ATLANTA - The decomposed body of a missing black youth was found in the South River of southeastern Dekalb County and police rushed to the scene to begin investigating the apparent 24th slaying of a young black in 20 months.

The youth was identified as Joseph Bell. 15. who was found 11/2 miles from where the body of another black youth was found six weeks ago.

Bell was last seen alive at a neighborhood restaurant the night of March 2 but was not added to the list of missing children until March 13 because he had a history of running away from home.

DeKalb County Public Safety Director Dick Hand said an unidentified couple trying out a new motorbike on a nearby path spotted the body on the river bank about 1:30 EST Sunday afternoon. He said the area was very inaccessible and "probably in all likelihood, we'll find very little"

HAND SAID Sunday night that a team of pathologists used dental Xrays to identify the body, which he described as being in "poor" condi-

Hand said an autopsy would be performed Monday to determine the cause of death. He said there were no serious wounds to indicate how Bell died. If the autopsy reveals that Bell's death was a homicide, he would-become the 24th black youth to one of the city's 25 missing and mur-

Dick Gregory:

Gregory said that a Secret Service agent actually shot Reagan during the confusion after John W. Hinckley Jr. allegedly opened fire on the president outside a Washington hotel on March 30.

The White House's official description of the assassination attempt on Reagan is riddled with discrepancies, he said. The limousine and Secret Service agents were not properly placed to shield the president; seven bullets were fired from a gun that holds six rounds; it was impossible for a bullet to enter Reagan's chest at the angle from the direction Hinckley was standing; and the bullets which should explode on impact never did,

Tiffin man charged with wife's murder

By Val Roskens

A 32-year-old Tiffin, Iowa, man was charged with first-degree murder Friday for the shooting death of his estranged wife, after leading deputies to the grave site late Thursday.

Robert Wayne Vesely "admitted that he willfully, deliberately, and with premeditation killed his estranged wife, Laura Dianne Vesely, by shooting her" on April 15, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The body of Laura Vesely, 31, was 'recovered early Friday morning in a shallow grave in northern Johnson County," according to the Johnson County Sheriff's Department.

On Thursday Robert Vesely voluntarily led deputies to the gravesite where he had hidden the body, court records state.

LAURA VESELY'S school-age daughter, who lived with her, is currently being cared for by her grandparents, said Ron Larson, Johnson County Social Services administrator.

He said there will be increased planning in the future to decide permanent plans for the child. Larson said for the present "she is safe with her grandparents."

The child is receiving "family support" from her grandparents and an aunt, Larson said.

Laura Vesely was described by one neighbor as "friendly and easy-going." Brent Clark, a Clear Creek Moblie Home Court resident said, "When my wife and I moved up from the state of Texas and did not know anyone or have a TV, Laura lent me a TV. I was shocked at her death.

'I knew Laura for about nine months. Her and her husband had problems, but I would never have dreamt he would do that," he said.

ASSOCIATE DISTRICT Court Judge Joseph Thornton set bail for Vesely at $50,000 and a preliminary hearing is scheduled for April 24. Vesely is currently being held at the Johsnon County Jail.

In June 1978, Vesely was convicted of involuntary manslaughter, but received a suspended sentence and was placed on probation, court records state.

The fatality occurred on Feb. 3, 1978, on U.S. Highway 6 in Johnson County. Vesely was charged with operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol. The OMVUI charge was dismissed because Vesely pled guilty to failure to have control and involuntary manslaughter, according to court

Clash over cameras in courtroom

By David Lewis

Freedom of the press and the right to a fair trial can come into conflict when but this does not mean cameras should be banned from judicial proceedings, the keynote speaker at Friday's "Pictures, Sound and Justice" conference

During 1980, as an experiment. Iowa's courtrooms were open to cameras and microphones. Opponents of such news coverage have argued that the right to a fair trial has been sold out to the principle of press freedom. Now legislators will have to look at these arguments and decide whether cameras should be allowed to remain in the courtroom.

Carl Cohen, keynote speaker at the conference and professor at the University of Michigan's Residential College, said freedom of the press and the Sixth Amendment can disagree when cameras are allowed in the courtroom. He said the Sixth Amendment - the right to a fair trial - must take precedent over the freedom of the press, but this does not mean news coverage should be banned.

With a bang of her gavel Friday, Mary Louise Petersen brought to an end her eight-year term as president of the state Board of Regents.

For Petersen, who has been on the board a total of 12 years, Friday was a day for farewells and reflections.

"I want to thank you for 12 years of cooperative discussion of important issues, and for your friendship," she told the regents and officals from the regents' five institutions.

Correction

The Daily Iowan will correct unfair or inaccurate misleading, call the DI at 353-6210. A correction or clarification will be published in this column.

In a story called "Faculty rejects clusters program" (DI, April 16), it was incorrectly reported that Roger Milkman, a UI Zoology professor, said a faculty vote decided that the College of Liberal Arts would no longer offer the program. Actually, the vote by a policy committee and subsequent action by the faculty referred the program back to its developer. It was also reported that Milkman said the project "has no merit whatsoever" and that he did not expect the program to reappear. Actually, Milkman meant that in regard to the Zoology Department only, he saw no career-planning benefits, and that components of the clusters project, in an improved form, may again be presented to the faculty. The DI regrets the errors.

