Snag delays release of hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan spent last hour as a private citizen Monday night with his family and close friends at his Rancho del Cielo in Santa Barbara, Calif.

The new president, who had spent much of the day in Washington preparing for his inauguration, spent the evening at his desert retreat with his wife, Nancy; his three children, their twin sister and her husband and two grandchildren.

Reagan spent a quiet afternoon at Rancho playing tennis on his favorite hard court or riding his bicycle around the property. He also read a little and talked with family members.

Reagan will take the oath of office as president of the United States of America Tuesday at 12:01 p.m. He will be the 40th president.

There are three criteria used by psychologists recognizing this syndrome: first, the event must be traumatic or stressful. Most often, the trauma is physical, but psychological trauma is recognized, too. Second, the event must take place outside the control of the individual. Third, the stressor must last longer than a few days.

Committees approve more Reagan choices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Seven more names were provisionally confirmed as Reagan nominees, Cabinet was Senate confirmation advisory Mon- day, but Labor Secretary-designate Raymond J. Donovan’s Senate dickens, remained un- investigated because of a personal controversy with Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, another refused to return the advisory donation because he felt the President was being too lenient with Reagan. Sen. Bi- nomen, New York, was exonerated from the Senate’s view on government program.

Skeleton identified as another Atlanta youth

ATLANTA (UPI) - The second set of bones removed from a cave that was identified Monday at one of the 10 Atlanta areas where the 1979 murders occurred has been positively identified as走 that same man who was killed in the cave in 1979. The identification of young Terrell leaves 13 known Atlanta murder victims.

Florida is freezing

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Another blast of arctic air crept into Florida Monday, bringing the grapefruit crop and central Florida citrus region to the verge of disaster.

Delays, disputes mar new ramp opening

By Lyke Walker

After two months of delay, Iowa City's newest downtown parking ramp finally opened Monday at noon.

The most recent scheduled opening of the $1.3 million ramp was last Monday morning, but the installation of gates and time open- ing procedures delayed the ramp's opening for the third and fourth time Monday.

"Today was just like the last three," said Iowa City Councilor Nels Bolt about the ramp's opening.

In return, Warren said the councilors had discussed ways to protect the ramp during the construction period, and that the line was the only line the councilors had ever had to use.

Fighting crime in Iowa

In response to an uproar in the Iowa crime rate during the past year, Iowa legislators are planning to draft an Omnibus Crime Bill to strengthen law enforcement efforts.

A variety of reforms are supported by the proponents of the bill. Although the arguments put forth by the legislators somewhat represent a good-faith effort to reduce crime, several of the proposals are unworkable because they concern individual rights. As it appears, for instance, that there will be an attempt to expand the rights of citizens to see deadly forms of private devices and their property. This idea is especially appealing in a state in which many people are isolated in rural areas and have limited means of protection. The most obvious response to the crime rate is to advocate that the rights of self-protection be increased.

An expansion of self-defense rights, however, conflicts with the intent that a person should not take the law into his own hands. Furthermore, it could lead to an increase in misuse of firearms which would be a great harm without providing the needed protection. The proponents of this idea must have clear knowledge of the public protection it is intended to extend.

The desire to enhance the legal status of self-defense is not enough. It seems to be an attempt to improve the moral status of self-defense. It is the common opinion that one should not resort to guns unless he has no other means of defense.

Granted, law officers should not be hampered in their lawful action to the force of being used. But they should be held accountable for their actions and private lawlessness can help the public in this.

Before limiting the ability of the private citizen to sue, legislators should ensure that there are other appropriate means for holding law enforcement agents accountable to the public. It is needed protection. The proponents of this idea must have stronger

The ill-famed banner pole project for the downtown pedestrian mall exclaims on the poles, which resembled the main thrusts of the News, the Pops and the Iowa City Council.

The Iowa City conqueror for the project, Pursuit Construction, still has possession of the poles. Larry Chalup, Iowa City urban development coordinator, has indicated that the Iowa City Council would just as soon forget about the pole idea. But the situation is complicated because a number of parties are involved in the project, including contractors, neignobors and residents. It appears that no one wants to be stuck with the poles.

We have the banner makers ready to make the tarp fly again. But Iowa City residents desire their $10,940 worth. If the Iowa City Council ends the dispute over the banner pole idea, they should be abandoned. Perhaps they could just be laid on the ground and people could stop over them. The poles would be easier to see and less dangerous. And they would make great compost.

Larry Chalup, Iowa City urban development coordinator, has indicated that the Iowa City Council would just as soon forget about the pole idea. But the situation is complicated because a number of parties are involved in the project, including contractors, neignobors and residents. It appears that no one wants to be stuck with the poles.

We have the banner makers ready to make the tarp fly again. But Iowa City residents desire their $10,940 worth. If the Iowa City Council ends the dispute over the banner pole idea, they should be abandoned. Perhaps they could just be laid on the ground and people could stop over them. The poles would be easier to see and less dangerous. And they would make great compost.

This super winter weather: here today, gone tomorrow

By Thomas Brine

Iowa City residents enjoyed a second day of unusually warm weather Monday, as the temperature rose to 40 degrees F. Anymore and up to 45 degrees F. is expected for today.

