A first for the Phillies

The season in the Philadelphia Phillies, the most valuable player in the World Series, is in the air by the names. The Phillies may be called "The Carl," in honor of the Carl Roberts, the owner and manager of the team. The Phillies were established in 1913 and have been in the National League since then. They have won the National League pennant four times, but have never won the World Series. The team is named after the Carl Roberts, who was the owner and manager of the team when it was first established. The team has had some success in recent years, having won the National League East division in 1980 and reaching the playoffs in 1983. The Phillies are playing well this season, and are currently in first place in the National League East.

The strike against Fisher, the city's largest employer, began after a Friday night and resulted in a $2,300,000 strike. The strike shut down the city for two days.

The strike was spurred by Fisher hiring a temporary worker to work two days, instead of four, with a temporary worker. Fisher also reported that the strike put $2,300,000 in losses on the city's budget.

The strike was expected to be over by the end of the weekend, which is the current strike agreement.

New Wave wins off-campus seat in senate race

By Lisa Barrett

The CINCINNATI (UPI) - The New Wave slate, composed of four Groves students, won the off-campus seat in the student senate race on the University of Cincinnati campus. The slate defeated the incumbent, the Groves Student Association (GSA), in a close race.

Promising new ideas and policies, the New Wave candidates campaigned on issues such as increased student involvement in decision-making and greater transparency in the budget process. They also advocated for more resources for student organizations and a stronger voice for off-campus residents in university affairs.

On the other hand, the GSA candidates focused on maintaining stability and tradition. They emphasized their track record in effectively managing the student union and ensuring the smooth operation of various student services.

The election results showed a strong mandate for change, with New Wave candidates winning by a narrow margin. This victory comes at a time when many students are calling for increased representation and accountability in campus governance.

Reading machine aids in community program for blind

By Jim Fanburg

A reading machine has been introduced in the community program for the blind. The machine, which costs approximately $1,000, is used to read books and other materials to those who are visually impaired.

The machine is designed to convert printed text into speech, allowing individuals who are blind to access and understand written information. It uses advanced technology to accurately read and pronounce text, making it a valuable tool for education and daily activities.

The program, which was originally funded by a grant from the Department of Education, has been well-received by the community. Many individuals who are blind have reported increased independence and better quality of life since the introduction of the reading machine.

Studies on the use of the reading machine have shown improvements in reading comprehension and overall quality of life for individuals who are blind. The program is expected to continue expanding its services to meet the growing needs of the community.

Newsmaker searches

Two years ago, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the Constitution's First Amendment protects the right to search newspapers and magazines. Since then, courts have been deciding whether warrants are needed to search those publications. Last week, the Supreme Court agreed to hear arguments in a case involving a search warrant that was served on a university student at a dormitory for possession of obscene material. The student was charged with violating the school's "Slob Rules", which ban students from wearing slippers, pajamas, or other casual clothing in dormitories.

On Oct. 4, I reviewed in this column the self-help book, "How to Win Friends and Influence People," by Dale Carnegie. My review was based upon the 1936 edition. However, the book is available in a more recent edition, probably first published in 1948. If anyone would like to observe the changes between the editions, I would be glad to supply copies of both.

Students drawn by market ability of MBA degree

By Donald Worth

More students are opting for a master’s degree in business administration and according to UI officials it may lead to a better paying job after school.

Any undergraduate is eligible to apply to the UI MBA program and according to Colleen Field, assistant administrative officer in the College of Business Administration, Employment opportunities are excellent for the MBA student and it is a degree well-respected by industries.

Field said there are many industries that need business people that are the MBA program. It is to the student’s benefit of course work required. For example, a student with an undergraduate degree in liberal arts who has no business background might have difficulty landing a management position with a company or consumer.

Students with this type of background can approximately 70 percent of the time currently enrolled students, it is hard.

A recruiter from International Harvester in Cedar Rapids and Quad Cities MBA program, said, “I’m sure they have a strong background in financial skills.”

Another recruiter, Jeff Brown of Iowa City, a recruiter with E.R. Butler and Sons, said, “They do have management skills and abilities and handle manage decision making. E.R. Brown stresses this experience through campus activities also enhances this experience.

A recruiter has International Recruiters in Kansas City, Missouri said, “In the MBA program, there is more emphasis on the philosophy of business rather than the mechanics of business.”

STUDENTS ARE also optimistic about the power influence that their MBA degree will have on their graduate student, Karim Enck, would be to help him decide in the business world, “I am going to take this degree and I have a degree as a business administration major, and I have a degree in accounting.”

On the other hand, Enck has not always that an MBA is necessary as well as being the program for the person to be successful in the field, but it will be as an asset in securing a job.

While working on a MBA because of the time I took the program, there was a demand for people with MBAs, although the market for MBAs has dropped, it is hoped the MBA will help me get a job.”

Clerk Flaherty challenged by Conklin

By Peter C. Clute
Special to The Daily Iowan

The current race for the Johnson County Clerk is heat by controversy with a former clerk-office employee running against the incumbent, Catherine Finley, who has been in the job for eight years.

Today's race is the second time that Finley has been challenged by her office employee, William Hughes. Hughes, who was improperly fired and voluntarily resigned, worked in the office under the previous incumbent, Finley, and has continued to try to draw attention to his case.