Street-crossing time may be increased

By Lyle Muller

The length of time allotted for pedestrians to cross Burlington Street at Dubuque Street may be increased from 24 seconds to 30 seconds, according to a Friday memorandum from Iowa City Manager Neal Berlin to the Iowa City Council.

Increasing the length of crossing time is one of five short-term solutions to complaints aired by senior citizens, who said at an April 7 council meeting that they do not have enough time to cross Burlington Street.

Many of the senior citizens affected live at the nearby Capitol House Apartments, 320 S. Dubuque St., an apartment building for elderly and handicapped residents.

Other short-term solutions include reducing the time required for the 'walk' light to reappear, prohibiting right turns on a red light, increasing efforts to crack down on speeders and motorists who intimidate pedestrians, and providing safety flags for senior citizens while they cross the street, Berlin said.

would receive a "walk" light for 13 seconds, a flashing "don't walk" light for another 14 seconds, and three seconds while the amber traffic light slows traffic on Dubuque Street. Currently, the "walk" light is only on for seven seconds, Berlin said. In addition, "most pedestrians do not understand the meaning or intent of the flashing 'don't walk'," he said. "If a pedestrian is in the crosswalk director of Social Services for the Elderly, said Sunday the short term proposals are "basically what we were asking for." Awareness of problems facing elderly pedestrians would make Burlington Street safer to walk across,

The Iowa City Traffic Engineering Division and the UI College of Engineering have been studying city streets since earlier this year in an effort to update the city's street signal system, Berlin said.

Successful Hispanic Americans must not be content to sit back and enjoy their good fortune, the national president of the League of United Latin American Citizens said Friday.

Ruben Bonilla, who spoke at a day-long seminar at the UI Law School, described the 'deplorable statistics' that surround Hispanic Americans and criticized President Ronald Reagan's economic proposals, especially his decision to discontinue the bilingual education

"The people of the United States can vote a man out of office because of the bad economic conditions and high unemployment, yet Hispanics suffer from the highest dropout rate and the highest rate of unemployment - and we are told to tolerate it," Bonilla said.

Reagan's budget cuts will make life even tougher for Hispanic Americans, Bonilla said, "Hispanics are going to find it difficult to make other Americans realize our frustra-

"IT IS WRONG to believe that the economic malaise has been brought about by social programs," Bonilla said. "They have touched every economic program which enriches lives" he said, while leaving other, less useful programs intact

Bonilla said the government, for example, gives $63 million in subsidies to the tobbacco industry, but the industry does not call it welfare or a subsidy. Instead, the funds are to regulate the industry.

"I guess a cynic could say the government will deny nutrition, but help promote cancer,"

The administration ignores the General Accounting Office reports on vast amounts of waste in other programs, such as the military, while "making domestic programs the whipping-boy," Bonilla said.

Bonilla lashed out at Reagan's plan to scrap the bilingual education program. "This issue is tearing America apart and the people suffering the most are American Hispanics.'

OPPONENTS OF bilingual education say it will promote separate colonies of people, instead of forcing children to learn English. "English emersion is what has been shoved down our children's throats for the last 100 vears and it hasn't worked. That's why we have the highest drop-out rate and highest unemployment rate," Bonilla said.

Bonilla disagreed with Reagan's plan to stop the flow of illegal immigrants from Mexico to the United States. Reagan supports a temporary guest policy which will allow Mexicans to work in this country.

"Reagan's suggestion is shortsighted and naive if he thinks that will slow or stop the flow of illegal aliens into the U.S.

The solution is not stricter laws creating fines against employers who hire illegal aliens, Bonilla said, "If employers know that they will be fined for hiring an illegal alien, and they can hire a white man which do you think he will hire? If you don't look American and speak American, he won't hire you.'

BONILLA SAID the answer is to enforce existing laws, such as Occupational Safety and Health Administration laws, minimum wage laws and worker compensation laws. "This would be a deterrent to hiring illegal aliens, because employers wouldn't want to extend these rights to an illegal immigrant," Bonilla

Another solution to the problem is to set up a long-term agreement with Mexico, such as giving incentives to building industries in the northern states of Mexico. This would provide jobs for Mexicans so they wouldn't have to cross the border for work

"People will risk their lives to come to this country, someone will get killed. What we need is long-term economic agreements with Mexico," Bonilla said.

At Friday's conference, lawyers agreed that electronic media coverage is appropriate and not likely to create problems. But they disagreed as to when cameras should not be allowed in the courtroom.

Rape and juvenile offenses, for example, should be excluded from camera coverage, some panelists said.

Lane said juveniles shouldn't be exposed because they "need a healing process" and because the family needs to be preserved. Patricia Hirl, attorney for the Minnesota Newspaper Association, said rape trials are

"where the line can be drawn because that's where it has been drawn.' HIRL ADDED that cameras should be allowed in the courtroom because it can be seen as an "educational tool." She said that when living in a democracy, people "care about what the government does to you," and that people are not necessarily "looking at Mike Giudicessi, former counsel for the Des Moines Register and Tribune, said: "A witness does not have the right to set the procedures. When a witness says he won't talk with a camera on him, it's no different than if he would say that he wouldn't talk with people out there.'

Cal Olson, editor of the Sioux City Journal and media coordinator in the third judicial district, said expanded media coverage has "forced us to cooperate and work well" with the court system. But he said he sees some problems in making a decision to keep expan-

"THE ONLY time anyone looked at the camera was when the defense attorney continually pointed it out," Olson said. This "intrusive nature" can be used - and has been used, Olson said — as a basis for appeal.

