Emergency food stamp funding approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress, beating a midnight deadline, Thursday approved emergency funds to provide food stamps for needy Americans. President Carter was expected to sign the measure early in the weekend.

Swift congressional action made certain the food stamp program would continue without interruption for the next month. But another infusion of emergency money will be needed this summer.

The appropriations bill was overwhelmingly approved by the House 316-36 and then rushed through the Senate on a 57-17 vote — just hours after negotiators for the two chambers hammered out an agreement providing $2.56 billion.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland had warned he would be forced to tell governors to put into motion procedures to suspend benefits beginning June 1 if Congress had not finished work by Thursday.

THE NEGOTIATORS accepted the House-passed figure — acknowledged to be too little to keep the program running through the end of September.

Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., said, "We're saying nobody goes hungry tonight.... We have two or three shots at it before September."

The negotiators agreed Congress this summer will have to appropriate possibly as much as $446 million — the difference between the House and Senate bills — but should provide no more than that.

In compromise language, they told Bergland to continue providing food stamp benefits at levels that would assume approval of additional appropriations.

Sen. Tom Eagleton, D-Mo., and Rep. Bob Traxler, D-Mich., warned that even the Senate-passed figure of $3 billion might be too little to last through September, if the recession deepens and unemployment continues to rise.

Each 1 percent hike in unemployment adds about 1 million Americans to the food stamp rolls, which now total 21.4 million.

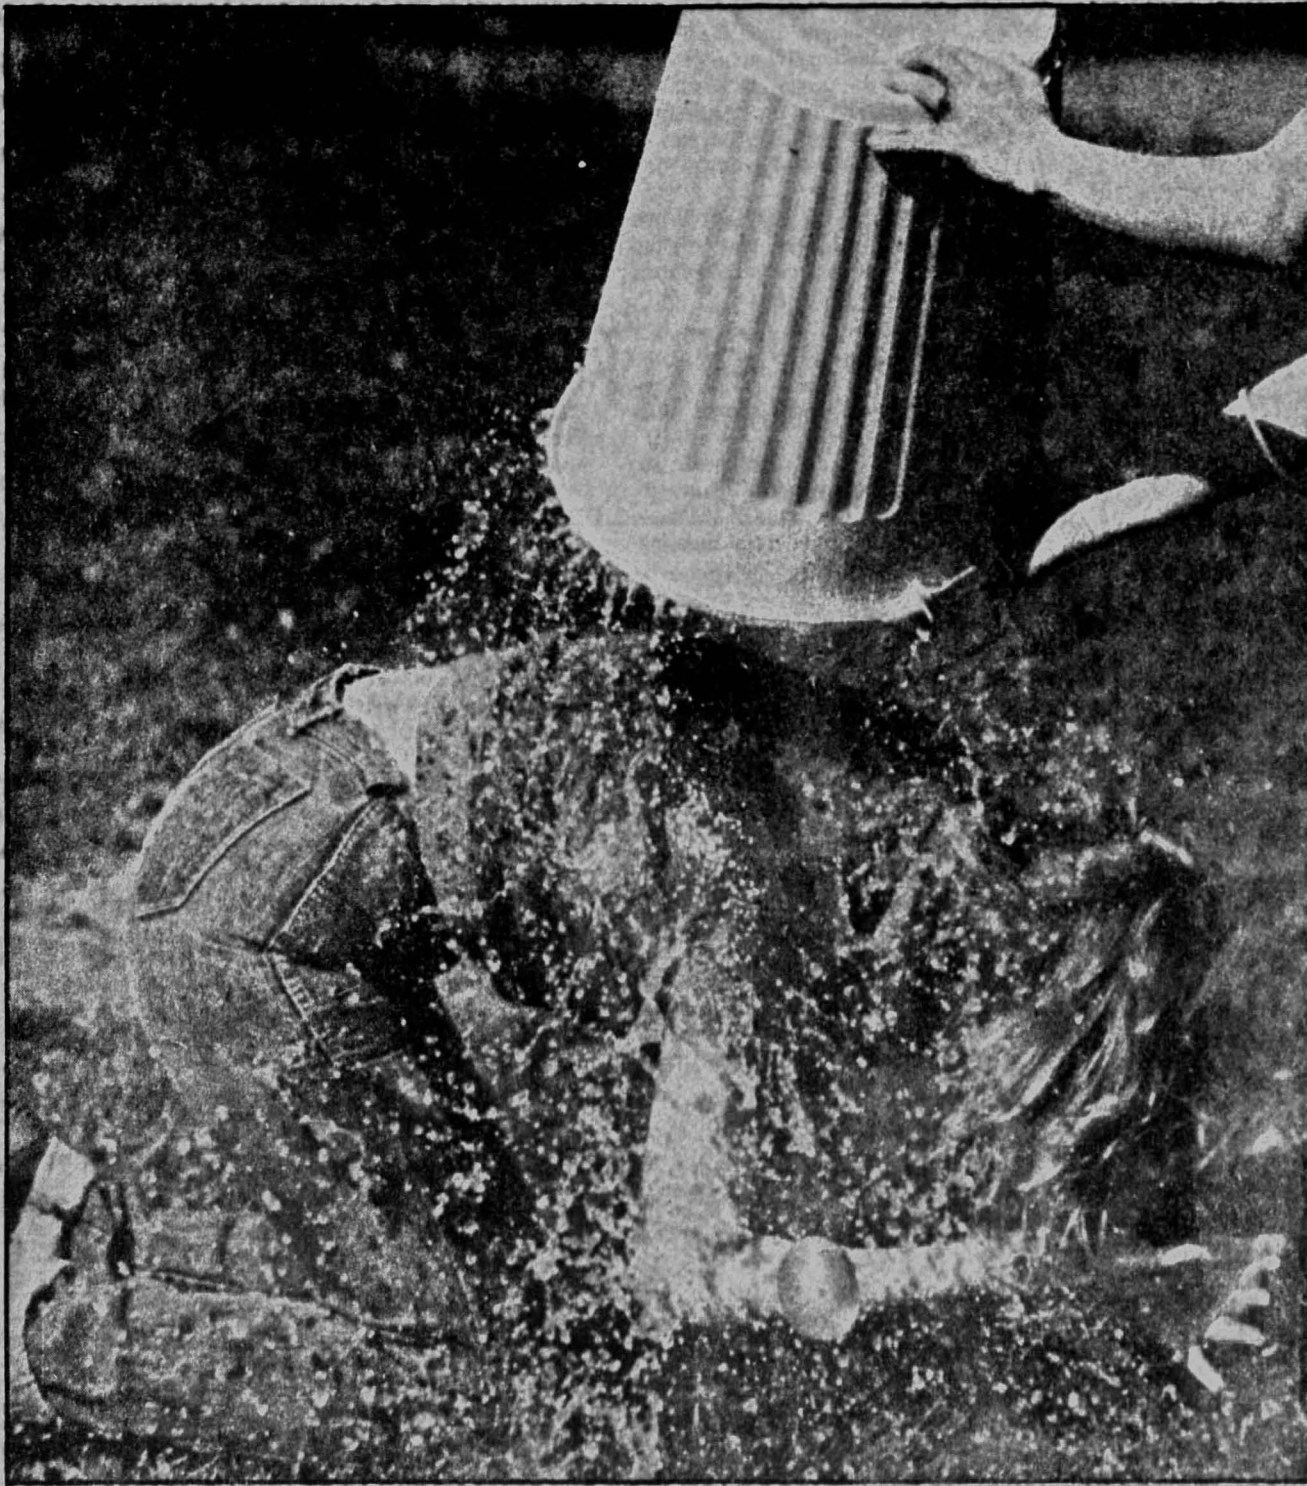

Unemployment in Michigan is already 13 percent and the administration has constantly underestimated the direction of the economy, Traxler said, and "I pray that your states don't go the route of mine."

EAGLETON, chairman of a Senate subcommittee that handles food stamps, argued unsuccessfully for the Senate-passed figure so the spending issue could be settled for the whole fiscal year.

"We know it's going to trigger another one-minute-to-midnight crisis," Eagleton said.

Earlier, the House passed and sent to President Carter a separate authorization bill that would put a $3.3 billion ceiling on any additional appropriations for food stamps.

The original ceiling and appropriations level was $6.19 billion.

Tensions heighten in dormitory water zone

As the weather gets warmer, action in the East Side dormitory water-warfare zone heightens. Tactical weapons like the water-balloon slingshot that claimed several victims last week have given way to MAD — Mutually Assured Drenching — systems that guarantee complete wetness. This system utilizes streamlined, plastic buckets full of water to liquidate the victim.