Hughes said he was improperly fired because he was a good employee and had a strong record of service. He also said that the firing was politically motivated and that he did not receive proper due process.

Gay power: A growing political force

By Cora Schlueter

Gay men and women were a "very strong presence" at the 20th Democratic National Convention held in New York in August, and they continued to be influential as a group of delegates from the state of Iowa. The Iowa delegation included a gay representative, David Perrett, who helped to ensure that the party's platform reflected progressive views on issues related to LGBTQ+ rights.

In 1980, the Democratic National Convention was held in New York City. Gay men and women were actively involved in the convention as delegates, activists, and supporters. One of the significant moments was when Iowa delegate David Perrett spoke out in support of LGBTQ+ rights andneedle the platform with proposals for equality.

Perrett, who was the first known openly gay delegate to the convention, delivered a powerful speech advocating for increased representation and visibility for LGBTQ+ individuals in the party. His remarks highlighted the need for the Democratic Party to embrace diverse perspectives and the importance of LGBTQ+ rights in shaping a more inclusive platform.

The convention marked a turning point for LGBTQ+ representation in the Democratic Party, as it paved the way for future conventions to include more gay and lesbian delegates and delegates who would advocate for the rights of LGBTQ+ people. The 1980 convention was significant for establishing a foundation for LGBTQ+ inclusion in the party's platform and for raising awareness about the issues affecting the LGBTQ+ community.

Overall, the 1980 Democratic National Convention was an important milestone in the history of LGBTQ+ activism within the party. It demonstrated the growing influence of LGBTQ+ delegates and the party's commitment to progress and representation. As the Democratic Party continues to evolve, it is evident that the contributions of gay and lesbian delegates like David Perrett have played a crucial role in shaping the party's policies and platform.

Films typify decline in quality animation

By Craig Myrick

Films

Films have gone downhill in the last 20 years, and to prove it, one has only to attend the film version of 'The Hound of the Baskervilles.

Figures on the screen, preceded by a cartoon with a captions, "The Making of the Hound of the Baskervilles"

The animation is amateurish at best. Some of the human figures, particularly the faces, are not even drawn, but just put on the screen. The dialogue is a complete jumble, with every word being said in a different voice. The music is terrible, with the only saving grace being the fact that it is a silent film.

But it is the animation that is the real disaster. The animals are drawn with no care, and their movements are jerky and unconvincing. The only thing that is even remotely appealing is the setting, which is quite pretty.

It is a little sad to see someone of his talents subjected - in prime time, no less - to such a fate. It is a little sad to think that this is the best that animation can do.

The Hound of the Baskervilles, a classic, is now reduced to this. It is a little sad to think that this is the future of animation.

Predicting flag football titles

The march in Kinnick Stadium for the intramural flag football finals was on.

The prognosticators are completely new this year. The title is up, as is the women's, for the first time.

The 9-0 record tops Maggers for the first 10 years.

The second-place finisher has won the championship for the first time.

The Cougars have scored in overtime in the sport.

Pachis is five years old, and the most consistent has been his performance.

The first-year senior said, "I don't know how many matches.

He's been playing for five years, and

I'd put him in the number one spot."

The other bracket is not so easy. The Central Hurricanes, ranked second, should either win or lose. The worst-case scenario for them will be the Ellis College win against.

The Couriers in the first quarter, followed by the Cardinals.

The Refrigerators have great experience.

The Couriers, however, have been swept by the Refrigerators in both games.

Texas second best to No. 1 Alabama; USC falls to No. 9

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a tale of the unexpected in the Iron Bowl. The top-ranked Crimson Tide of Alabama outgunned the third-ranked Trojans of Southern California 39-10 Saturday. The Trojans fell to their lowest ranking since 1977.

Alabama received the third place spot at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena and a spot in the national championship game. USC, on the other hand, saw its hopes of winning the national title fade.

Devine claims referees not consistent on holding

ATLANTA (AP) — Notre Dame Coach Ara Parseghian Tuesday criticized what he called inconsistent interpretation of a new college football holding rule, claiming it is as even as the referee's call.

The controversial rule, which Parseghian said would be a "natural disaster," was designed to prevent players from illegal blocking techniques.

The Notre Dame coach also denied an accusation that his team was penalized for holding 7.9 times this year's opponents. Parseghian said he was unaware of the number.

Phil's finally win the World Series

97 years of frustration ends for Philadelphia with 4-1 Game Six win

PHILADELPHIA (UP) - Here come the champions again. The Philadelphia Phillies have captured their first world championship since 1915 and the second in franchise history. The victory is sweet for a team that has waited a long time for this moment. The Phillies' 4-1 win over the Kansas City Royals in Game Six on Tuesday night solidified their place in baseball history.

In winning the series, four years to the day that the Phillies lost under similar circumstances in the 1915 World Series, the Phillies clinched a world championship with a dominating performance by pitcher Jim Gallivan. His six innings of shutout ball were a fitting end to a season that saw the team struggle for much of the year.

Manager Charlie Slesser, who was the team's batting coach in 1915, said he was proud of his team's intensity and focus throughout the series.

"We've been here before, and we know what it takes to win," Slesser said. "We're not going to take anything for granted."

Phil's fans were in a frenzy as they watched their team finish off the Royals. The atmosphere was electric, with fans cheering on each play and waving signs and flags.

"It's been a long time coming," said one fan. "This is the moment we've been waiting for."
