A return to nature

Anyone visiting Iowa City this fall or winter may notice that the aging magazine stands have been replaced by a new low扑克 machines. The stand is located near the entrance to the East End Commons Building at the corner of University and Market streets.

In the past, the magazine stands were an affordable way for students to get some pocket change while participating in other activities on campus. However, the stands were often underutilized and became a burden for the university, leading to their removal.

The new low扑克 machines are expected to generate more income for the university and provide a more modern option for students to access cash. The machines are also expected to encourage more people to visit the East End Commons Building, which houses several popular eateries and cafes.

Money pinch means more local vacations

Many people are also taking advantage of the current economic recession and choosing to stay closer to home for their summer vacations. This trend is expected to continue throughout the year, with more people opting for local travel rather than international trips.

The popularity of local vacations has been further fueled by the recent surge in interest in outdoor activities such as hiking, camping, and cycling. Many people are also interested in exploring new areas of their own state, leading to an increase in the number of road trips and day trips.

The trend towards local travel is expected to continue throughout the year, with more people choosing to stay close to home for their summer vacations.

UI Hospital netted $17.8 million from private contributors in 1979

UI Hospital netted $17.8 million from private contributors in 1979, according to a University of Iowa Hospitals report. The report, submitted to the foundation's executive director, said that the hospitals had 39,241 admissions in 1977, followed by Duke officials, the doctors and nurses base their categories: admissions, number of beds and the Council of Teaching Hospitals' 1977 survey rated the hospitals in three clinics is the nation's largest teaching.

The survey found that admissions were up 11 percent from the previous year, while the number of beds remained constant at 1,520. The survey found that the average length of stay was 2.3 days, followed by Duke officials, the doctors and nurses base their categories: admissions, number of beds and the Council of Teaching Hospitals' 1977 survey rated the hospitals in three clinics is the nation's largest teaching.

Grade change procedure is a long, arduous trip to nowhere

Cindy Schreuder

Munoz said: "I don't recall if he ever told me that one of the reasons for the grade change was because of the grade you would get you would not get an equal education ."

"There could be many reasons for a grade change," Kubik said. "But it's interesting, I've given students a vote, however , should transcend any personal

"There are a number of different reasons for grade changes," said Dean of Liberal Arts, Leonard McNeil. "The most common one is that the professor, or the teaching assistant, has an obligation to the student."

"The professor or the teaching assistant must be able to explain, and the student must be able to understand, the reasons for the grade change," he said.

"The grade change procedure is a long, arduous trip to nowhere," said Lubahn. "And it's not fair to the student or the professor.

"The procedures are complex and time-consuming," he said. "And they do not provide a clear path for resolving disputes.

"The procedure is not a solution," he said. "It is just a way to deal with the problem.

Author of Karen Silkwood book reported missing with manuscript

OKLAHOMA CITY — Police are searching for several photos of Karen Silkwood, the oil industry whistleblower whose case made headlines 20 years ago, as investigators report they have found more than 700 photos of Silkwood at her apartment.

The search for the photos began after a tip from the Silkwood family, who were alerted to the possibility of the photos by the attorney who represented the family in the case.

The attorney said the photos were found in a box at the apartment, where Silkwood was last known to have been living.

Silkwood, a 26-year-old Exxon Mobil employee, disappeared in 1974 while investigating a chemical leak at the company's production facility in Baytown, Texas.

The case gained national attention after Silkwood's death and the subsequent trial of her husband, Ray, who was acquitted of murder.

The latest tip came after a police search of the apartment turned up a box that contained what appeared to be several photos of Silkwood.

The police have not yet confirmed the identity of the photos, but the Silkwood family said they are hopeful that the photos will provide new information about the case.

The search is ongoing, and police are urging anyone with information about the photos to come forward.

WASHINGTON — The House is on the brink of unifying as the Senate and House move closer to finalizing a $1.9 trillion coronavirus relief package that would provide economic assistance to Americans for a second time in less than a year.

Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer said Wednesday that he was confident the bipartisan legislation would pass the Senate later this week, clearing the way for a House vote next week.

The legislation would provide a $1.9 trillion stimulus package to help individuals, businesses and state and local governments weather the economic effects of the coronavirus pandemic.

GERALD MILLER, supervisor of equipment and facilities for the University of Wisconsin-Madison, said he plans to auction an all-black cat that the university owns.

The cat, which is about 10 years old, is known as "Mr. Nervous." Miller said the cat was found on campus in 1986 and has been a permanent fixture since then.

"He's been a great cat for the last 30 years," Miller said.

Study

THE REPORT also indicated a decline in employment among black workers, a reduction of 2.5 million jobs from 2019 to 2020. For white men, the decline was 4.7 million, while for white women, it was 4.8 million.

The report also showed a decrease in employment among black women, from 2.6 million in 2019 to 2.1 million in 2020.

Finkbine survives wrapper inundation

by Dick Peterson

Large red balloons have been blowing erratically out of the UI's Finkbine Golf Course, in large quantities, for the past two weeks. A group of 15 people from Iowa, St. Louis, and Chicago, including several local golf pros, have been blowing the balloons, and have been doing so at all hours. The balloons are made of red, plastic material and are being blown up to create a visual effect that is both entertaining and somewhat disorienting. The group has been using a large plastic bag to carry the balloons, and has been blowing them up at all hours of the day and night. The balloons are said to be causing some confusion among drivers and pedestrians, and some have even been reported as being hazardous to traffic. The group is said to be a local art collective, and is using the balloons to create a statement about the state of the environment. The group is said to be planning a series of further balloon releases in the near future.