Regents okay non-faculty pay increase

By CRAIG GEMOULES
Staff Writer

A plan granting professional and scientific employees a 5 percent salary hike and a 2 percent increase for merit pay was approved by the state Board of Regents Thursday.

The 2 percent merit pay increase will be granted on a case-by-case basis at the discretion of each institution. The UI, which has approximately 3,000 professional and scientific employees, has not decided on guidelines for granting the merit pay increases.

Regent Percy Harris, the only member of the eight in attendance to vote against the plan, said he favors the pay increase but disagrees with the merit concept.

"I'm not voting against the issue, but against the theory," he said.

UNDER THE general plan, the UI could, for example, grant an across-the-board 7 percent increase. Or it could grant any increase that includes at least a 5 percent raise for all professional and scientific employees.

The Iowa Legislature approved a program in April that gave the professional and scientific employees a minimum 4 percent salary increase and approved 3 percent for merit pay. The regents followed a plan they developed last year, granting the 5 percent across-the-board increase and reducing the percentage for merit pay.

UI Staff Council President Charles Swisher asked the board for a 7 percent pay increase for all professional and scientific employees, noting that the council voted 11-9 in favor of such a move.

MARY JO SMALL, assistant vice president for finance, said that the employees were not opposed to merit policy, but that a 5 percent hike is inadequate.

And Swisher said the council made the request because they "wanted to make it clear to the board how inadequate the increase is."

If granted the full 7 percent, no funds would be left for the 2 percent merit option.

In other action, the regents, who came to the UI for their monthly meeting, considered ways to gain clout with the Iowa Legislature in the next biennium.

The board has been criticized by some UI faculty members for being unable to obtain a supplemental 2 percent pay raise and capital improvement funds. Last week, the College of Liberal Arts and the College of Engineering faculties voted "no confidence" in the regents' ability to secure sufficient funds from the legislature.

REGENTS President Mary Louise Petersen said the board will seek ways of "carrying the message forward," including contacting legislators, the governor and alumni.

"I think there is a real need for us to begin in the late fall or early summer. We need to carry the message to the opinion setters," she said.

Boyd said the budget decision voted by the legislature is "an exceedingly important issue."

"We can't make the budget for next year without some degree of latitude," he said.

Boyd and Petersen predicted a peak enrollment at the three state universities next fall. Petersen said, "The minimum kind of recession is the only

100 gather in Union to protest faculty pay

A group of more than 100 faculty members, staff and students gathered Thursday in the Union to protest the state Board of Regents' inability to secure a supplemental 2 percent pay increase for the faculty.

The regents, in town for their monthly meeting, adjourned for lunch minutes before the noon rally began. None of the board members attended the demonstration.

Don Winter, a member of American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Local 12, said the regents are "a group completely controlled by Bob Ray — Gov. Ray, if you prefer."

He accused the board of being "two-faced" and called board President Mary Louise Petersen a "figurehead" and Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey a "puppet" of Ray.

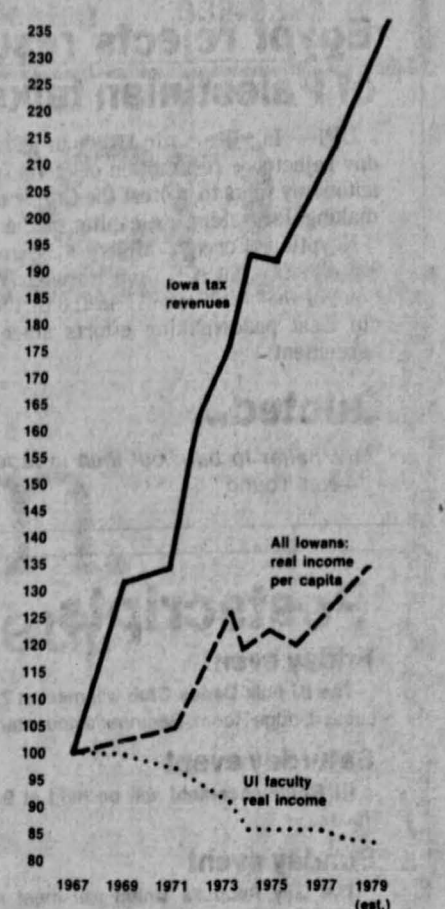

WINTER SAID the faculty should organize for collective bargaining. "I guarantee it's the only way anything is going to happen."

Richard Sjolund, associate professor of botany, said that if the pay for UI faculty members was compared to salaries in similar occupations, "It would bring tears to your eyes." He said that faculty salaries have not kept pace with inflation for more than a decade.

Sjolund said the low salaries will affect the UI's ability to attract and retain qualified personnel.

Jane Weiss, assistant professor of sociology, said the problem at the UI is not only the denied 2 percent increase, but is also Ray's freeze on hiring state

New Law Center may use solar heat

By WILLIAM NICHOLS
Staff Writer

The sun may be the answer to heating and cooling problems at the proposed new UI Law Center.

Richard Gibson, director of the Facilities Planning and Utilization office, said Thursday that the UI is considering plans for a "passive solar heating and cooling system" for the estimated $20 million facility.

According to preliminary plans for the center — which will be located in the Varsity Heights area — the five-story circular structure will have a glass outside wall surrounding a "massive concrete" inner wall that will absorb the heat from the sun, said John Houck, assistant to the director of the Physical Plant.

At this point, Houck said, the center is only in the planning stage and all the details have yet to be worked out. He said the first stage of planning — which includes meetings with all the potential users of the building to determine their needs — is pretty much finished. The next step will be the completion of a detailed design of the center and then construction.

"I DON'T think the architects have a firm grasp on how they'll heat and cool the building," he said. "They'll have to come up with a more definitive design before it is accepted by the university," Houck added.

"I'm not criticizing them," he said. "They just have more homework to do before they can come before the university."

Houck said the idea of a solar heated building is "great," but the architects have to figure out how to distribute the heat, get rid of excess heat and cool the building.

"The only option open to them in air conditioning the building is an 'absorption' system," he said. Absorption is a system of air conditioning that runs on heat rather than electricity, he said.

HOUCK SAID that during the day

UI files claim for Iranian tuitions

By LISA HINTZE
Staff Writer

The Iranian government owes the UI $4,401, and this week the UI filed a claim with the federal government to obtain the money, according to Richard Gerlach, scholarship and accounting administrator.

Gerlach said the claim covers the tuition of five Iranian students that the Iranian government is sponsoring. "Their tuition was guaranteed by the Iranian government, and has not been paid," he said.

The claim is one of many the U.S. Treasury Department has received on the Iranian government. Other creditors include American corporations with holdings in Iran and families of hostages seeking monetary reimbursement.

The U.S. government will decide which claims will be paid, then will make payment from an estimated $8 billion in Iranian government assets frozen in American banks. The assets were frozen in retaliation for the seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran last November. The total claims are expected to exceed $8 billion.

"IF THE FROZEN assets don't cover our claim," Gerlach said, "there is a possibility we will try and collect the money from the Iranian students."

Stephen Arum, director of the UI Office of International Education and Services, said his office is interested in helping the students finish their degrees and cope with the turmoil in Iran.

"We will work with the students in trying to get the Iranian government to pay," Arum said. "In the past we've worked with students from other countries in similar situations, and there are some instances where it's taken us years to get the funds."

Officials at Iowa State University also filed claims with the Treasury Department. Iowa State has 13 students sponsored by the Iranian government, and is seeking to recover $10,046 in unpaid tuition.

Gerlach said four of the five UI students owe this semester's tuition and one student owes two semesters' tuition. Students at both universities are being allowed to complete the semester despite the delinquent payments.

Carter accuses Congress of election year politics

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter accused Congress Thursday of opposing his oil import fee because of the "pressures of a political election year" and said there are "disturbing signs" members will fail to approve a balanced budget.

In one of his stronger slaps at Congress, Carter indicated he felt House and Senate leaders were reneging on earlier pledges of support for key portions of his inflation strategy — the import fee and balancing the budget.

He said congressional leaders urged him in March to impose the fee on imported oil — which would raise prices at the gas pumps by 10-cents a gallon. A court order blocked the fee from taking effect Thursday, and two tax-writing committees on Capitol Hill are trying to kill the measure altogether.

Carter cited a 12 percent drop in oil imports for the first five months of the year and then warned that "the pressures to discontinue this progress are tremendous, because it does require political courage in the Congress and in the Executive Branch."

West Germany to boycott Moscow Summer Olympics

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (UPI) — The West German National Olympic Committee Thursday voted to boycott the Moscow Summer Olympic games, dealing a major blow to the Soviet effort to break the American-led protest movement.

A general assembly of the West German NOC voted 59 to 40 in favor of a boycott after almost four hours of fierce debate, shown on national television.

