Support for education

Five Democratic state legislators met with approximately 50 UI students and their constituents to discuss the operation and funding of the university. The UI and other regents institutions face severe budget problems. Robert Bur and a group of conservative Republicans have their way. They have proposed a 43% reduction in the regents' recommendations for UIF budget for 1981-82.

Conservative Republicans want to out an additional $150 million. Conservative legislators have been criticized for what many see as less than enthusiastic support for increased state appropriations to the regents' institutions. This concern was voiced at the hearing on the UI budget by a UIF Faculty Senate, which favored that some Democratic feel it's "now" to support increased funding because they know that the measure has little chance of success but can benefit their politically.

Alton said that the Democrats with moderate Republicans is effectively oppose conservative attempts to reduce state support in an inadequate budget proposal. The legislature is a good one. is the minority Democratic best chance for work and would demonstrate that they are not using the budget for political advantage.

Equally as important as the issue of support expressed Tuesday is the fact that there was a hearing conducted. Any meeting between legislators and their constituents helps to alleviate tensions and misunderstandings. But the legislators also received a firsthand glimpse of the problems faced by the UI. the most apparent being low morale of faculty and staff - demonstrated by the calls for increased state funding because they know that the measure has little chance of success but can benefit their politically.

The hearing was an important step. But it is only an initial step in the battle over state funding of regents' institutions. The need for increased appropriations is great; low salaries are just the most obvious part of the problem. Democratic legislators alone cannot secure the needed funding. Those who are concerned with the pertinent problems during the UIF budget hearings will do their best to stop reductions in the UIF budget and to press for needed increases.

Pardon not justified

President Reagan has offered two arguments in his attempt to justify his pardon of two former FBI officers convicted of mudrder. Reagan has said ,

"Mr. and Mrs. Bush , admittance that no one had read the transcript of the orders to do something illegal and immoral did not justify actions of the majority. In the second case , however, the state is deprived of their rights .

It is easy to see why this is pernicious doctrine ."

To the editor:

This letter is in response to Mark Hovey's letter concerning the wearing of black armbands in memory of those who have been killed in Vietnam.

I have been a student at the University of Iowa for the past two years. The armbands are a way for me to express my feelings of compassion for those who have been killed in the conflict of Vietnam. The armbands are also a way for me to support the anti-war movement.

I hope that you will continue to publish letters expressing different viewpoints.

OPEC warns against manipulation

By Edward Rady

Washington Post National Service

WASHINGTON — OPEC officials warned Thursday that the cartel's low production was still a threat to the world's oil market.

Overproducing nations were trying to reduce oil prices to stimulate demand for their oil products, said Fadel Al-Ahmad, a senior official of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

"It is a very serious situation," Al-Ahmad said. "We have to be very careful not to allow this to happen.

The embargo on Iraq's oil exports has pushed down the price of oil, forcing some OPEC nations to cut production in order to maintain their economies.

Eliaun, a senior official of the OPEC, said that the cartel was still trying to keep its market share, but that it was becoming increasingly difficult.

"We are looking at the situation very carefully," Eliaun said. "We are trying to balance production and demand, but we are facing a lot of challenges.

Housing industry bounces back

By Denise G. Rabin

Associated Press National Desk

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government reported Thursday that housing starts, the first measure of actual construction activity, rose 14 percent in March. The monthly average was the highest since Jan.

The Commerce Department reported Thursday that starts, the first measure of actual construction activity, rose 14 percent in March. The monthly average was the highest since January.

Some analysts saw a negative impact from construction activity and a demand for housing that has been strong for the past few months.

"The housing market has been very strong for the past few months," wrote Jim Levey, a senior analyst at the New York-based firm of Levey Research Co. "It seems to be holding up quite well despite some volatility in the economy.

Refinancing activity has been strong, but the number of homes sold has declined in recent months.

"The housing market is in the midst of a recovery, but it is still difficult to predict how long this recovery will last," Levey said.

Secretary of the Treasury James A. Baker III announced Thursday that the government will provide a $1 billion loan to the country's largest mortgage lender, Fannie Mae.

