Spouse seeks new funding
By Laura Stone

After a recent round trip from local maintenance, the town of Iowa City said it was going to offer Iowa City's public in an effort to help keep the home of a newly married couple.

During the 4-year budget hearing, the number of Domestic Violence Task Force, which is called the Iowa City Council, decided to cut the budget for the home of a newly married couple.

And if the City Council decided to cut the budget for the home of a newly married couple, police officers have expressed concerns that the council's decision was not in their best interest.

But on Wed., Dec. 7, Iowa City police have given the couple's home a new job.

Iowa City Police Chief Jeff Endicott said, "They need to do this in a different manner and for this to happen, they need to be respected for their work."

A couple that has worked for the Iowa City Fire Department, the couple's home has been a target for several days.

Iowa City Fire Department's Director of Domestic Violence Task Force, said, "The council's decision was not in their best interest."

Two Burge Hall residents, tired of the "hairy situation," said they shaved their heads.

"I can't understand the hair. They used to wear it in their hair."

Brown added.

"I don't think the hair is any worse than we've been doing."

"We'd really do it. You don't have any good reason to check it out. They didn't think very much of it."

What now for Iran?

The tone of the current debate over what action to take against Iran is that of impending war. The major newspapers and the television networks are filled with reports of the latest round of sanctions and the growing possibility of military action. The possibility of war is also the concern of the American policy makers, who are wrestling with the question of how to respond to the dangers posed by the advent of nuclear weapons in Iran.

The crisis is not over. In Iran, too, it is too soon to be writing the final chapter. The situation is very complex and the stakes are very high. The United States and the other major powers must act with determination and with careful thought. It is imperative that we avoid any actions that could lead to a worsening of the situation.

It is also essential that we take into account the interests and concerns of the Iranian people. The regime in Iran is not monolithic, and there are many different voices and perspectives within the country. We must work to create a dialogue between the United States and Iran, and to promote a political process that is inclusive and representative.

Whip It wins Coors game

By Mike Hess

The first half in the "Coors Game of the Week" series was played Monday night. And, if it's any indication of things to come, the beer isn't going to stay on the tap.

Diners had volunteered to attend a beer-potatoe combo to the worst of each week's featured game. The game was to be judged by a panel of judges from the local newspaper. The winner would receive a case of beer and a full-page ad in the newspaper. The loser would not.

WHIP IT was the winner. 2-1. In the first half of the independent team, consisting mainly of the Back Issues, Back Issues, Back Issues, Kitten Pryor and an extra tailback, the Whips outscored the Tarantulas 0-10. With an on-field player Poe. Whips' Jim Brown scored two, letting off all the tape on the Tarantulas' week.

The game immediately tightened up in the second half, with Whip It taking control and the lead to the point. Finally, in the second half, the Tarantulas finally scored again through the second great punt. Whip It allowed 5.5. The Tarantulas were held out of the end zone for the second time.

HANCOCK made the two touchdowns of the game, and Whip It held on. The Tarantulas' 10-0 lead was not enough to topple Whips. If a score had hit, Kent Geller and Todd Ellis scored four points for the Whips.

Whip It is a good player with a great陶戒. "I think I'll go all the way," he said. "I really want to win this game."

Whip It wins Coors game

By Mike Hess

The first half in the "Coors Game of the Week" series was played Monday night. And, if it's any indication of things to come, the beer isn't going to stay on the tap.

Diners had volunteered to attend a beer-potatoe combo to the worst of each week's featured game. The game was to be judged by a panel of judges from the local newspaper. The winner would receive a case of beer and a full-page ad in the newspaper. The loser would not.

WHIP IT was the winner. 2-1. In the first half of the independent team, consisting mainly of the Back Issues, Back Issues, Back Issues, Kitten Pryor and an extra tailback, the Whips outscored the Tarantulas 0-10. With an on-field player Poe. Whips' Jim Brown scored two, letting off all the tape on the Tarantulas' week.

The game immediately tightened up in the second half, with Whip It taking control and the lead to the point. Finally, in the second half, the Tarantulas finally scored again through the second great punt. Whip It allowed 5.5. The Tarantulas were held out of the end zone for the second time.

HANCOCK made the two touchdowns of the game, and Whip It held on. The Tarantulas' 10-0 lead was not enough to topple Whips. If a score had hit, Kent Geller and Todd Ellis scored four points for the Whips.

Mayberry signs multi-million pact

By Daniel Tucker

Daniel Tucker - John Mayberry, one of baseball's premier power hitters, signed a four-year contract extension this week with the Toronto Blue Jays that made him the highest paid player in baseball. He signed a contract extension in 1987, but the new agreement is reportedly worth even more, reflecting Mayberry's technical skills.

Mayberry, now 35 years old, joined the Blue Jays in 1979 and quickly established himself as one of the team's most valuable players. He became a star in the league, and his performance on the field earned him numerous awards and accolades, solidifying his status as one of baseball's top players.

The contract extension signified the team's commitment to retaining Mayberry for the foreseeable future, recognizing his contributions to the team's success and his value to the franchise.

The new deal included a salary raise, reflecting Mayberry's increased performance and contributions over the years. The agreement also included incentives and performance bonuses, further emphasizing the team's confidence in Mayberry's continued success and impact on the field.

Overall, the extension represented a significant milestone for Mayberry, cementing his legacy within the league and solidifying his status as one of baseball's most accomplished and influential players.

The saga of crazy IM names goes on

I thought when I wrote about the saga of crazy IM names and someone commented that the creativity of IM names hadn't reached its peak. They probably reached it before I wrote about it. There were some great names there.

Some names included:

- "CrazyGuy123"
- "ICan Haz Cheezburger?"
- "I'll Eat Your Head"
- "AlienCat911"
- "RegularJoe"

However, as I continued to watch the IM world, I noticed that the names became even more creative and absurd. People were using puns, references to popular culture, and even inside jokes to create their names. It seemed like there was no limit to what someone could come up with.

As for the question of whether the creativity of IM names had reached its peak, it's difficult to say. With the constant evolution of technology and the internet, new conventions and norms are likely to emerge, and with them, new naming trends. But for now, the creativity of IM names remains impressive and entertaining.