A recommendation to boycott the games was endorsed by both the Bonn government and parliament late last month. The government, which lobbied with Olympic officials until hours before the vote, quickly welcomed the boycott decision.

In Washington, President Carter hailed the vote as a "courageous" step, a reaction that contrasted with Washington's anger over a French Olympic committee vote Tuesday to go to Moscow.

Iran tilts to East in trade

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — The Revolutionary Council approved a new trade protocol with Moscow Thursday and a Commerce Ministry official said Iran would do all its business with the Communist bloc if the West tried to end the 194-day-old hostage crisis by imposing economic sanctions.

The official, Foreign Trade Undersecretary Shojaoaddin Fattahi, asserted that Communist bloc countries had offered to sell Iran anything it needed — "even American-made spare (parts)" for its machinery.

Last month, the European Common Market and Japan agreed to impose economic sanctions against Iran if no progress towards resolving the hostage crisis had been made by May 17.

Korean riots grow worse

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — In the nation's worst rioting in 16 years, 100,000 students demanding an end to martial law fought street battles Thursday with riot police. Near the border, North Korean intruders exchanged fire with Americans manning a U.N. guardpost.

Before student leaders called off the nationwide demonstrations, protesters pelted police with rocks and bottles and were in turn sprayed with tear gas in the third straight day of clashes.

There were reports of injuries and arrests but no official figures were available. Nearly 300 people, mostly police, were injured in clashes Wednesday and 599 students were arrested.

The street riots that resumed nationwide after daybreak prompted Premier Shin Hyon-Hwack to issue a statement calling on the students to refrain from further disruptive actions and a warning if they don't "the government cannot look idly on indefinitely."

Egypt rejects resumption of Palestinian talks

UPI — In a dramatic 11th-hour reversal, Egypt Thursday rejected a resumption of the suspended Palestinian autonomy talks to protest the timing of a new Israeli law making Jerusalem the capital of the Jewish state.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Butros Ghali said the Israeli law, passed in the Knesset Wednesday, created "one of the worst crises" in the tortuous history of Middle East peacemaking efforts since the Camp David agreement.

Muskie rejects Soviet proposal for neutral Afghan as 'cosmetic'

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — Secretary of State Edmund Muskie, on the eve of a "diplomatic pirouette" with veteran Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, Thursday rejected the latest Kremlin-backed proposal for a neutral Afghanistan.

In office just one week, Muskie flew to Vienna with the full backing of the NATO allies who condemned the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Muskie meets Gromyko Friday on the sidelines of celebrations marking the 25th anniversary of Austrian sovereignty and also has talks scheduled with the British and French foreign ministers.

Just before the U.S.-Soviet meeting, the Moscow-installed government of Afghanistan called on Iran and Pakistan to join in talks for a possible Soviet troop withdrawal.

PAKISTAN has since rejected the idea and a State Department spokesman and then Muskie himself also dismissed the Soviet proposal.

"The proposal appears to have been dictated by its timing, rather than the substance," said Muskie, whose meeting with Gromyko is the first high-level contact between the two powers since the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan five months ago.

Muskie called the proposal "cosmetic, not meaningful," while the spokesman said it was just a variation on earlier Soviet ideas, all lacking any troop withdrawal commitment.

After a meeting with Chancellor Bruno Kreisky, Muskie said the new Afghan proposal "is not responsive to the central issue which is the fact of a Soviet invasion of a neighboring country," a message he was expected to stress to Gromyko.

A SPOKESMAN for Pakistan's Foreign Ministry said the idea was rejected because Pakistan is bound by the January decision of the Islamic Conference suspending relations with Afghanistan until Soviet troops are withdrawn.

The Soviet proposal and Muskie's rejection of it set the stage for the meeting with Gromyko which Muskie described as "a diplomatic pirouette." In Brussels earlier, Muskie said his talks with Gromyko would resemble a fencing match.

He said both sides would begin by trying to appear the injured party in the current chilly relationship.

Warsaw Pact calls plan 'political'

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — In a major policy statement on the eve of the first high-level Soviet-American talks since the invasion of Afghanistan, the Soviet bloc called Thursday for disarmament, detente and a "political settlement" of the Afghan crisis.

The statement, issued at the end of a two-day Warsaw Pact summit meeting, also voiced support for Iran and condemned the recent abortive U.S. attempt to free the American hostages held for more than six months.

The lengthy declaration, signed by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev and the leaders of the other six members of the East bloc military alliance, offered little that was new.

The East Bloc leaders withheld the communique until they had a chance to receive and assess the results of Wednesday's parallel NATO ministerial meeting in Brussels, Belgium.

IN THEIR communique, the NATO ministers condemned the invasion of Afghanistan and demanded the withdrawal of Soviet troops. They also agreed to strengthen NATO forces.

The Warsaw Pact declaration reiterated the Soviet position on Afghanistan, saying the Eastern allies

"stressed the necessity for a political settlement of the situation which has arisen around Afghanistan."

"Such a settlement should effectively secure a complete discontinuation and nonrecurrence of any forms of outside interference directed against the government and the people of Afghanistan."

"Once any forms of outside interference directed against Afghanistan are completely discontinued," it said, "the Soviet armed forces will begin to be pulled out from Afghanistan in accordance with the Soviet declarations."

Man to begin sentence after probation revoked

By STEVE McMILLAN
Staff Writer

A 19-year-old Iowa City man's probation was revoked Thursday for violating the conditions of his release and was ordered to begin serving a 10-year sentence.

David Sass, 613 Dubuque St., pleaded guilty June 21, 1979, to a charge of second-degree burglary in connection with a break-in at the garage of Mary Theobald, 530 S. Dodge St.

A 10-year sentence for that conviction was suspended and Sass was placed on probation for two years, court records show.

But judge Thomas Horan ruled Thursday that Sass should be jailed for probation violations including possession of marijuana, public intoxication and defacing property, failure to stay in touch with his probation officer, failure to secure and maintain employment, possession of a firearm and armed robbery.

Sass pleaded guilty to a Feb. 12 armed robbery at Godfather's Pizza, 531 Highway 1 West. Sass was sentenced to serve 25 years for the robbery.

The 10- and 25-year sentences will run concurrently, according to Horan's ruling.

A UI student was charged with false use of a financial instrument Thursday in District Court after Union bookstore personnel discovered she had made purchases on another student's identification card.

Denise Burks, 19, W218 Hillcrest Residence Hall, was arrested by UI campus security after being detained by clerks at the bookstore, according to Sgt. Donald Hogan of UI Campus Security.

Court records state that Burks had charged $300.90 worth of books Wednesday on the student identification card of Dawn Bittinger, 2107 Lincolnshire Drive S.E., Cedar Rapids.

Rich Templeton, manager of the Union bookstore, said a check on Burks' purchase reveals that she had used Bittinger's ID. Templeton said that Burks returned to the store Thursday, attempting to buy more books, and was recognized by Union employees and detained until campus security arrived.

Burks was released on her own recognizance after an initial appearance before Magistrate Joseph Thornton. A preliminary hearing was scheduled for May 22.

Mt. St. Helens hisses steam

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — A new steam vent hissed into life near the crater rim atop Mount St. Helens, the U.S. Geological Survey reported Thursday, but aside from that it was, "business as usual" for the rumbling volcano.

Earthquakes measuring 3.0 or larger on the Richter scale rocked the 9,677-foot mountain at the rate of about two per hour, seismologists at the University of Washington said. The biggest tremor during the latest reporting period registered 4.8 on seismic machines and occurred at 4:42 a.m. — 6:42 Iowa time.

Mount St. Helens was spewing ash and steam intermittently and the volcano's huge bulge on the north flank continued to swell at the rate of about five feet each day, said Donal Mullineux, chief USGS spokesman. The bulge has been growing at roughly the same rate for three weeks, he said.

Explosion-like sounds from near the cloud-shrouded volcano briefly triggered fears in the village of Cougar, on the mountain's south slope, that Mount St. Helens had gone into a major eruption Wednesday. However, officials determined that the sounds came from jet aircraft sonic booms.

Man killed in Canadian oil refinery explosion

MISSISSAUGA, Ontario (UPI) — One man was killed and another injured Thursday in an explosion that rocked a Texaco petro-chemical refinery in the Toronto suburb of Mississauga, and sent thick black smoke billowing into the sky.

A police spokesman said the blast occurred about 7:15 p.m. Iowa time as a tanker truck was being loaded. One unidentified man was killed and the driver of the truck was rushed to hospital. His condition was not immediately known.

The explosion created a mushrooming cloud of smoke that could be seen from Toronto, some 25 miles to the east.

