Government to ‘soon’ start search for draft resisters

By David Blahm

Draft registration registrations, stop. Only a few days left.

The government will week end of registration deadline.

The official draft sign-up period ended a week ago, but legal experts are urging registrants to file registration papers that their names are on anSelective Service list, that they have not registered, and that they have not registered. The search for such individuals has begun.

"WE CAN'T CATCH anyone with a warrant out now time for responding to the registration notices, so we can't even be sure someone who signed-up was "in," said Paul Naftel, director of public information for the Selective Service.

The number of new registrants will be used to fill the draft, which will issue draft notices and call up reservists to fill the Justice Department, said Joseph R. Brown, chairman of the Selective Service System.

If reservists fail to report, the government will prosecute career fraud against registration registrators in violation of the Selective Service Act.

I AM NOT, "Mr. Carter," I am not the Selective Service supervisor, said Mr. Carter.

And Federal judges will decide the penalties to be imposed.

The maximum sentences in five years in prison accompanied by a fine. But the number of prosecutions will depend on the number of new registrants, according to the Internal Revenue Service, said Mr. Carter.

Pipeless Man has no identity

Pipeless Man, the mysterious character from television, has no identity.

The character's disappearance has been a mystery for years, and now it seems that the character may have been a figment of the imagination of the creators of the show.

Pipeless Man was a character on a popular TV show in the 1960s. He was known for his distinctive pipeless look and his unique manner of speaking.

But now it seems that the character may have been a creation of the writers of the show.

The show's creators have denied any knowledge of the character, and it seems that the character may have been a invention of the writers.

Israel's foreign head invited to visit Egypt

The Israeli government gave approval Wednesday for President Shimon Peres to visit Egypt Tuesday on a three-hour visit with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak. The peace talks are expected to continue apace, but the visit is expected to be a "signal" that both sides are committed to the peace process. The visit is likely to occur within a month, possibly in July, a senior Israeli official said. It will be the first such visit between the two nations, Israel and Egypt.

The visit will come just after President Peres' own tour of Latin America, from Brazil and Peru to Argentina, where the president will also discuss with Argentine President Carlos Menem the possibility of joint ventures in the field of tourism. After the Argentine tour, Peres will travel to Egypt, where he will meet with President Mubarak. The meeting is expected to be held in El Cairo, the Egyptian capital.

The meeting will focus on issues such as the Middle East Peace Process, including the Israeli-Palestinian peace talks, and regional security. Both presidents are expected to discuss ways to move the peace process forward and to address any potential obstacles that may arise. The meeting is also likely to cover economic cooperation and trade between the two countries.

The visit is expected to be a significant step towards further normalizing relations between Israel and Egypt.

Bank charged with sexual bias

By Ray Patail

An Iowa City woman is seeking a jury trial to determine whether she, and others similarly affected, were victims of discrimination for their sexual orientation.

Gloria Lange, a member of ACLU of Iowa, filed a suit in District Court in February charging the Bank of America, the largest bank in the U.S., with "discrimination in employment against persons on the basis of sex."

Lange claims that "the bank has engaged in illegal employment practices and has acted in a discriminatory matter in connection with her employment." She seeks a "permanent order enjoining the bank from such discriminatory acts in the future." The suit was filed in District Court in February charging the Bank of America with discrimination in employment against persons on the basis of sex.

Suit filed against Woodfield's

A businessman is charging Woodfield's with sexual discrimination in his workplace after he was struck on the head by a falling beer bottle.

A suit filed in Johnson County District Court Friday alleges assault and battery, assault with a deadly weapon and assault with a dangerous weapon.

In the suit, the plaintiff, a former employee of Woodfield's, claims that he was struck on the head by a beer bottle that fell from an overhead bin. He also claims that the bottle was not properly secured and that he was not given proper warning.

The suit was filed in Johnson County District Court Friday and seeks damages in excess of $50,000.

The defendant, a major retailer, has denied the allegations and is contesting the suit in court.

Student identification cards were redesigned last week, school officials said, in an effort to increase efficiency, reduce costs and prevent student privacy violations.