"It feels like spring and we can't beat that," said John Jones, a 11-year-old student heading to Cleldon Road Elementary School.

"I love it," said 12-year-old Dan Rathman. "It's a good day. I wish it would last a year or two. I want to have enough lights for ice I don't want to be freezing outside," he said.

Janane Rascher, other students and senior citizens sitting outside Tuesday said the warm weather was a "gift." Employees from the Iowa City and Johnson County road departments agreed.

"WE'RE ACCOMPLISHING things after that we would be unable to do if we had snow, like brush cutting," said Johnstone County Engineer J.J. Ladd, County Road Department manager. Snow has been given March and April as the "prime time" for road crews to do maintenance work.

The county's second-story Road Department has experienced "frozen" roads since last week, said Ladd. "It is not just direct and direct claim, due to cold weather. Cold is the cold. It is December and below 10," he said.

The community's secondary Road Department has experienced "frozen" roads since last week, said Ladd. "It is not just direct and direct claim, due to cold weather. Cold is the cold. It is December and below 10," he said.

The inauguration— KRNA style

By C. Wyckoff

It's no secret that KRNA was a hit here for years—both for the public, for the station's listeners, and for the entertainment industry. The station's early days were marked by a diverse mix of music and talk shows, and its reputation as a leader in the local radio market continues today.

The station's influence on the entertainment industry was such that it was featured in a movie called "The Elephant Man." The film was a critical and commercial success, and its stars, including John Hurt and Anthony Hopkins, were celebrated for their performances.

The station's impact on music was also significant. It was featured prominently in the movie "The Natural," which was based on a true story of a baseball player who overcame great odds to succeed.

Overall, KRNA has been a valuable asset to the local community, and its legacy will continue to be felt for years to come.
Superintendent David Cronin said he expected some members of the group appeared to be unemployed. Hotel officials moved some of the luggage that had been left to-date out of the way.

In a joint venture of Old Illinois, said it is not normal for his company to have been paid since October. Cronin's company has not been paid since October.

Late Monday night, Cronin said the program's benefits to the student should be considered before any budget cutting.

When asked Monday about the drop or add a class, according to information provided, a committee decided to reduce the size of the final meeting.

Iowa City Community School Board approved recommended budget cuts next month. School Superintendent David Cronin said Monday night.

Further, the school board members and concerned parents discussed the financial impacts of the proposed budget cuts on the school district.

Preparations

Military sources said several members of the group are being prepared to be medical personnel and were expected.

The official service name was not revealed.

"I think all of the major dangers for the hostages will be that their lives will be more difficult," another official said.

In essence, there are no more "minor" things among POW's as "a 6,000 budget cut," according to information provided, a committee decided to reduce the size of the final meeting.

Hostages will govern the negotiations of the former king, who is married to a woman who was ‘mutually appropriate’ or ‘could be fixed’. U.S. officials blamed the failure of the talks on the Iranian government’s ‘unreasonable’ demands and the U.S. government’s inability to reach an agreement. Carter signed the executive agreements, but these documents remained secret. Without them, the negotiations would have collapsed.

A White House spokesman denied National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski’s comments about Nebraska. However, it’s clear no one expected the president to come out. The House was under pressure to return to the floor for the vote on the budget resolution. The fact that it won’t happen will not prevent the president from speaking.

'Same transaction in history'

If the U.S. government, which will transfer ‘all’ in billions to Ledig in 1982, is to be the largest such transfers, it may be the case that Ledig’s shares will be held in a bank for settlement. The shares will then be held in a bank, and the bank will sell them to the Fed. The Fed, in turn, will sell them to the banks in that country. The banks will then sell them to the Fed. The Fed will then sell them to the government. The government will then sell them to the banks.

'Daredevil, ADd ti()staSJEtS~L- of ( Nabavi’s defmltiOll'.

were received a written order to understand the papers. The Iranians were to receive the Fed's order, then deliver the gold to the Fed. The Fed would then deliver the gold to the banks. The banks would then deliver the gold to the government. The government would then deliver the gold to the banks. The banks would then deliver the gold to the Fed. The Fed would then deliver the gold to the government. The government would then deliver the gold to the banks.

It's cautious to say that the complex task of ‘substantial negotiations’ will be worked through the executive agreements. The agreement between the United States and Iran will be the first to be worked through the executive agreements. The agreement will be the first to be worked through the executive agreements. The agreement will be the first to be worked through the executive agreements. The agreement will be the first to be worked through the executive agreements.

AIAW

If society was ready to increase women's athletics, creating large colleges was the last thing needed. The AIAW needed new women's colleges if women's athletics were to continue.

Preston Downs

The AIAW was already out of control if it was to merge with NCAA rights to broadcast collegiate basketball. An additional contract to allow national sponsorship with NBC and the AIAW was the next logical step. If the AIAW was to be a major college sport, it would need new women's colleges if it were to thrive. Downs does not think women's college sports will rise to new levels under the AIAW, if women's college sports are to be as popular as men's colleges are. The AIAW is the only logical solution to the problem. If women's sports are to continue, the AIAW must be reformed.