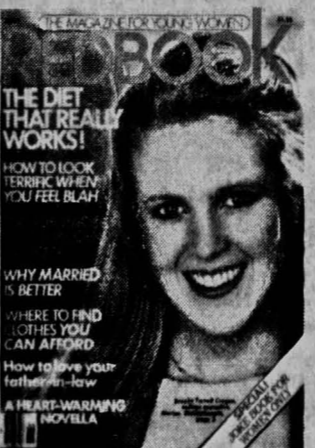

A fire department spokesman said firefighters believed they could control the blaze.

Damato likes to air 'flip-side' of issues

By BETH GAUPER
Staff Writer

Who is this Glenn Damato, and why does he cause such a fuss?

Damato is a 20-year-old UI political science (formerly physics) major from Lake Worth, Fla., who happens to hold what some people feel are unconventional views. Not so unusual, except that he tends to air his views all over The Daily Iowan editorial page, and a lot of people air their views right back. A lot of them air their views about Damato, too — one of the milder epithets directed at him was that he is "a little lopsided."

Says Damato: "I feel obligated to present the flip-side of the issue."

The issue, of course, is nuclear power, and to a lesser extent, big business. Damato defends them. His viewpoints are unpopular, and that's why he airs them. "I just don't like the idea that people are hearing only one side of the story," he says.

WHAT DAMATO explains, over and over, is why he feels nuclear energy is the best of various energy alternatives, and why he feels it is unrealistic to hold nuclear plants against a standard of absolute safety.

It's not always easy. Last year, when he tried to start a pro-nuclear club, he attracted only a roomful of anti-nuke activists. Instead of running out the back door, he stayed and argued with some of them for several hours. "I didn't come anywhere near changing anyone's mind," he said. "They'd already made up their minds and didn't want to be confused by all these little facts and statistics."

Damato limits his warfare with his counterparts over at Free Environment and Iowa Public Interest Research Group to a little sarcasm and an occasional snide comment. He gets as frustrated with them as they get with him.

"I have no ax to grind, I don't hate the people at Free Environment," he said. "Really, they're fine people; they mean well. They're concerned, and I'm concerned. They've just been lied to."

DAMATO HAS a theory about who is doing the lying. There is, he speculates, a tiny, unknown elite of aristocrats, politicians and philosophers who "seriously believe it is best for man as a whole to bring an end to the Industrial Revolution"; he believes they are pulling the strings of the anti-nuclear movement. This "wealthy supremacy," he says, believes it is improper for common people to enjoy the luxuries of life, and is gradually maneuvering a reversion to what it considers the natural state of society — a two-class system of servants and rulers.

They'll do this, he says, by letting fossil fuels run out and by opposing cheap nuclear power, thereby putting an end to the cheap goods first made available by the Industrial Revolution. Damato likens the wealthy supremacy to Hitler in ideology, but not in method.

"They're doing it very discreetly and making people think it's their own idea," he says. "They're very intelligent and devious. They're a bunch of ingenious propaganda experts. They know how the media ticks; they know how people tick." The wealthy supremacy, he says, disapproves of the members of the former servant classes — such as himself — having such things as college educations and Cadillacs.

"TO THEM, someone with a humble background like me should be doing something more manual, probably collecting garbage," he says. Damato's background is not really humble — his father is an aviation engineer — but not luxurious. Like most students, he's putting himself through school with loans, grants and earnings — he works at McDonalds. Now training to be a military pilot, he eventually hopes to attend the UI law school.

As for his ideas on the wealthy supremacy — so far, they're just hypotheses. "Of course, I'm not certain of all this. It's just a wild theory," he adds.

It's just that Damato considers opposition to nuclear power so illogical. "If you were opposing energy," he says, "solar would be the thing to support." One of the wealthy supremacy would oppose any kind of cheap, available energy, no matter how safe it was. That's why he's suspicious of today's anti-nuke activists. Their espousal of a low-energy lifestyle, he feels, could be influenced by members of the wealthy supremacy.

Damato doesn't like the idea of Americans having to conserve. He considers himself a moderate Republican, and adheres to basic Republican philosophy. Yet he considers himself a liberal on all issues except big business and energy; the liberal line on abortion, capital punishment and gun control "seems the most logical and humane to me."

DAMATO IS big on logic. He supports his logic by combing for facts in magazine articles on nuclear energy and government publications. "I did a lot of reading when I was in high school, when I started to be exposed to anti-nuclear arguments," he says. "Then I started noticing something was kind of wrong." His final judgment was that they were not only kind of wrong, but "very misleading."

So Damato tries to convey his message of optimism about science, even though he gets sick of arguing: "People would rather hear scientists say they're going to die, rather than tell them they're safe."

And he says he and his group of a dozen other pro-nuke activists aren't trying to change anyone's mind: "I read somewhere that 95 percent of people don't have the brain ability to generate the concept in their minds that they're wrong." But the 80 percent he says haven't made up their minds yet are fair game. He says, "I figure to get to them before Free Environ-

Handicapped to experience creative arts

Judith Lipshutz, a member of the UI Dance Program faculty, teaches a dance therapy class.

By JUDITH GREEN
Staff Writer

The Arts Outreach Program, as part of its ALIVE (Art in Life Is Vital for Everyone) Project to bring the arts and handicapped persons into closer contact with one another, offers a one-week workshop in creative arts therapy during the summer term.

"Workshop ALIVE: Experiencing the Arts" is designed for multiply handicapped and developmentally disabled young adults, their parents and teachers, specialists in helping handicapped persons and students interested in creative arts therapy. One unit of credit (course fee: $36) is offered for the workshop, which will be held June 23-27. Registration deadline is June 6, and the UI course number is 28D:122, Section 5.

"There hasn't really been much done for young adult populations," said Judith Lipshutz, faculty member in the UI Dance Program and dance therapist at the Psychiatric Hospital. The annual Very Special Arts Festival, she said, focuses on art by handicapped children. This program is geared for persons aged 16-30 with speech, hearing, sight, intellectual or motor impairments; ideally participants should already have some self-help skills.

THE WORKSHOP'S two-fold purpose, Lipshutz said, is to increase the skills in the creative arts process itself and to give handicapped persons increased access to the arts as patrons. Events include: participation in daily 1½-hour activity sessions in music, theater, dance and art with noted specialists in each field; daily seminars and problem-solving sessions for parents, educators and specialists; and attendance at Summer Rep and music events, with pre-performance lectures, tours and other activities planned for each.

Mary Louise Plautz, Education Coordinator for the Arts Outreach Program, is the workshop director. Lipshutz, who has a master's degree in creative arts therapy, is the program's movement specialist. Other faculty include: Ricky Smith, a deaf actor and mime, currently artist-in-residence with the Metropolitan Arts Council in Omaha; Catherine Beauvais, an art therapist at the Midwest Center for Human Development in Sioux City; and Catherine Martin, a music therapist formerly at Clarke College in Dubuque, now with Iowa City's Systems Unlimited.

All sessions will be held in the Union.

"Experiencing the Arts" is jointly sponsored by the Iowa Center for the Arts, the Iowa Arts Council and the UI Dance Program.

Soyfood authors to speak

William Shurtleff and Akiko Aoyagi, authors of the Book of Tofu, the Book of Miso and the recently-published Book of Tempeh will present a workshop on soyfoods, "the protein source of the future," for the New Pioneer Food Cooperative. The workshop will be held Thursday, May 22, from 7:30-9:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the Unitarian-Universalist Society, 10 S. Gilbert St. Admission is $1.50.

The speakers will prepare and serve several soyfood dishes, demonstrate how to make tofu (also called bean curd) and tempeh (a soyfood from Indonesia) inexpensively at home. They will discuss the nutritional aspects of soyfoods and their suggestions for solving the world's hunger problems and protein shortages. Free samples of these foods and recipe pamphlets will also be provided for workshop participants.

Shurtleff has worked in the Peace Corps in Africa, directed the Esalen at Stanford Program, lived for 2½ years at the Tassajara Zen Mountain Center and spent much of the past seven years in Japan, where he is a member of the New-Age Foods Study Center. Aoyagi, his wife, is an artist and cook who has supplied many of the recipes and the illustrations for their three best-selling books.

Conferees snag on budget plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressional negotiations on the federal budget hit a snag Thursday in the self-set deadline for completion when House members refused to move ahead on defense until their chairman gets out of the hospital.

Members of a House and Senate conference committee were working for a third day on spending revisions for 1980 and a balanced budget for 1981. They said they would not finish by midnight, the deadline they had set for reaching agreement.

At this stage, the fight is more over strategy than numbers, with senators saying it is meaningless to try to resolve non-controversial areas first because the defense decisions will determine how much money is left for everything else.

"IF WE TAKE that approach, it's been decided already what happens to the social programs," argued Rep. Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio.

He also said Rep. Robert Giaino, D-Conn., the House Budget Committee chairman, had been hospitalized for tests because of bad stomach pains and wants to be present for the tough fights over defense and social programs.