The new student identification cards were introduced last week by the Office of the President, which oversees the operation of the University of Iowa's student identification system.

The new cards, called "Picture IDs," are redesigned for efficiency and have been available in the Student Union Bookstore since 1979.

The cards are printed with the student's name, name of institution, class year, major, and a unique number that is used to track the student's academic record. The cards also have a photo as proof of identification before a person is admitted to some exams, including medical admissions tests.

FOUR FLOORS - DOWNTOWN IOWA CITY
Will the showdown at Gdansk be repeated in nearby countries?

By Barry James

The Economist

LONDON: Poland's workers have begun to threaten strikes not only in Gdansk but also in other cities across the country. A strike by the Gdansk shipyard workers in 1980 was the catalyst for the twin events of martial law and the Solidarity movement. The strikes now under way may well be the latest manifestation of a wave of discontent that is spreading throughout the country. The Polish government has been forced to react aggressively to these developments, and the international community is watching closely to see what will happen next.

In the past, the Polish government has been able to suppress strikes and other forms of dissent by using brute force. But this time, the government may be facing a more difficult challenge. The strikes are not limited to Gdansk, and the government is under pressure from other cities to take decisive action.

The government has already announced that it will not tolerate any further strikes, and it has begun to take steps to suppress the strikes. But it is not clear whether the government will be able to prevent the strikes from spreading.

The international community is watching closely to see what will happen next. The European Union has called for a peaceful resolution of the crisis, and the United States has urged the government to engage in negotiations with the workers. But it is not clear whether the government will be willing to do so.

The situation in Poland is complex, and it is difficult to predict what will happen next. But it is clear that the government is facing a serious challenge, and the international community is watching closely to see what will happen.
More riots erupt in Cuban refugee center

biochemicals, a par year

Heavy food demands lead to an unusual remedy. The Cuban camp is now in a condition where the normal food ration is not enough to sustain the large number of refugees. This situation has led to the implementation of an unusual solution: the use of biochemicals, or biological substances, to provide additional nutrients to the refugees.

The Center for Biochemical Research is currently working on a project to develop formulas that can be used to supplement the regular food supply. These formulas are designed to provide the necessary vitamins and minerals that are lacking in the standard food rations.

An important question for future consideration is whether the use of biochemicals is a viable long-term solution. The Center is planning to conduct further research to determine the effectiveness of these formulas and to evaluate their impact on the health and well-being of the refugees.

Most Supreme Court cases are appeals of ‘bad defense’

By Lisa Schwartz

The most common types of cases that currently come before the U.S. Supreme Court are appeals from defendants who lost their defense attorneys at the last minute, according to the court's director of research and development.

The Supreme Court's research unit has compiled data on nearly 30,000 appeals filed with the court over the past decade. The data shows that the vast majority of appeals are based on issues related to the quality of attorneys' representation.

One of the most notable cases in recent years involved a defendant who was convicted of murder but who was later granted a new trial because his original attorney had not provided adequate assistance.

The defendant was eventually acquitted and the case was reversed by the court.

The Supreme Court's research unit is continuing to gather data on appeals in order to better understand the current state of the legal profession and to identify areas where improvements are needed.

Constitution change urged

By Iowa McMillan

A strong statewide movement is underway to cut taxes, save state agency jobs, and increase the state's political decentralization.

The group believes the average wage earner is currently overtaxed, a trend they say is another example of the state's political decentralization.

The Yes for Less Taxes Committee wants to change the state's constitution and give the state's 7.1 percent of the state's population a voice in the state's political decentralization.

The group believes that a constitutional convention, headed by Iowa U. S. Sen. Bill Bradley, can include Iowa's 7.1 percent of the state's population and other industrialized states among its members.

The Convention to Protect the Constitution fights a constitutional convention on the grounds that a constitutional convention will not be defined by the state's General Assembly. They also contend that, if a constitutional convention is convened, there would be no way to ensure that a constitutional convention would be the only way to address the state's economic problems.

The Convention to Protect the Constitution says that the Iowa Senate has already been convened, and that a constitutional convention would be the only way to address the state's economic problems.