Another problem, Olson said, is that the 'media has not met expectations. As everyone was saying, the pluses of expanded coverage is education, but we still have to learn the process of the courts. Lawyers say that scabby, abrasive, sensational coverage is not education."

Nancy Hauserman, professor in the UI College of Business Administration and moderator for the journalist's panel, said, "Although across the state it is not all sensational trials and there is a fair amount of civil cases, it still seems like a big business." She asked the journalists if during a "big news day" they would choose to show the public a murder trial or a civil case.

Tim Renshaw, assistant director at KGLO-AM in Mason City, said: "It depends on the circumstances. If the visuals are better for the murder then I would show the murder.' Olson said, "I like to think that I could give both a shot." He said he would choose the trial in which he had a reporter and phtographer present instead of choosing the one that came over the wire.

Renshaw added, "It is true media has to make a buck, but we divorce ourselves from what's going to make money. We don't care if we loose advertising or not we jut give what's good, important news."

"THE CONDUCT of a court is under the control of the judge. The judge should decide if TV coverage would be injurious to the defendant," Cohen said.

Opponents of TV courtroom coverage carry the burden of proving that it interferes with justice, Cohen said. He added that the main thrust of the opponents' argument hangs on two general points: That TV cameras are an invasion of privacy and that they deprive a defendent of the right to a fair

"The right to privacy is not in the Constitution, but luckily it is congealed in the law," he said. But Cohen questioned whose privacy would be invaded by cameras - the defendant's, the judge's, the jury's or the lawyers'. In some cases, for example, it would be necessary to withhold the identity of a witness for fear of revenge or reprisal.

"THESE ARE arguments against publicizing the jury or certain witnesses - not the Opponents believe the fairness of a trial is upset by witnesses being aware they are under scrutiny of a TV audience. "The evil of TV trials lies not in the noise of cameras but in the trial participants awareness they are being publicized, and this may interfere with their evidence," Cohen said, quoting the objection of one judge.

He said opponents have developed three important facets to their argument: First, the "emotional stress" of the cameras may confuse both jurors and witnesses. Second, some witnesses may risk perjury rather than reveal the truth - particularly if it may cause public outrage. Third, witnesses may forget crucial points in their testimony.

President Reagan will soon have an opportunity to make appointments to the Federal Election Commission. The qualifications of those appointed will be an indication of Reagan's commitment to enforcing campaign finance laws and to the independence and strength of the commission.

A recent study by Common Cause points to a number of problems faced by the FEC. Although the commission has had some successes - notably the system for the disclosure of campaign finances and the program for partial public funding of presidential campaigns - congressional meddling in the management structure and partisan appointments have limited its power.

A congressional statute calls for the FEC to be chaired by a different commissioner each year, which dilutes the strength of the office. In addition, responsibility for staff leadership is blurred between the staff director and the general counsel. As a result, no one is held accountable for getting things done.

The FEC is the only independent federal commission that has this structure. Congress, which was pressured into creating an independent election commission after the Watergate scandal, deliberately implemented these defects into the commission's charter to weaken its power.

In addition, partisan influence on appointments to the FEC has resulted in commissioners being chosen to "act as advocates for their political parties and for congressional incumbents, rather than by the criteria of experience, integrity, impartiality and good judgment as outlined in the statute," the Common Cause study

The study suggests that the term for chairing the FEC be extended to four years, and that a staff director, with responsibility for daily operations, be appointed by the chair. Furthermore, commissioners should be appointed on the basis of statute criteria -

Reagan should keep this in mind when he makes appointments. He should also consider other improvements to provide the FEC with the independence and effectiveness needed to control campaign abuses. Regulations to ensure fair elections should not be a partisan issue.

Winners and losers

Janet Cooke was forced to resign from The Washington Post Wednesday and to surrender the Pulitzer Prize for feature writing she had received just a few days earlier. Her story about an eightyear-old heroin addict, "Jimmy's World," was a fabrication.

The news was shocking because The Washington Post is one of the nation's most respected papers. But the manner in which the fabrication was revealed was also disappointing.

Immediately after the story's publication Sept. 28, District of Columbia officials announced that they were skeptical of Cooke's work. Mayor Marion Barry organized a search for Jimmy. The Post refused to release information to be used in the police search: Cooke said that her life would be in danger if her source were revealed.

Not until workers at The Toledo Blade, where Cooke worked before coming to the Post, found discrepancies in Cooke's biographical sketch in the Associated Press' Pulitzer story and what they knew about her did the pressure become too much to bear. Cooke admitted the boax and resigned.

This unfortunate incident is the rare exception to the overwhelming accuracy of newspaper stories. Ensuring accuracy is a difficult task when the burden on a daily newspaper - where time is of the essence - is considered. Those who oppose the press' need to keep its sources confidential will probably use this episode to fuel their arguments. But the incident does not demonstrate that the press' right to cite the confidentiality of sources is misplaced. Rather, it shows that the right of a free press must be checked by appropriate internal safeguards.

The Post has blemished not only its own reputation but that of the journalistic profession. It is not enough to say that a mistake was made. Newspapers must continually re-examine their internal policies and practices to ensure this does not happen again. Credibility is too difficult to earn and too easy to lose. As the Post said in its apology, "One of these episodes is one too many." August B. Comme Cosse

Future choices

The news that Janet Cooke fabricated the story that won the Pulitzer Prize for feature writing raised some troubling questions about the procedure for choosing the recipients of those prestigious awards.

