Delay of Treiber's sentencing granted

One of the anti-draft protesters blocking the entrance to Lakeside owners given extension of deadline to fix air conditioning

By Dianna Kowal Poynter

"I can't believe that they're still trying to make us do this," said one tenant. "I mean, it's not like we're going to die or anything, but it's just..."

In a letter to the editor, resident said, "I've been here for years, and I've never had any problems with the air conditioning."

The management of Lakeside Manor has given its tenants an additional day to fix the air conditioning before they face fines and other penalties. The extension, which was granted by the city, means that tenants have until Friday to complete any necessary repairs.

Draft protests mark first day of registration

Draft offices across the country were filled with young men on Tuesday as they registered for the draft, marking the first day of the nation's selective service system.

In Boston, construction workers and students rallied outside the draft office to protest the draft, while in New York City, a group of young men marched through Times Square holding signs against the draft.

"I'm not registered," said one protestor. "I can't believe they want to do this."

In Washington D.C., a group of young women held a demonstration outside the draft office, calling for an end to the draft.

"I'm not interested in joining the army," said one woman. "I think it's a waste of time and money."

The draft system was put into place following the end of World War II, and has been controversial ever since. Many young men have refused to register, citing concerns about the war and the meaning of patriotism.

"I don't believe in war," said one person. "I think it's a terrible thing to do to people."

Ten prisoners moved to Oakdale to be closer to medical care

Prairie Medicine

Ten prisoners from Iowa's adult correction facilities are being moved to the new behavioral medicine facility at Oakdale State Penitentiary to receive specialized treatment for psychological conditions, according to state officials.

The move, Farrier said, is "primarily an economic decision," as the state Social Services Department announced last week. The state penal institutions are now being moved to the facility to receive medical care in Iowa.

"Some of them may be unique risk, some may be personal problems. But their behavior has been such that they have been moved," Farrier said. "I don't see them as anyone who is likely to present problems to the community." Farrier said that the medical health, not just the mental health, of the prisoners will be taken into account when deciding who will be moved to the Oakdale facility. The security at Oakdale will not change, but there will be some new security measures to ensure the prisoners' safety.

"The state doesn't have funds for that, so you do what you can," said Farrier. "It's not an additional policy, but it's just a way of doing things. Oakdale will be able to provide care that we were previously unable to provide.

"We're not moving all 51 prisoners to Oakdale, but we're moving a selected few," Farrier said. "It's not an expansion of the prison system, but we're moving some prisoners to a facility that is better suited for their needs."

The National Education Association has become a force to be reckoned with as a political entity. This summer's political session, which the NEA membership will attend, will be an important event.

In the past, the NEA has focused on educational issues, such as funding, teacher salaries, and curriculum. However, in recent years, the NEA has become more active in political matters, particularly in presidential elections.

The NEA's political arm, the National Education Association for Democratic Action (NEADA), was founded in 1965. Since then, NEADA has become a powerful force in the Democratic Party, especially in presidential elections.

In the 2020 presidential election, for example, NEADA endorsed Joe Biden and Kamala Harris, and their campaign benefited from NEADA's grassroots organizing and financial support.

The NEA's influence is not limited to presidential elections. The NEA also plays a role in state and local elections, supporting candidates who align with its educational positions.

The NEA's political activities are not without controversy. Some critics believe that the NEA's political actions are an abuse of its position as a professional organization.

However, the NEA defends its political efforts, arguing that as a professional organization, it has a right to speak out on issues that affect its members. The NEA also argues that it is important for educators to have a voice in the political process.

The NEA's political actions have had a significant impact on the political landscape. In the 2020 presidential election, for example, NEADA's endorsement helped to secure Joe Biden's victory in many states.

The NEA's political activities are likely to continue in future elections. As the NEA's influence grows, it will be important for educators to understand the organization's political goals and strategies.