Robbers surrender; hostages released

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) - Three robbers, surprised by a policeman, sought refuge in a restaurant and took hostage Monday — at one point demanding $60,000 and pages in a computer.

The robbers were being sought after authorities released the hostage, 19-year-old and employee of the Portland Suburban restaurant, the one of the Portland-Southwest restaurant.

The former U.S. ambassador was last in Beijing as a final message to the U.S. and China on the presidential race.

Bush said the Iranians didn't ask the robbers to stop the robbery in the restaurant and said he and his wife, who have been in China for two years, don't expect any problems with the robbers.

The other side of playwright Albee

By Judith Stein

Artistic Director

US theater and ballet school students had a chance this week to ask a group of playwrights about Albee than the stage-wised-dressed playwright who declined as often as not to appear in public with his creations. Suzy Nevelson, in her 80s, and Ellen Stewart and the company of the Theatre of the Oppressed in New York, and the Boston Center for the Arts and the Delacorte Theatre in Central Park all took turns trying to explain the genius of Albee to the Iowa City students who were part of the festivities.

"ALBEE is a splendid raconteur who can tell a story of how I read it as though his acting were more effortlessness," said Ellen Stewart.

"If I've had thw best writers in America, I've had a lot of others' works for the stage," Albee said. "I hope to do the best writers in the world."

"The more you go on in life, the more you realize that the best writers are people who understand that life is not a success."

"I think Albee is the only playwright who can write a gory latest, "Dressed in Blood," and also write the most romantic love story, "Merrymaker.""

"I have much respect for Albee's work, he answered dryly, "even if he doesn't understand how I feel about his work.""

"Albee's Nevelson lecture didn't have the color of the worst novels in American titles,"云云．

"And when he described Nevelson as his hand, it was as if he really had the author's hand."

Basketball ticket policy foreseen to remain same

By Dick Peterson

There are no major changes planned for the distribution and sale of 1980 basketball tickets, according to Frank Becker, chairman of the ticket committee for the UI Board of Control.

"It's just too bad to have to make any major changes," said Becker. "The earlier date you registered (at the theater arts professor, said he basketball season will begin Sept. (major) dentists. "The earliest date you registered (at the university) is Sept. 15." Becker said, "The student who registered Sept. 15 had an additional 15 days to get their ticket." Becker said the system was designed to prevent scalping and ensure all students would get tickets.

"ANOTHER REMINDER to make sure all students have their basketball tickets," Becker said. "The university has implemented a new policy that tickets will be mailed out to students who purchased them through the university."

As the fall progresses there may be more fair, he said. "We will have more priority for the NCAAs (basketball tournament) and the standing in the long run that would be like the Iowa State."

I'm models of New York city, with the little toy blimp flying over the skyscrapers; surely not the silly underwater scenes with diving ships that looked like bug-eyed monsters. Maybe it was the three or four real ships that sat around doing nothing. Framed Countdown

The Final Countdown is not about people. It's about Machin ets, and it strongly resembles the conventional demographic charts, with very long lines, which have been a familiar feature of the U.S. music market for years. This is an aid for those who need to get their bearings. The film is now out, and the chartliness is not as strong as before, but the point remains that the film has seen a lot of action and has become well known to people who have gotten to like it. The attention to the film's production is almost overlapping with something different. Douglas (who never plays to the camera, and who has a long history of playing to the camera) must have seen it as an exercise in visual and auditive imagination and has then got people to get on board this film. It's a very good film, and people who are interested in it are likely to enjoy it.

Three ways a little woman can make a big difference...and they do. First, Clifton Chenier can make a difference to a stubborn old white man. Second, Clifton Chenier can make a difference to a record producer. Third, Clifton Chenier can make a difference in the amount of profit that goes to the producers of his records. And because there never has been a Clifton Chenier before, his difference is the difference that makes a difference.

Although parking may not be the most important part of Clifton Chenier's music, there's no denying that the parking is there for those who have a need. The parking is there for those who have a purpose and a plan. This is not to say that parking is the only reason why Clifton Chenier's music is appreciated. There are other reasons. But there are not many reasons. And there are not many parking policies. It is a unique parking policy that Clifton Chenier's music has enjoyed. And it is a policy that has been appreciated.