Stories are placed in several categories and are then nominated for a prize by a jury in each category. The jury's choice is not final, however; a 16-member Pulitzer Board selects the Cooke's story, "Jimmy's World," was placed in the local news category. The local news jury nominated the piece, but not for first prize. The Pulitzer Board then moved it into the feature writing category and awarded Cooke the prize. Members of the feature writing jury never judged the story. They were understandably upset when they read that it had been selected and became outraged when the fabrication was discovered. Jurors and members of the press have made charges of unfairness and "playing politics."

These charges, whether true or not, tarnish the image of the awards. Just as the press should re-examine its internal procedures and practices, so should the Pulitzer Board.

One woman's struggle against sexual harassment on the job

By Robin J. Stein

WASHINGTON - Billie Garde is a divorcee and former school teacher who went to work for the U.S. Census Bureau in Oklahoma

What happened next resulted in a Washington investigation into a bizarre story involving charges of sexual harassment and of office parties where census workers drank liquor and smoked marijuana

Garde alleges that her boss harassed her because she refused to have sex with local politicians and to hire female census employees as sexual partners for his political cronies. She says the decision to publicize her story has mired her in an custody battle over her children, made her the target of death threats and brought her arrest on kidnapping charges.

A FEDERAL investigator found 'substantial likelihood" her charges are true. After an inquest, the Merit Systems Protection Board's special counsel directed the Commerce Department to fully investigate:

"There is a substantial likelihood that (Garde's disclosures) evidence a violation of law ... mismanagement, gross waste of funds and abuse of authority by Mr. John Hudson."

Hudson, whom Garde charged with sexual harassment, says he is innocent of any improper conduct.

In January 1980, Garde quit as a high school teacher to take a job with the Census Bureau in the eastern Oklahoma city of Muskogee. She said that soon after she went to work as assistant director in charge of hiring enumerators, she knew there was something "weird" about Hudson, her ter's re-election campaign. "He called me four times and told me I had to be prepared to sleep with a union official when I got back," Garde said. "(The official) was also county party chairman and the Carter-Mondale campaign just had to have his support. ... He said, 'That's how we're going to do it."

The union official, Garde said, told her "that's the way John operates" but wasn't interested in Hudson's offer.

Hudson said Garde's allegations are "a downright lie." Hudson, who is now unemployed, said he will produce witnesses to support him. "There was no sexual harassment," he said.

"WHEN YOU have an office with 200 people," Hudson said, "It's rather my that one person who is not very attractive to begin with - she's obese - is the only one that was sexually DOONESBURY whoever I tell them to party with." Garde said she "brushed off" his instructions but soon realized he was

She said that on one occasion last year Hudson tried to convince a 19year-old clerk on Garde's staff to have sex with some of his associates. Garde said Hudson told the woman he would start sexual rumors about her if she did

GARDE SAID that Hudson also encouraged office parties during which staff members drank alcohol and smoked marijuana. "The attitude that was set right from the beginning was free-for-all party time," she said.

She said a pattern of sexual harassment, threats and reprisals continued throughout the spring of 1980. Her efforts to bring the matter to the attention of high-ranking census officials and her congressman, she said, met with little success.

Former Regional Census Director Leo Schilling, whom Garde has charged with "covering up the scandal," declined comment, saying that the matter has been turned over to the Justice Department.

LAST JUNE 26. Garde went to a Muskogee newspaper with her story. Immediately after the story appeared, Garde said, Hudson met with her ex-

"Mr. Hudson had been telling me over a period of three months that he knew my husband wanted custody of the children," she said. "and that if I ever said anything to either a newspaper or a federal investigator that he would see to it that my children would be taken away ... and he threatened my life.

'Within five hours (after the story appeared) my ex-husband, accompanied by Mr. Hudson, went to his lawyer's office," Garde recalled. "And then my ex-husband went to the courthouse and the judge signed the temporary order taking custody of my

Hudson said he met with Larry Garde once at the latter's request. He said Garde "asked me if I would be interested in testifying against (his wife). I told him no; I didn't want to get involved."

HUDSON DID not renew Garde's appointment when it expired in June. She then moved to Washington and went to work for the Veterans Administration, but she returned in August for a courtroom custody battle that she eventually lost. The decision is being appealed to the state Supreme Court.

Last Christmas, while Garde's two daughters were visiting her suburban Maryland home, she initiated proceedings before a Maryland judge and was awarded temporary custody of the girls.

When the children did not return to Oklahoma, her husband came to Maryland, presented his Oklahoma custody order to another Maryland judge and took the girls back with him.

Several weeks later, Garde was arrested in her home on kidnapping charges because she kept the girls beyond the visitation period awarded by the Oklahoma court.

"MY LIFE has become a nightmare," she said. "I can't believe this is happening to me." The kidnapping charges were subsequently dropped, but in what she thinks is further retaliation for her whistle-blowing, $2,000 worth of her furniture was smashed en route from Oklahoma.

Garde's case is being investigated by the Commerce Department, which has 60 days to report its findings. In the course of pursuing her charges and the custody case, Garde says she has gone into debt $20,000 for legal fees. But she has vowed to see the matter through to the end. "I want my girls back," she said.

