news to all of you interested readers. Associate Sports Editor Shad Bean put the Hawkeyes at the top of the list. Associate Sports Editor Shad Bean put the Hawkeyes at the top of the list. No wonder there’s so much concern about the dangers of football. The Turkey’s gonna yell his lungs out!