It would be the last budget battle for Giaino, who is retiring this year. He is not expected to be well enough to work again until next week.

"Bob Giaino has indicated he wants very much to be here for consideration...of the difficult functions," Ashley said.

THE SENATE has proposed $8 billion more for military spending than the House with a corresponding reduction in social programs to get it. The House is against slashing that deeply into domestic programs.

Although the negotiators had been hurrying to avoid a cutoff of food stamp benefits, they no longer have that pressure since both the House and Senate exempted food stamps from rules for bidding additional 1980 spending until Congress raises the $547 billion ceiling it set last year. The old limit was breached months ago.

Budget conferees must strike a compromise between the House and Senate recommendations for a new ceiling. The House has proposed raising it $24 billion, while the Senate wants a more conservative increase of $19 billion.

Senate conference members agreed Wednesday to cut most of the federal subsidy for Saturday mail deliveries and apparently all grants to the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

City wins a hollow victory

I am constantly perplexed at the obstacles that are placed in the way of women when they seek to assume the responsibilities and the rewards that are normally attached to activities that, in the past, were in the male domain.

—District Court Judge Ansel Chapman on May 2, 1979, after refusing to vacate his temporary injunction stopping the city from disciplining Linda Eaton for nursing her son at the fire station.

The word around town Tuesday, after the stunning and disappointing resignation of tenacious firefighter Linda Eaton, was that a lot of people — men and women — were gloating and laughing about how the city finally got rid of that troublemaker. Those people should be ashamed. There is nothing funny about a stubborn, insensitive city administration and some mean-spirited co-workers forcing an able firefighter from her job. Where's the humor in the worst reactionary tendencies of the city winning out, destroying any affirmative action credibility in the process?

At a time when Newsweek magazine reports that 51 percent of adult women are working outside the home and that 5.5 million working women have pre-school age children, the city has staunchly refused accommodation of a working mother — and without good cause. Unfortunately for a city with liberal pretensions, there are plenty of Iowa Citians who find this whole episode funny. If there weren't, there would be no Linda Eaton story at all. It is a story composed in large parts of ignorance, hatred of non-conformity, indifference to the needs of working women and self-righteous bias against unmarried mothers.

To be sure, the city administrators who fought Eaton tooth-and-nail don't claim these prejudices. Nor do many of the rest of us. But like it or not, we live in the city that forced a public employee from her job rather than allow her to breast-feed her son — an action that hurt no one, did not diminish her effectiveness and symbolizes the kind of caring that human society is supposed to value. A national study published in 1979 showed that Linda Eaton is one of a growing number of mothers who choose to nurse their children. From 1971 to 1979, the percentage of all mothers who nursed infants one week after birth rose from 25 percent to 50 percent; after two months, 14 percent to 38 percent; and after five or six months, 6 percent to 23 percent.

It would be easy to blame Eaton's departure on the person or persons that slit her firefighting gloves and otherwise attempted to make her situation intolerable. But those nasty and dangerous gestures are only the latest and most extreme action in the campaign against Linda Eaton. And the junior-high locker room atmosphere of the fire station — where Eaton faced a "social boycott" and was allegedly thrown to the ground in a dispute over what TV show to watch — is another example of the unfair social settings passively accepted by Iowa Citians.

The city's case against allowing Ian Eaton to visit the fire station twice a day to nurse and against the Iowa Civil Rights Commission's $28,000 ruling in Eaton's favor rests in part on its contention that in January 1979 there was an unwritten rule against regularly scheduled personal visits. But the Civil Rights Commission has determined that "The unwritten rule on visitation was poorly defined, and any suggestion that the rule applied to a particular set of circumstances should be closely examined." At any rate, the commission said, "a preponderance of evidence...leads to the conclusion that the visitation rule was not the reason for the city's action," that "an opposition to the physical act of breast-feeding was at least one reason for the city's decision."

As Fire Chief Robert Keating testified at the injunction hearing in January 1979: "My order was that I would not grant regularly scheduled visits for the purpose of nursing during work time."

So the issue is breast-feeding. It appears, and appeared at the time, that the visitation rule was raised after the fact in order to legitimize a rule specifically banning breast-feeding. As the commission said: "The availability of a nondiscriminatory reason for the city's action is not a defense for its being motivated by a discriminatory reason."

The experience of the civil rights movement in the late 1970s has been one of retreat. As the economy worsens and competition for jobs becomes more crucial, the momentum of court victories and other gains by minorities slows and may reverse. Bureau of Labor statistics cited in Newsweek show that the onslaught of women in the job market has failed to make much of a dent in the earnings gap. While most men earn more than $250 per week, the majority of women make under $200. In the higher salary ranges, the disparity is larger.

So while women have won the right to compete for jobs, they are not allowed to do so on an equal basis with men. Similarly, Eaton won an injunction keeping the city from firing her until the Civil Rights Commission determined whether there was discrimination; the Civil Rights Commission ruled there was discrimination and ordered restitution; but these rulings in the end did not safeguard her right to work in a fair and equal workplace while breast-feeding her son. If city administrators attempted to safeguard that right, and there is evidence that they did, they did not work hard enough. No one should be expected to work under the conditions Eaton says she has had to face since the commission ruling. And indeed, what woman will now want to work in an environment that made it so hard on Linda Eaton simply because she wanted to breast-feed her son?

Eaton's attorney Clara Oleson is half-right when she says of Eaton, "She didn't lose; Iowa City lost." Eaton did lose; but perhaps the real loser is the city.

Again, Judge Chapman was remarkably perceptive back in January 1979:

If she cannot continue as a firefighter, and somewhere down the line we find she has constitutional or statutory rights, it would be a hollow victory if during that time she was removed from a very unique position of employment.

A farewell — sap, conceit and pride

Neil Brown

I've dreaded the day that I would have to write this column for many reasons. First of all, I knew it would be impossible to top Bill Conroy's "farewell" column last year. Jesus, could that guy write "editor's notes." He was the best at it.

Secondly, "farewell" columns are just plain tough to write. You don't want it to sound like an academy award acceptance speech (which is a trap that I may fall into) and you don't want the column to be too sappy or lovey-dovey. That stuff makes readers gag.

And third, I've dreaded writing this because a big part of me wants to keep yelling "News meeting!" and going to edit board meetings and taking calls complaining that we run too many of Keith Gormezano's letters and bitching to the publisher and fighting with the production staff. I think it was General Patton who said, "God, I love it."

But there are a few things that have to be said in this last issue of The Daily Iowan volume 112, and I'm going to say them. I'm proud to say that this paper is the top source for local news. I say this not out of conceit — as it must sound — but because it's a fact. There's a theory in the news biz that a paper should give its readers plenty of news they want to read about and a certain amount of news that they should read even though they probably don't want to. We stuck to that guideline and it worked.

We used up plenty of ink this year: On the UI side there was the arena, the move to get firetrap Old Armory replaced, a new law school vs. day care, a Student Senate debate and two — count 'em — two senate elections, and of course faculty salaries. Thanks, Gov. Ray, you gave us some great copy.

On the city side: Woodfield's, F-518, City Council elections, bus fares, mass resignations, human rights, ACT, Westinghouse, presidential caucuses and Linda Eaton.

And we all know the sports rundown: Hayden Fry, the Final Four, wrestling champions, swimmers and umpteen intramural kings. Oh, and don't forget the rumors that the Cubs might trade Bruce Sutter. We covered it all.

My only disappointment is that we weren't able to run a massive front page headline — you know the kind that takes up half of the front page in three lines.

Last June I predicted we'd run one of those this year. In fact I was sure it was going to say, "Carter: I Will Not Run." I've always been known for my insightful perceptions about politics.

But we did have two 96-point headlines: the hostage rescue mission and Linda Eaton's resignation. When stories like that break and we get them well ahead of the competition, that's when this job is really fun.

Time now for the credits. Thanks first to Publisher Bill Casey and to his assistant Mary New. If it wasn't for Mary the staff would have lynched me long ago for never figuring out the payroll figures.

Thanks to Dick Wilson and Bob Foley who worked more hours this year than they intended. You guys ought to talk to Casey about a raise.

Thanks to all the writers, editors and photographers who worked so hard for so little to make this year as successful as it was.

The core of a good newspaper is its news department. We had a great one. Credit Terry Irwin with being the hardest working university editor this paper has ever seen. Our coverage was more extensive and varied than ever before.

And thanks to Tom Drury. Drury set impossible standards for himself and his staff. But they tried to meet those standards and that's why our city coverage was so tremendous. Drury, along with Rod Boshart, made sure we beat the Press-Citizen on nearly every major city story and greatly improved the credibility of this paper. Also, credit Drury with being the finest writer on this paper in the last three years. If you don't believe me, read the left hand side of this page.