She said the alleged improprieties of her former boss are not the central issue in her fight. "It's the system that's on trial here, not John Hudson. Garde said that as a high school teacher she taught students to believe in their government and to work to correct injustices. "I've been in a position to defend the system," she said, "and now I want to see it work."

I've been trying to figure out how Janet Cooke, late of The Washington Post, could have perpetrated such an enormous hoax. Cooke's story about an 8-year-old heroin addict won the Pulitzer for feature writing, but Cooke later admitted it was a fabrication. Clifford Irving must be proud.

This was a revelation to me and went a long way toward explaining Cooke's actions. English majors are notorious fibbers. I know this because I happen to be an English major. After years of immersion in books, we tend to lose the subtle distinction between fiction and reality. At parties, we can spellbind people for hours with stories about our childhood in Mississippi until somebody finally realizes that the entire tale has been lifted straight out of Faulkner. We should be treated with care and caution.

BUT THERE is still something disturbing about the way the press and public gobbled up this story. It had all the sensational elements to guarantee a public outcry.

The Watergate scandal and the implications it carried for the role of the press perhaps raised professional and public expectations too high — too much emphasis, maybe, on breaking the "big story" and rattling the windows at city hall. It is not surprising then when an ambitious young reporter like Cooke is tempted to bring such a story into existence.

NEXT COME hours of slow, painful writing and careful revision. The writing process is cruel. I often roll around on the floor, searching for the shining word that will illuminate the oppressive darkness of my meaning. I let out primal screams to get in touch with my feelings. The story, entitled "How Much is That Doggie in the Window?," tells how cute pups are stolen from respectable middle-class homes and sent off in chains to Alaska, where they usually end up in dogsled teams. As I said, shocking.

The Pulitzer judges may find it interesting; it's something to pass the time with while they consider next year's award recipients. If they aren't too busy, I may even tell them about my childhood in Mississippi.

The deadline for applying for the job was Friday. Plastino left the city May 30, 1980, to become Public Works Director in Lakewood, Colorado, a suburb of Denver.

The search for Plastino's replacement has not been easy. In February, Iowa City Manager Neal Berlin said candidates who were interviewed either were not qualified for the job or, if qualified, did not want to move when interest rates and moving costs were as high as they have been the past

The job description for Public Works Director was changed to emphasize candidates' administrative skills as well as engineering background. "It says (the job description) that preference will be given to someone with a civil engineering degree, but it's not a mandatory requirement," Berlin said Friday.

A special panel consisting of Iowa City Human Relations Director Anne Carroll, Marion City Manager Carl Ramey, UI Public Affairs Institute official Tim Shields Iowa City will review the 19 new applications. Berlin said.

The applicants will be listed in order of preference and personal interviews will be conducted with the best candidates. Berlin said. No timetable has been set for submitting a recommendation to the City Council, but Berlin said, "We're not going to drag our feet.'

The lists, established by the Civil Service Commission, rate how well people scored on tests, Keating said. The Iowa City Council must approve the lists first and then an individual can be hired to fill the vacancy, Keating said.

Several Iowa City firefighters are angry because the vacancy has not yet been filled. The delay has created controversy over how long the city has to fill a vacancy.

Keating said that when the Fire Department is at "full strength" there are 36 firefighters and 12 officers. The 48 people are divided into three shifts, he said. At present there are only 35 city firefighters.

As part of the ambitious "Touch the Earth Outdoor Program,' which includes rock climbing, spelunking, winter camping, dogsledding, canoe trips and much, much more, a one-day fall semester trip is scheduled for the scenic Wolfe River, Wis., on the Menominee Indian Reservation during autumn's blaze. A threeday intensive experience is available during spring break by virtue of a unique connection between the UI and Georgia State University. Former UI grads now at GSU - where there is a complete white water program arrange the trip down the wild Chatooga River in South Carolina and the tumultuous Ocoee in Tennessee at a 31/2 times savings over commercial rates.

As a result of his own interests and the success of similar programs of other schools in the region, Warren Slebos, director of Rec Services, started the "Touch the Earth Outdoor Program" three years ago to give anyone with the interest or inclination the chance to participate. .A.'s busing halt unblocked

Court Justice William Rehnquist refused to take immediate action Sunday night to block the dismantling of forced school busing in the Los Angeles area - scheduled to begin Monday

Rehnquist's action, or lack of it, paved the way for more than 7,000 elementary and junior high school students in the Los Angeles Unified School District, the nation's second largest, to return to their neighborhood schools.

But Rehnquist, in a two-paragraph order, said he would take some action if the NAACP in Los Angeles, which filed an appeal to block the dismantling of forced busing, and the school district file formal arguments by Wednesday.

'Much as it would be desirable for me as circuit justice for the 9th Circuit to act immediately upon applicant's request for a stay, I find that I cannot in the proper discharge of my judicial duties act without benefit for a response from the respondents," Rehnquist said in the order.

'Therefore, without either granting or denying applicants' request, I request respondents to file a response to the application for a stay by 5 p.m. PST Wednesday April 22."

By T. Johnson

It's amazing, sometimes, how local boys make good - especially when they do it not by opening a feed store and giving away free hats until everyone in town has checked out the herbicide prices, but in a delicate field like music.

Let there be light

There was a time not long ago when the record business was a closed shop. Ten or 12 companies had the whole system locked up, small labels had been driven out of business and everything was organized

Music

But recording facilities are more accessible now than ever before, and costs are relatively low. Frustrated musicians all over the place are piling into studios to record their big break albums, and they're coming out with competent, sometimes wonderful, products.