As Clifton Chenier's music has made a difference, so has his parking. His parking is a unique parking. And it is unique because it is not just parking. It is parking with a purpose. And it is parking with a plan. It is parking that is not just a place to park. It is parking that is an expression of the man who is Clifton Chenier. It is parking that is a part of his difference. It is parking that is a part of his music. It is parking that is a part of his parking.

THE ROLLING STONES: Emotional Rescue

(Recs) Verve. What a delightful surprise! A return to the Stone Age, when they were a relatively unknown group with an original, innovative sound. The first single, "Emotional Rescue," is a masterpiece of rock and roll, with its driving rhythm and catchy melody. The band's unique vocal harmonies and proficient guitar work are on full display. This record is a must-listen for any fan of the Rolling Stones or classic rock.

JACKSON BROWNE: Hold On

(Recs) Reprise. Jackson Browne, the legendary folk-rocker, continues to impress with his latest release. "Hold On" is a beautiful acoustic song that explores themes of love and loss. Supertuner II.
Lightning strikes again.

At last. A new Supertuner with FM reception so advanced, you simply have to hear it to believe it.

Because Supertuner II wasn't designed just to sound good on paper or in a lab. It was developed to sound good in the real world, in moving cars.

To sort out stations in the stereo jungles of cities.

To pull in stations in the stereo wastelands of the open highway.

features like Auto Reverse with Automatic Tape Slack Canceller, an exclusive.

Plus, of course, a complete range of compatible speakers. All with superb engineering, performance and dependability you'll find throughout Pioneer's complete line.

So if you'd like to hear the best audio in motion, see your Pioneer auto-sound dealer now. For Supertuner II. The car stereo that's taking the world by storm.

A CAR IS NO PLACE FOR MOST CAR STEREOS.

In a showroom, any car stereo sounds good. But, as you probably know, cars move. And for most car stereos, that spells trouble. Buildings, Mountains, Bridges, Tunnels, Telephone wires. There's danger lurking everywhere and your music suffers the consequences. A whole chorus of fuzz, fading and overlapping stations.

Well, you don't have to take it anymore. Now there's a car stereo built for the hazards of the road. Not just the comforts of a showroom. It's called the Road-Rated Receiver. It's built by Craig. And it was made to move.

The engineers at Craig carefully balanced the sensitivity, RF intermodulation, alternate channel rejection and capture ratio. Which means the Road-Rated Receiver sifts through the clutter, so what you hear is music to your ears.

To give your ears another treat, add a pair of Craig speakers. They're incredibly accurate, and combined with a Road-Rated Receiver, you'll have clear, clean sound on almost any road you drive.

The Best Sound Going.
Blondie

By Robert Christgau

ROBERT CHRISTGAU's new album, "Heart of Glass," is a departure for Blondie. Its lead off single, "Heart of Glass," is a departure for Blondie and a departure for most rock groups. The song's success, in fact, may well mean the end of Blondie. The band's previous album, "Parallel Lines," was a critical and commercial success. "Heart of Glass," however, has been greeted with mixed reviews. Some critics have praised it as a sophisticated rock song, while others have found it too formulaic. But the success of "Heart of Glass" has forced the band to reexamine their approach to writing and recording music. The band is now exploring new sounds and styles, and fans can expect to hear something different on their next album.

High Noon in Hollywood

For Better or Worse in Hollywood

Clint Eastwood is one of the most iconic figures in Hollywood. He has starred in over 80 films and has won numerous awards for his work. Eastwood's latest project, "High Noon in Hollywood," is a biographical drama about the life of a successful actor. The film is directed by Steven Spielberg and is expected to be released in late 2023.

Waxing in Washington

Buster Keaton once delivered a number of small black cards in July recorded by the United Press. The cards were part of an ongoing promotion for the movie "Steamboat Bill, Jr." They were distributed at radio stations across the country and were used to promote the film. Some of the cards included a short essay on the life of Buster Keaton, while others featured promotional material for the movie. The cards were a popular way for movie studios to market their films during the early 20th century.