By the way, Boshart and Drury moonlight as comedy writers. As editors of The Des Moines Rooster they showed humor writing prowess that rivals that of Buddy Sorrell and Sally Rodgers.

The greatest tribute to this paper may be the selection of Mike Connelly as editor for next year. Mike was the key man in making the DI the good-looking paper it is. This year's flag will live on and you can count on a high quality paper next year because he was so much a part of it this year.

Well enough of the sap. I'm glad I had the opportunity to be editor this year. It's been the greatest experience of my 21 years. And how do I judge my own performance? Well the most important thing the editor does all year is hire his staff.

Based on that, I did a hell of a job.

University should be proud to be represented by Voices of Soul

To the Editor:

I don't know how much money should be allocated for the Voices of Soul — I haven't seen their proposal — but I know the University of Iowa should be proud to be represented by them. That would be better understood if the DI would cover their concerts half as well as they cover their requests for student funds.

In April the Voices of Soul gave a very special Spring Concert to celebrate their tenth anniversary. Friends and alumni came from Chicago, Atlanta and Mississippi to be there for that concert. More importantly, the spirit of the concert lifted up many who find the world we live in spiritually dry. It was also clear that the Voices are expanding artistically without losing their strength of spirit.

Admittedly, it would be difficult to review such a concert. The endeavor would force one to ask what a review should be. But such an opportunity should be welcomed, not ignored. The total lack of coverage for the concert and the excessive coverage of the funds question invite one to ask what news is important for this campus, and how responsibly our newswriters address and answer that question.

ERA

To the editor:

I am writing in regard to the editorial written by Carol deProse regarding the federal Equal Rights Amendment (DI, May 14). I would first like to state that I agree with everything deProse had to say and would also like to express my appreciation to her for mentioning this peaceful march in Chicago involving approximately 75,000 people (and hundreds of Iowans), which many Iowa newspapers, including the Des Moines Register, apparently ignored or perceived not to be newsworthy enough to cover. I, however, wish to elaborate further upon one of her points.

The most important aspect of the amendment is the "insurance" that it provides through the inherent difficulty of changing the constitution and its amendments. One of the more common arguments offered today by opponents of an ERA is that an amendment would simply duplicate laws that are already in effect and is, therefore, unnecessary. The fact regarding laws is that they are generally a piecemeal solution to legal problems and, assuming that they are enforced, they can be repealed at any time without the informed consent of the people about whom the law refers. A recent example of this is the alteration of the drinking age from 18 to 19. On the other hand, an amendment of the constitution is the closest thing to permanence that we, as citizens, can obtain. An amendment for equal rights would simply ensure that all citizens of this country, regardless of sex, will be treated equally under the law. DeProse's editorial referred to the federal ERA, but, in addition, Iowans should be aware of their chance to obtain a state ERA by casting a YES vote on the ballot in the general election this November. This would ensure all Iowans equal rights under the law well before the federal amendment would go into effect, just as 16 other states have already done for their citizens. We, too, all hope that three additional states ratify the federal ERA prior to the 1982 deadline and are optimistic that the Chicago march has influenced the Illinois legislature to begin the ball rolling in that direction.

Symbols

To the editor:

"Mother Rose" doesn't really care about people and the environment. This is obvious for at least three reasons. First, a small, but symbolically important item — when the Mother Rose organization sent out their advertisements to TAs for their Mother's Day rally, they wasted two sheets of paper for a flyer that could have been printed on HALF of one sheet. Yes, it's a small item, but it shows their minds aren't really on saving trees and other resources, but on tilting at nuclear windmills for sport. (Carol deProse's editorial further supports this "lets play protester" attitude.)

Secondly, Mother Rose focuses against nuclear power without providing other alternatives. Yes, nuclear power has negative side effects, but these side effects are no worse than the awful side effects of the coal and oil plants that will replace the nuclear power plants if you manage to get them shut down. Instead of running a destructive movement against one kind of power source, why don't the "Mother Rose" folks run positive campaigns to really conserve energy? They would do more good by setting up a task force to run around shutting off lights at the university than by trying to change nuclear plants to other types of plants. (Other stronger constructive options should be developed and emphasized, of course.)

Finally, Mother Rose is turning the pro-environment movement into solely an anti-nuclear movement. As a result, we are ignoring the many other more significant "people and environment" issues that are crucial today. For example, this week the Big Automobile Industry is going to Washington to ask for an end to the pollution controls we've fought so hard to gain — and they'll probably win.

What is needed today is a restructuring of values against consumerism and towards an understanding of the real joy and possibilities in humanity. An anti-nuclear campaign cannot do that. It will merely polarize and cause violence. A "pro-earth-pro-humanity" campaign might enable us all to learn to live with less money, less energy and more joy.

Dregs use familiar form, Washington is distinctive

By WINSTON BARCLAY
Features Editor

Dregs of the Earth
The Dixie Dregs
Arista Records
Produced by Steve Morse

America's most accomplished fusion band is back with the familiar formulas for what guitarist Steve Morse has called "electric chamber music": a whimsical, country flavor; tight ensemble work; facile soloing; and complex, multi-movement compositions. Although in places this album strays a little more toward the styles of the RTF and Brand X, a Dregs fan will identify the group after a couple of measures. Dregs of the Earth stands up well to the high musical standards set by the Dregs' previous albums.

It is also plagued by the same problem of the previous albums: Although the music is consistently satisfying on an intellectual and technical level, there is a sense of detachment in the performances that can leave the listener cold. Music of this type should set the feet tapping but it doesn't. It may amaze, but it is rarely moving.

Skylarkin'
Grover Washington Jr.
Motown
Produced by Grover Washington

Skylarkin' is exactly what a Grover Washington album should be — a lot of his distinctive R&B saxophone with a minimum of distractions. When he recorded for CTI, his work was often smothered in the over-production that afflicts that label, but he seems finally to be stretching out in the hands of people who appreciate his music.

Studio veterans such as Eric Gale, Richard Tee, Idris Muhammad and Ralph MacDonald provide a solid, unobtrusive backing on a group of lightly funky R&B charts that are in themselves forgettable. What makes them worthwhile is Washington's soaring solo work, which seem to account for a majority of the playing time. He may never have had a better showcase.

Russia
Russia
Warner Brothers
Produced by Paul Ratajczak

Why this group of American rockers with names like Brighton, Stevens and Tuttle call themselves Russia is not clear — although they do insert an occasional Volga boatmen chant into their songs. What is clear is that Russia, their first album, is chock full of tight, punchy, imaginative rock.

The music is a successful combination of power chording and rhythmic vitality with the instrumental and vocal sophistication of art rock. The vocals are a snappy interplay of unaffected leads (by Griff Stevens) and choral responses and embellishments. The lyrics have no consistent message, though their slightly offbeat themes keep them out of the trite romantic category.

The instrumentals feature the energized attack of guitarist Thomas Brighton on perpetual motion charts that use the power of rock conventions without straying repeatedly into cliches. Russia is crisp, catchy, often surprising and consistently interesting. If we gave stars, this group's earnest first effort would get four. Album courtesy of Warner Brothers

Wizard Island
The Jeff Lorber Fusion
Arista
Produced by Jeff Lorber

The Jeff Lorber Fusion's second album on Arista — after two on Inner City, including the popular Soft Space — is its best. The production quality is excellent and, as Lorber told The Daily Iowan in an interview before his recent local performance, Wizard Island is a group album, rather than a showcase for the talents of featured guest artists. The group's regular saxophonist, Kenny Gorelick, who has obviously listened to Grover Washington once or twice, shares the solo duties with Lorber's multiple keyboards.

The tunes are funky jazz workouts that are so infectious you may catch yourself humming them on the way to work. When this album came into our house it took up residence on the turntable for more than a week solid and is still a frequent visitor.

Album courtesy of Arista

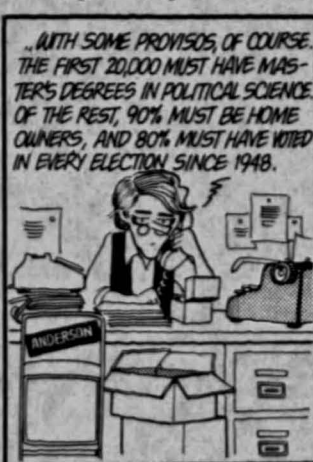

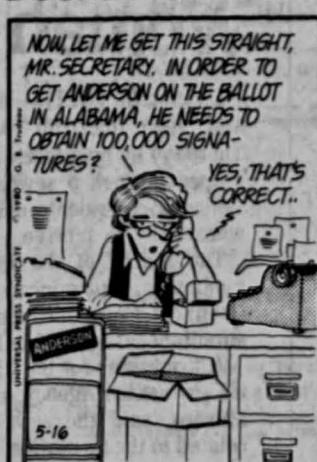

Kittyhawk
Kittyhawk
EMI America
Produced by Daniel Bortz, Paul Edwards and Marty Lewis

The liner notes of the first album from this group from L.A. makes a big deal out of the fact that the band has no conventional bass or keyboards. If they hadn't told you, you wouldn't have noticed. The celebrated chapman stick is for the most part used as a bass and the sax player uses a lyricist, so a conventional small ensemble sound is achieved.