DAVE PLAEHN of Cedar Falls is one of those frustrated musicians. He's been playing around Iowa and the Midwest for years, and everyone who's heard him perform loves him. He tried for four years to get record and publishing companies to listen to him. Not a nibble.

In the same kind of grand goose so many other musicians are giving the system these days, Plaehn decided to put out his own album. Thus Pilot Records

Plaehn wrote, produced and performed all the music on Pilot's only release, Smokin. He's been carting sample copies around to newspapers and radio stations. When he's done, he'll know the production and promotion businesses from the bottom up. He'll be no naive young man about to get euchred out of his royalties.

SMOKIN is a wonderful album: hot summer sunshine music, music to feel good by. Sometimes it's smooth, along the lines of Jesse Colin Young's "Again," and sometimes Plaehn's husky vocals sound like Bobby "Blue" Bland's.

There are weaknesses, of course. Some of the rhymes are forced, but that's a symptom of pop music's standardized rhyme schemes. It should also be noted that the production is heavy with the post facto echo that supposedly adds big-room sound.

But the album's strengths far outweigh its weaknesses. The compositions are strong, as are the backup musicians. Rick Oltman is a powerful lead and rhythm guitarist, and his solo on "Already Blue" is, in its way, as disciplined and driving as Dick Wagner's work on Lou Reed's Rock 'n' Roll Animal. Bob Thompson of Johnson County Landmark plays sax; Carroll Godsman (of the Godsman-Schleeter Band) sings. Everyone sounds a lot more professional than one might expect from an album recorded in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

If there's any justice, Plaehn will be famous one day. He deserves it, certainly, more than many relaxing on their residuals and the beach at Malibu.

Concert highlights vocal works

Saturday evening's Center for New Music concert was a salute to singing and to the UI's graduate student composers, three of whom were featured on a program almost entirely devoted to vocal works.

Pieces by two standard 20th century composers opened the concert. Stravinsky's "Two Poems of Balmont" and "Three Japanese Lyrics" (settings of haiku) are small self-contained gems, composed at the same time as the large-scale ballets Petrouchka and The Rite of Spring. Soprano Carol Meyer's French vowels need some attention, but her singing was otherwise its usual excellent self.

Meyer was also featured in the next piece, Luciano Berio's vocalise "O King," based on Martin Luther King's name. Berio plays with an interesting coincidence: When broken into its phonemes and prefaced by the interjectory "O," King's name contains every English vowel. One is reminded of the American composer Kenneth Gaburo's experiments with the breakdown of a text into phonemic fragments, each of which he exploits electronically, except that Berio's piece achieves similar results by ments provide the punctuation usually generated by consonants. The composer has carefully constructed the slow accumulation of instrumental and vocal texture, and Meyer's performance beautifully realized his intentions. William Hibbard conducted the fine chamber ensemble in both the Stravinsky and Berio

The program's only non-vocal piece was "Tiger Ravine," an attractive work for solo clarinet by Heinrich Taube. It comes equipped with program notes that laboriously recount a Taoist story about working within self-imposed limitations, but the piece sets out its musical boundaries so clearly and concisely that the notes are redundant.

The first section is based on unconventional arpeggios; the second turns a series of cool, leisurely turns into a toccata; the third, built on a disjunct yet catchy tune, exploits the contrasting tone colors at the extremes of the clarinet's range. The piece was nicely played by Christopher Hills, a fine performer but for his posture.

CINDY MC TEE'S "King Lear Fragments,"

cessful attempt to reduce Shakespeare's bleakest tragedy to comprehensible (therefore mundane) terms. The restrained storm provided by the percussion is a little too subliminal: Nature in King Lear is neither subtle nor indifferent but as elemental and violent as the old king himself, and ominous rumblings from the orchestra pit do not offer the necessary support to the vocal line. The obbligato bass flute is also insufficient to offset the king's declamations. And placing baritone John van Cura in costume under a murky spotlight is a cheap way to align the audience's sympathy; the piece ought to be able to carry itself without such gimmicks.

For the last work of the evening, Rodney Rogers' "Lucis Creator," we adjourned to the lobby, for whose space this beautiful Vespers hymn was composed. The piece is antiphonal: percussion and brass on the lower level, alto soloist Jocelyn Reiter and lighter instruments in the balcony. Each group had its own distinct sound: lustrous sustained harmonies and delicate wind-chime effects from the upper group, a shining crescendo of sound that filled the entire overhead space from the lower. The hymn closed with a lovely effect: alto and organ heard from deep inside the hall, like celestial harmonies apprehended from a great distance.

Ted then goes on to date a set of triplets, one at a time, on alternating weekends. (He may not be quite moral, but he is, in his own way, conscientious.) This arrangement dissolves when he hears of another old girlfriend's hospitalization for anorexia nervosa. He returns home, restores her appetite and marries her, after which they honeymoon in Africa.

DeVries works in a quotation of Pascal's: The loss of God leads to erotomania, megalomania or both. Peachum is an erotomaniac, though he observes a definite line between what is allowable and what not.

The novel begins strong in hilarity but ends weak; occasionally the eroticism drifts off into the humdrum. Its value lies in its depiction of a young man's efforts to rise above his origins. If nothing else, the conversations between Ted and his friend Ambrose, during a lethargic and despairing period of existential crisis, will be of interest to everyone who has gone through one - that is, all of us.