DITCH Diggers

The essay is the ditch-digging occu-pation of writing.

When Michael Herr's Sin-cuba (one sequence during the last six months. Caning his first book, Au-middle of the war, in 1969) was pub-ished, many American readers thought that Herr had been around the world on the most dangerous of journeys. But in his new book, The Uncompanied Writers (Part Two), he shows that he has been on the best journey of all, the journey of the writer. This collection of essays and reports from around the world is a powerful testament to the power of the written word.

Herr concludes his book with a reprint of his essay on the city of Jerusalem, which he first wrote in 1969. In this essay, Herr describes the city as a place where people come to find a sense of peace and understanding.

The Unknown Comic
Brown-Bagging It To Success

By Bill Braugstein

Manchester, Maine-He had his first hit song, a song he was looking forward to recording on his new album. "Manhamp's a girl, you know," he said, turning to his assistant. "She's got a nice Mel Brooks, in a way."

Manchester was the Unknown Comic, a comedian who had made a name for himself with his unique brand of humor. He was known for his raw material, which often involved stories about his own life and the lives of his friends. Manchester was known for his quick wit and ability to make people laugh, and his show was a hit wherever he went.

Manchester's stand-up routine was a hit, and he was soon performing in front of packed audiences across the country. He was a natural performer, and his stories were always well-received. He was known for his ability to make people laugh, and his show was a hit wherever he went.

Manchester had never thought of himself as a comedian, but he had always enjoyed telling stories and making people laugh. He had started performing in high school, and his talent had only grown stronger over the years.

Manchester was now a famous comedian, and he was living the life of his dreams. He wasstill growing up, and he was still learning more about himself and the world around him. He was a true artist, and he was always looking for new material to share with his audience.

Manchester's success was not without its challenges, however. He had to work hard to maintain his audience and keep them coming back for more. He had to be innovative and come up with new ideas, or else his show would lose its appeal.

The Tom Waits Cross-Country Marathon Interview
(Over the Finish Line with Francis Coppola)

By Stephen X. Rea

LOS ANGELES, October 28, 1979

Tom Waits in Thunderverland is a great covey cow. That is one man that could have been a cow. He has cow's eyes, a cow's nose, a cow's ears, a cow's tail, a cow's udder, and a cow's milk. Today, Waits is located in the heart of Los Angeles, in a cow-like structure. He is surrounded by cows, farming equipment, and a large herd of cows. Waits is currently working on a new album, titled "Cowtown," which he claims will be his most successful release to date.

Waits is known for his unique sound, characterized by his raspy voice, dark humor, and experimental music. He has been described as a "poet-singer" and is often compared to other musicians like Bob Dylan and Tom Lehrer.

When asked about his new album, Waits replied, "I've been working on it for about two years now. It's been a real challenge, but I'm really happy with the results. I've been trying to create something new and different, but still true to my style. I think people are going to love it." Waits is currently working on the final touches of the album and is expected to release it in early December.

When asked about his future plans, Waits said, "I've been thinking about doing a tour, maybe even going international. But I'm not sure yet. I'm just taking it one day at a time." Waits is scheduled to perform at the Hollywood Bowl on December 31, and is expected to sell out the venue.

Waits is also known for his involvement in film. He has worked with director Francis Coppola on several projects, including the film "One from the Heart." Waits played a character in the film and also provided the voice for the character. Waits has praised Coppola and his work, saying, "Francis is a master filmmaker. I was honored to work with him on "One from the Heart.""

When asked about his next project, Waits said, "I'm not sure yet. I'm still writing and experimenting with my music. I'm going to take some time off to think about what I want to do next." Waits is currently working on a new book of poems, which he plans to release in 2010.

Waits is a prolific artist, and has released over 20 albums throughout his career. His music has been described as "anti-pop," and he is known for his unconventional style. Waits has been praised for his unique voice and his ability to evoke a range of emotions in his music.

When asked about his influence on other artists, Waits said, "I've been influenced by many people, but I try not to think too much about it. I just want to create music that moves me, and I hope it moves other people too." Waits is currently working on a new album, and is scheduled to perform at the Hollywood Bowl on December 31.