When you get past the inaccuracy of the hype, the music is mildly interesting low-key fusion — what a friend recently referred to as elevator music. Jazz stars John Klemmer and Robben Ford put in restrained appearances and there's nothing really offensive on the album, just lightened-up suggestions of styles from Pat Metheny to Brand X. You might find it pleasant background music.

Carter adamantly rejects Kennedy debate challenge

By United Press International

President Carter Thursday refused Sen. Edward Kennedy's latest challenge to debate, rejecting the conditions under which Kennedy said he would drop out of the 1980 race if he loses the June 3 primaries.

Kennedy offered to withdraw from the presidential race if President Carter wins the popular vote in the June 3 primaries, but only if Carter agrees to a debate before then.

Kennedy, dropping his insistence that he would not get out under any circumstances and would fight Carter on the convention floor in August, said he would get out if the president agreed to debate him, and if he subsequently lost the final round of primaries.

But the White House rejected any last minute debate.

"This is a political process which began Jan. 21 in Iowa and...the voters in the vast majority of states have so far indicated a clear and unmistakable preference for President Carter's continued leadership," said Carter's deputy press secretary Rex Granum. He added Carter's opposition to a debate this late in the campaign "remains unchanged."

GRANUM ADDED that after the June 3 primaries, "the president will have secured the Democratic nomination by a wide margin."

In San Diego, Vice President Walter Mondale said Kennedy was desperate.

"Why should a sitting president debate a losing candidate in his own party?" Mondale asked at a campaign stop. "We will debate the Republican nominee."

Election '80

"I think it's a brilliant expression of desperation," Mondale said. "I think it's preposterous on its face."

Kennedy warned Carter that if he continues to refuse a debate, he will face a fractious national convention in August.

"I know," he said, "that if a debate is not held in the primaries, it will be held at the convention. I could not prevent this if I wished to."

"At stake," he said, "is more than personal gain or loss for me or the president. For Democrats, the question now is not only the name of our nominee but the integrity of our ideals."

IN WASHINGTON, Carter was asked about the Kennedy offer following a brief speech in the East Room but declined to respond. The president only smiled and walked away from reporters.

The Massachusetts senator said he is willing to debate Carter any place, any time, before June 3, the day on which more than a third of the 1,666 convention delegates needed for nomination will be selected.

"If he agrees, then the final primaries will be the truest test of this campaign," Kennedy said.

"If there is such a debate," Kennedy said, "then I will regard the June 3 primaries as a referendum — and I will abide by the results that day."

SHALL WE DANCE? (1937)
Ballet star Astaire falls for a haughty musical comedy star (Rogers) who wants no part of him — that is, until they dance together. One of the funniest, most charming of the Astaire-Rogers musicals, this film has a Gertrude Lawrence standard like "They Can't Take That Away From Me" and "Let's Call the Whole Thing Off." It also features the famous roller-skate number, and the number in which Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers wear Edward Everett Horton. Directed by Mark Sandrich. 116 min.

In the 30s, one of the favorite subjects of "poverty row" exploitation films was the evils of the "devil weed" — marijuana. Pure camp melodrama all the way, completely hilarious by standards today, such a film as "Reefer Madness" was considered tight drama under the guise of warning the audience of how marijuana was destroying the lives of young people in that time. The plot of "Reefer Madness" is no different, with a young man's life soon becoming a nightmare. Pure "high camp" that must be seen to be believed. 65 min. B & W. Fri. 11:00

Mexico raises crude oil price $1.50 a barrel

By United Press International

Mexico, a major U.S. oil supplier, Wednesday raised its basic crude by $1.50 to $33.50 a barrel — one day after Saudi Arabia slapped a $2-a-barrel increase on its oil, Petroleum Intelligence Weekly reported.

Mexico, which exports about 560,000 barrels of oil a day to the United States, is not an OPEC member, but its pricing policy closely follows that of the 13-nation cartel.

Analysts said Mexico's action indicated Saudi Arabia's decision to raise its prices could trigger a new round of world oil price increases.

UI student Steve Bissell attracted the television cameras in the Union Thursday before the start of a rally held to protest faculty salaries. The rally started about the same time the regents took a lunch break from their monthly meeting. The note attached to the photograph of Gov. Robert Ray says, "Would you buy a used education from this man?"

employees.

"WHEN WE had registration a few weeks ago, the faculty was required to register students for classes we didn't even know if we had people to teach," she said. When the state budget needs to be trimmed, Weiss added, "Education gets cut first."

Student Senate President Bruce

Hagemann called on the faculty and students to work together.

"We cannot allow the people in Des Moines to pit ourselves against each other. We must stick together on these things," he said.

Hagemann said the UI emphasizes sports, and the emphasis is partly to blame for the faculty's dissatisfaction.

"I like sports," he said. "But if that's all there's going to be here, then I don't want to be here anymore." Hagemann then asked students and faculty members to "help Coach Boyd (UI President Willard Boyd) recruit a winning faculty."

Sen. Tess Catalano said, "If the regents don't respect the quality of the faculty here, they don't respect the students. I take offense at that."

kind of recession we can deal with."

ALSO APPROVED by the board Thursday were funds to build a low-level radioactive waste disposal facility at the UI Oakdale campus.

The regents gave the go-ahead after almost no discussion to spend $369,000 for the project.

The facility will store waste from faculty and clinical research conducted at the UI in the event that out-of-state disposal sites shut down, as they have in the past.

UI Hospitals officials have previously said that the site will pose no danger to area residents and passers-by.

The board renamed two UI buildings in honor of E.F. Lindquist, an educational testing expert who worked at the UI. The Lindquist Center for Measurement and the second phase of construction, Lindquist II, will be incorporated under the name of the Lindquist Center.

In addition, the regents approved the appointment of Charles Case, dean of the College of Education and Human Services at the University of Wisconsin, as the new dean of the UI College of Education. He assumes his duties July 1.

much of the lighting for the building will probably be provided by skylights. The building will need 100 percent of its electricity from an outside source, but its heating could be supplemented by the passive solar system, he said.

The location for the new school is ideal, Houck said. "It's at the high point of the campus and it is unlikely that anyone will build south of it."

Funding for planning the new center was withdrawn when Gov. Robert Ray's budget cut $17 million for the UI. But Gibson said the money is expected to be reappropriated next year.

Gibson said that the architects for the project are Gunnar and Birkerts of Birmingham, Michigan.

Bahamas demands formal apology, full reparations for Cuban attack

NASSAU, Bahamas (UPI) — The Bahamas Thursday demanded a formal apology from Cuba and full reparations for the MiG rocket and machine gun attack that sank the patrol boat Flamingo and killed four sailors.

External Affairs Minister Paul L. Adenlyer made the Bahamas' position clear hours before Cuban diplomats returned to Nassau for the second round of talks about Cuban fighter sorties last weekend.

When the Cuban delegation arrived, more than 300 Bahamians demonstrated at the airport to protest the weekend attack.

Meanwhile, the Bahamian government called off the search for the bodies of the four seamen killed in the attack.

Besides a formal apology — Cuba had earlier expressed its "regrets" and said the attack was a mistake — and reparations for the four sailors and the $4.5 million ship the MiGs sank in 3,000 feet of water, the Bahamas also demanded the Cuban government guarantee the territorial integrity of the 700-island nation.

THE BAHAMAS has threatened to take the matter to the United Nations Security Council if Cuba does not satisfy its demands.

In the United Nations Cuba told the U.N. Security Council its pilots attacked and sank the a Bahamian patrol boat in the mistaken belief it was a "pirate ship" with two Cuban fishing vessels in tow.

Supreme Court justices reveal personal assets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the second straight year, the nine Supreme Court justices Thursday released their personal financial statements showing two are millionaires and one is simply a salaried employee.

By far the wealthiest were Lewis Powell and Potter Stewart, each listing 1979 assets of over $1 million.

Powell, a former corporate lawyer from Richmond, Va., and his wife receive income from four trusts. They also listed dividend and interest income between $71,000 and $152,000 in 1979. Their investments are managed by a Virginia bank.

Stewart is beneficiary of a life trust set up by an uncle, and his wife receives income from three trusts.