Music to be sent to Honduras

Sigma Alpha Iota music sorority is sponsoring a music collection drive April 20-26. Old and used music donated by members of the Iowa City community will be sent to a music school in Honduras, where supplies are very short. Collection boxes are in the office of the UI School of Music and at West Music's Coralville and Sycamore Mall stores. All kinds of music for any musical instruments (sheet music, method books, solos, etc.) are needed; even music in poor condition is welcome.

The Honduras project has occupied Sigma Alpha Iota for the past three years, during which it has raised funds and campaigned for supplies. Local members have corresponded with a Peace Corps volunteer teacher there and have become aware of the serious lack of equipment and teaching

History seemed to repeat itself for the Iowa men's track team Saturday when the Hawks lost a dual meet to Wisconsin, 103-42. Iowa Coach Ted Wheeler said the same thing happened about eight years ago.

Ed DeLashmutt, who is sidelined with a foot injury, was part of the problem, Wheeler said. Also, Charles Jones, recovering from a pulled muscle, was able to compete, but not in his 100- or 200-meter dash specialties.

"With Charles and Ed running, we probably could have scored 32 more points," Wheeler said. "It would have been a more respectable loss with them running.

JONES "VOLUNTEERED to do a workout," according to Wheeler. But Jones was not allowed to sprint out of the blocks in order to avoid extra strain on the muscle. Jones placed fourth in the 400 with a time of 49.4 seconds.

The 4x100 relay team of Terrance Duckett, Jones, Victor Greer and Jeff seconds. The former standard of 41.3 had stood since 1975.

Wheeler was especially pleased with Duckett's efforts, which included wins in the 100 and 200 in addition to the 4x100 relay. "He had one of his best

Pat O'Connor recorded a 53-foot-3 effort in the shot put, setting a new Iowa record plus a personal best. The old record of 53-0 was set by Tom Wallace

"Pat had a fine performance," Wheeler said. "It shows hard work and determination can pay off."

Oakland sets best season start record

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Rickey Henderson tripled in two runs and Jeff Newman doubled in two others Sunday, enabling the Oakland A's to set a modern major-league record for the best season start with a 6-1 victory over the Seattle Mariners in the first game of a double-header.

The victory gave the A's an 11-0 record, eclipsing the record set by the 1955 Brooklyn Dodgers and tied by the 1962 Pittsburgh Pirates and 1966 Cleveland

O'Brien, Stormo take 1,2 in Kansas 1,500

By Dave LaMar

The only place success comes before work is in the dictionary. Iowa Women's Track Coach Jerry Hassard can probably relate best to this old coaching sentiment after sizing up his team's cumulative performance at the Kansas Relays in Lawrence over

'In the history of the Kansas Relays, lowa has never scored any higher than a third place," Hassard said. "I was quite pleased with a number of highplace finishers."

Penny O'Brien won the Relays title in the 1,500 meters, breaking the tape in four minutes, 27.30 seconds. Hassard described her feat as "the highlight of the meet for us (Iowa)." All times were recorded electronically, using the "Accu-track" system.

TEAM CAPTAIN KAY Stormo proved to be the workhorse for the Hawkeyes. The junior middle distance 800, breaking her own Iowa record with a time of 2:08.53. Stormo faced world-class competition en route to her school record per-

"It felt good," Stormo said, "but I was tired at the end," Stormo said. 'After the first 220, they (Oregon's Warren and Manning-Jackson, 1968 Olympic champion) were 10 to 15 yards out, and they made it a different race. They outclassed everybody.'

Chris Davenport was second in the 400 hurdles. Her time of 59.18 not only qualifies her for nationals by more than 1.5 seconds, but also breaks the one-minute barrier - a goal she's been working on the last several weeks.

"BOY WAS I happy with that time (of Davenport's)," Hassard said. When I heard 59.18, it was music to my ears.

The music must have also been heard Nan Doak came through for the Hawks, placing second in the 5,000. Running a 16:38.60 under very "gusty" conditions, Doak set a new Iowa

"It's encouraging to know she didn't look as good last weekend, but she ran faster," Hassard said. "It gives her and myself initiative for future races."

And Clara Simon did it again in the javelin. In her third meet of the year, she set her third straight school record with a 149-foot-8 distance. Janet Adams set two personal records in the heptathlon — one coming in the 200 (27.9), the other in the 100 hurdles (15.82). She finished with a 4,850 point total.

runner was right behind O'Brien for JUDY PARKER traveled to second in the "metric mile," finishing Lawrence, but did not compete. Her problem for Hassard, who had to decide whether she would run or not. "After our talk, we agreed that it would be better to go for complete recovery in preparation for Drake (Relays) and the Big Ten meet,"

In the two-mile relay, the Hawks' foursome of O'Brien, Denise Camarigg, Julie Williams and Stormo combined for fourth place in 8:59.47. The mile relay squad of Davenport, Kelly Owens, Camarigg and Mary Knoblauch took sixth, crossing the finish line in 3:52.28.

Tennis team rebounds for Big Ten road split

By Steve Batterson

Good Friday wasn't so good for the Iowa men's tennis team. "We started really well at Ohio State," Coach John Winnie said. "Then he rain hit. We moved into the worst door facilities in the Big Ten. It rally just psyched our guys out. The flor has a bad surface and the lighting is ot good. It was just an unhappy exe were prepared for them. It's too bad at a situation like that should be allows to happen."