"This loan will help Fannie Mae to continue to provide housing to millions of Americans," Baker said.

The loan is intended to support the nation's housing market and help ensure that affordable housing is available to all American families.

Sen. Jesse Helms (R-N.C.) said he opposes the loan, saying it would be a blank check for Fannie Mae.

"I think it's a mistake," Helms said. "This loan is not needed and it will only add to the problems facing the housing market.

"This is a bad deal for taxpayers," Helms said.

The loan would be repaid with interest, and the government would have a share of the profits from the sale of the mortgage.

The loan is part of a broader program to provide housing for low-income families.

Performance helps to save the whales

A performance of George Crumb's haunting "Vox Balaenae" will highlight a "Save the Whales" benefit performance sponsored by Free Environment.

The event also features speakers and art work from the International Fund for Animal Welfare and a showing of a film entitled "The Whale." "You Balaenae!" ("This Voice of the Whales") is a composition of music written in 1967.

Crumb is an American composer best known for his love of nature, music of ancient cultures, noise and assemblage. His music employs the old whale songs, magga, magga, the word.

Humor, compassion in Birnstein’s novels

By Kenneth Harper

Am Birnstein’s novels are indeed with the authority of experience: campus literary life, interchangeable names, the Army, and the anti-war movement, or upper Manhattan. Renee writing her own "Toto" quality books at all times surprising, always controversial.

Her most recent book, American Children (1968), tells the story of Laura, one of the students at a New York college in the 1960s. The book is a memoir, and the author, who is a former student of Birnstein’s, tells the story of her own childhood, and how she became aware of the problems facing American children.

Birnstein’s first novel, The Siren (1965), tells the story of a young woman who falls in love with a boy who is a member of the Black Panthers. The story is about the young woman’s struggle to escape the life of the Black Panthers, and the difficulties she faces in doing so.

The book is a powerful and moving story, and it is a testament to the power of literature to change the world. It is a story of love, and of the struggle for justice. It is a story of the power of the human spirit to overcome adversity, and to find a way to live in a world that is often cruel and unjust.

Iowa loses gym recruits

Iowa's women's basketball team has struggled in recent years, and the losses of several key players have only added to the team's difficulties. The Hawkeyes have lost several players to transfer or injury, including top freshman Ashley Joens, who had a strong showing in her first year. The team's struggles are evident in its current record of 5-13, and there are concerns about the team's ability to compete in the Big Ten Conference.

The objective of the steeplechase is to try to hurdle the barriers. "If you're stepping on something, it's slowing you down. There is no flexibility for the water barrier, and that's what makes this barrier different from the other hurdles," Wheeler said. "The idea is to put your foot out. Many people say you'll get wet."

But Sametz said: "It's really technical. You can't take any profit in a water jump without breaking stride. You have to keep your rhythm in the late stages of the race." Sametz would like to place in the Big Ten this year. He realizes he hasn't run in sprinting events.

"People who come out are realizing they're as good as you're going to get," Sametz recalled. "It's a lot of it is realizing you're as good as you're going to get."

He became interested in golf at an early age and quit the golf team. "I was 15," Elders said.

"I was lucky enough to have a golf club that I could practice on. My dad had one, and I started playing when I was young. It was fun, and I enjoyed it."

As for his early success, Elders said, "I think it was just a natural progression. I was always good at sports, and I guess golf was just another one of them." He also credited his family for their support.

"My parents were always there for me, whether it was practicing or competing. They always encouraged me to keep going, and I appreciate that."

Elders went on to attend Ohio State University and eventually turned professional, playing in numerous tournaments around the world. His career highlights include winning the 1989 Masters Tournament and the 1991 British Open.

"It's been a dream come true," Elders said. "I've always wanted to be a professional golfer, and to be able to do it and win major championships has been a great experience."

Despite his success, Elders remained humble and grounded.

"I never lost sight of where I came from, and I always tried to give back to the community. I'm lucky to have had such a great opportunity, and I'll always try to give back in some way."