THE LEAST affluent justice is Thurgood Marshall, who listed no income, interest or other holdings aside from his $72,000 yearly salary.

Woman killed by gas leak

De Pue, Ill. (UPI) — A woman was killed and her husband and son injured Thursday by hydrogen sulfide fumes which seeped through a sewer system. Officials said other residents using the sewer line were lucky to survive.

The source of the fumes was not immediately determined, although a Mobil Chemical Co. plant nearby experienced a simultaneous spill of sulfuric acid.

A spokesman for the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency in Springfield, John Muraro, said the spill might have been related to the formation of the gas but there was no direct evidence to indicate that was the case.

Several hundred persons living on the south side of the Illinois River town of 2,000 were evacuated as a precaution. Officials said they would be allowed to return to their homes after the EPA tested for gas.

The only serious injuries occurred at a house about midway along the sewer line, occupied by a family of three, a spokesman at St. Margaret Hospital in Spring Valley said.

THE SPOKESMAN said the son smelled gas and summoned his mother, Josephine Huerta, 57, who went into the basement to investigate. When she failed to return, he called his father, Jose Huerta, 55, and then summoned neighbors and authorities.

Mrs. Huerta was dead on arrival at the hospital. The father was reported in guarded condition in the critical care unit and the son was treated and released.

Hawks start second day at regionals

By DAN O'CONNOR
Staff Writer

Iowa women's tennis Coach Cathy Ballard turned out to be quite a prophet.

"If we win the regional, we'll have earned it," Ballard said earlier this week. She was not speaking of the seedings, but she might as well have been.

Three of the Hawks' five singles entries drew members of the top-seeded Minnesota Gophers as opening opponents as the individual championships begin today at the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women's Region VI tourney at Columbia, Mo.

The pairings were decided by open draw, which means that a player could be paired against any other player. Three singles players and one doubles team advance to the national championships.

Iowa's Karen Kettenacker, the top seed, drew Peggy Chutich of Minnesota.

Iowa's other draws look like this:

Lagen vs. Leslie Larm of Minnesota; Ruth Kilgour vs. Minnesota's Jenelle Johnson; Kelly Harding vs. Jan Louderback of Wichita State; and Karen Kaltsulas vs. Shawna Guilfoil of Missouri.

Iowa qualified all three doubles teams.

Iowa teams set for final action

With the 1979-80 school year winding down as students finish up final exams today, the Iowa athletic teams will also close out their seasons in the next few weeks.

Mathematically, the Iowa baseball team still has a chance to share in the Big Ten crown. But when one considers what must be done this weekend, it seems almost an impossible task. The Hawks will face Big Ten leader Michigan (13-1) and conference cellar-dweller Michigan State (3-11) in 1 p.m. double-headers Saturday and Sunday on the Iowa diamond.

In order to have a crack at the title, the Hawks must sweep all four contests and the Wolverines must lose all four games. Michigan, which is assured at least a tie for the championship at this point, will challenge Northwestern Sunday.

The Wolverines lead the conference in both pitching and fielding while Iowa hovers near the top in both categories. Iowa first-baseman John Hoyman has been hitting with the best in the Big Ten as of late with an average well over the .500 mark.

The Hawks managed to stay in the conference race last weekend after splitting twinbills with both Wisconsin and Minnesota in road contests.

ANOTHER MEN'S team still in action is Coach Ted Wheeler's tracksters. The Hawks will be in the Wisconsin Open Saturday as a warm-up for next weekend's Big Ten outdoor meet at Illinois.

The men's team will be seeking to better a ninth-place showing in the conference indoor meet earlier this year. The 400-meter relay squad is ranked third in the Big Ten while the 1,600 quartet holds down fourth. Sprinter Dennis Mosley's time (10.4 seconds) in the 100 rates him seventh while his 200 time (21.0) places him fifth. William McCalister (400), Jeff Brown (400 hurdles) Chris Williams (110 high hurdles) and John Boyer (discus) rank eighth in their respective events.

The men have not yet qualified any individuals or relays for the national meet June 5-7 at Austin, Texas.

Mosley, who has been out of action since pulling a muscle April 19, should be back in the thick of things this weekend.

THE IOWA MEN'S golf team hopes for a first-division finish this weekend when it travels to the Big Ten meet in Madison, Wis. Ohio State rates as the favorite with Michigan and Michigan State right behind, according to Coach Chuck Zwienen.

Eighteen holes will be played today, 36 holes Saturday and 18 holes Sunday in the 72-hole tournament. Zwienen said that Iowa's Dave Rummels should have a good shot at medalist honors. Rummels will be joined in the Hawkeye line-up by senior Tom Loudon, Brian Eilders Gregg Winkel, Scott Howe and Mike Hasley.

ON THE WOMEN'S side, the Iowa tracksters will make their last bid for national qualification as they join the men at the Wisconsin Open in Madison.

Ankle injury sidelines Jabbar

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's finest game of the 1980 NBA championship series may have been his last of the season.

With 4:40 remaining in Wednesday night's fifth game against the Philadelphia 76ers, the Los Angeles Lakers' captain came down awkwardly on his left ankle, sustaining a serious sprain. He did not accompany the team to Philadelphia Thursday and will not play in Friday night's sixth game. The Laker team physician said it was only "50-50" he would play Sunday, if a seventh game is needed.

Behind Abdul-Jabbar's 40 points and 15 rebounds, the Lakers notched a 108-103 victory over the 76ers to take a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series.

"It was extremely doubtful Kareem would be able to play tomorrow night," Dr. Robert Kerlan said Thursday. "By keeping him in Los Angeles and treating him here, he will be much better prepared to be able to play on Sunday if that game is necessary."

The six-time MVP left the court following the injury but returned, with the ankle heavily taped, to score 14 points in the crucial final period as the Lakers held off a furious closing rally by the 76ers. Abdul-Jabbar hit a key 3-point play with 33 seconds remaining to snap a 103-103 tie and seal it for Los Angeles.

Julius Erving scored 15 of his 36 points in the final period to bring the 76ers from a 12-point deficit to a 103-103 tie.

The rest of the Lakers and Coach Paul Westhead know the team's hopes of wrapping up its first NBA title since 1972 rest heavily on Abdul-Jabbar. With him, the Lakers are a championship team. Without him, there are probably five or six superior teams in the league.

"We know he's our best player," said Westhead, "and it would be real tough without him. I feel we can win the series without him, but I'd sure would like to have him alone."

Laker trainer Jack Curran was the first to examine the injured ankle during the third period.

"There was considerable swelling even then," said Curran. "We asked him if he could play and he said 'yes.' We asked him if it hurt and he said 'No,' but I know he was hurt."

'Hollywood' traded to 49ers

(UPI) — Thomas Henderson, the outspoken linebacker who was released six months ago by the Dallas Cowboys, was traded to the San Francisco 49ers Thursday for a 1981 draft choice.

Henderson was dismissed

Nov. 19 after playing to the cameras on national television during a game with the Washington Redskins. At that time Henderson retired, saying he would not play football unless he could be a Cowboy. In January, Henderson asked for forgiveness from Coach Tom Landry, but Landry remained firm that Henderson was a "general disruptive influence" on the team. By mid-February, Henderson had turned up in New Orleans, hoping to convince Coach Dick Nolan he was worth a first-round draft choice. Nolan was not persuaded.

Cowboys General Manager Tex Schramm said the club had been talking about trading Henderson "on and off to several clubs all spring."

"I always felt very sorry that it didn't work out here because he had a great potential for the Cowboys," Schramm said. "But he has a new opportunity and I wish him the best of luck."

"I think he'll make things interesting in San Francisco."

Chicago's Bob Molinaro slides into third on a 7th inning triple, while Milwaukee's Sal Bando awaits the throw in action Thursday. The White Sox went on to upend the Brewers, 6-4.

BE ON THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS AT 22.

Think of a ship as a corporation, and it's not farfetched at all. A destroyer may have fifteen officers, other ships even fewer. Even the most junior officer gets to share in running the show.

You become part of the management team when you get your commission as an ensign after just 16 weeks of leadership training at Officer Candidate School.

Choose to be a Navy officer and you are responsible for people and equipment almost immediately.

Many officers go on for further advanced schooling. The Navy has literally dozens of fields for its officers—everything from nuclear propulsion to systems analysis, oceanography to inventory management. In graduate school, this training would cost you thousands, but in the Navy, we pay you.

Ask your Navy representative about officer opportunities, or mail this coupon for more information. Or call toll-free 800-841-8000 (in GA call toll-free 800-342-5855).

There's no obligation, and you'll learn about an excellent way to start a career in management. As a college graduate you can get management experience in any industry. But you'll get it sooner—and more of it—in the Navy.