FOLOWING THE 7-2 loss in Columis, the Hawkeyes moved on to Bloomiton, Ind. And, just as sure as the sun me up, Iowa was ready for its match with the Hoosiers.

"The Wther Saturday was great," Winnie sa "I thought maybe we'd have anoty bad day after being frustrated Friday, but we got the matches we eded to have. We had a little hangos from the Ohio State meet but weame out 3-3 after the

"I was real eased that we came away with twef the three doubles matches. We lled the wins out against a coup of strong doubles teams. Earlier in season I believed that if we were bed after the singles matches we were deep trouble, but now I feel that wen win them and that is going to be portant for us as we go down the strh."

Winnie cited the y of the No. 2 doubles team (Tom Imann and Jim Carney) and the No doubles team (Matt Smith and Dan tin) for their play over the weekend

"I WAS ESPECIALLY pleased with our No. 2 team winning both of their

The weekend's results keep the Hawks above the .500 mark. Iowa is 3-2 in the Big Ten and 9-8 overall. Iowa returns home this weekend for its first home outdoor matches of the year against Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Winnie said it will take a good week of practice for the Hawks to "fare well" this weekend.

We've got two toughies this weekend and we're going to get in some outside practices," he said. "We lost three days outdoors to the weather last week. Overall, though, we're in good physical shape and we don't have any injuries. We'll have to go back to work hard and go after two biggies." Ohio State 7, Iowa 2

LOSY AND PONED

Sara Loetscher, Iowa's No. 4 singles player against Southern Illinois, returns a forehand shot.

Women netters beat Salukis

Waking up early and rushing out to take part in a fast-moving activity is not what you would call a typical morning ritual. Most people are still sleepy and stiff by the time they begin exercising. And as a rule, people don't perform as well in the morning as opposed to the afternoon.

But there's always an exception to every rule. Members of the Iowa women's tennis team were certainly an exception Friday morning when they beat Southern Illinois, 7-2. The sun had just barely dried the dew from the nets when the Hawkeyes took to the courts against the Salukis.

The win improved Iowa's record to 18-5. More importantly, the victory provided momentum for the upcoming Big Ten meet.

"FOR THE most part, all the (Iowa) players were in pretty good control of their matches tactically." Iowa Coach Cathy Ballard said. "They kept the ball consistently deep, and if you can get the ball back enough, your opponent will make errors." Laura Lagen, Iowa's No. 4 singles player, was out of the line-up with an injury, so Ballard had to make adjustments in the Hawks' bottom three singles spots. The changes, however, had no adverse effects

"We had extremely strong singles without Lagen in the group," Ballard said. "The (Nos. 4, 5 and 6) players did feel a little bit of pressure playing in a different position.'

Ann McKay, usually at the No. 3 doubles spot with Nancy Smith, was also out with an injury. This forced Ballard to put Smith at No. 2 with Sara Loetscher, Lagen's usual partner.

KELLY HARDING and Karen Kaltsulas played the vacated No. 3 spot. The duo "started out slow, but got rolling" later in the match, Ballard said.

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said the Hawkeyes' defense is far ahead of the offense in spring drills this year, but that's a development that doesn't surprise the third-year coach.

Fry noted defensive tackles Jim Pekar and Mark Bortz led a defensedominated, two-hour scrimmage for

Eddie Phillips gained 51 yards on 11 tries and Glenn Buggs added 46 yards on 11 attempts. Starting defensive back Bobby Stoops was held out of the scrimmage fered Saturday.

Fry said the team's practice Wednesday will be closed to the public, but said the Hawkeyes' full-scale scrimmage next Saturday will be open.

EVANSTON, Ill. - Not only did the Iowa women's softball team finish third over the weekend in the Big Ten tournament here, but also two Hawkeyes were selected to the allconference squad.

Polly Ven Horst and freshman Cherie Anderson were named to the all-Big Ten team, while leading the Hawks to a 2-2 tournament record. Ven Horst, Iowa's centerfielder, paced the Hawks' offense with a .462 batting average. Anderson keyed several infield plays at first base.

It took the Hawks a little while to warm up in their first game against eventual champion Minnesota Friday. And if it hadn't been for the third inning, the Hawks could have tied or even possibly won the game.

IN THE BOTTOM of the third, the Gophers scored five runs to put the game out of reach for Iowa. But the Hawks managed to put runs across the plate in the fifth and sixth innings, before losing 5-2.

"When we played Minnesota the kids were intimidated," Iowa Coach Ginny Parrish said. "We had that one bad inning and we knew when the game was over it should have been at least a tie."

The Hawks "started hitting" in their next game against Ohio State and went on to win 3-1. Anderson scored the first Iowa run after she doubled and was sent home on a Melanie Ruth single. The freshman again came through for the Hawks in the next inning, hitting a two-run double

Sophomore Denise Hunt went the distance for the Hawks, allowing only two

THE WIN AVENGED Iowa's 4-2 loss to Ohio State earlier this season, in addition to keeping the Hawks alive in the tournament. "That game obviously boosted us," Parrish said.

Neither team hit well in Saturday morning's Iowa-Michigan game, but the Hawks managed to come out ahead, 2-0. Both runs were scored in the third inning, highlighted by the alert baserunning of shortstop Carla Smith and hits by Ven Horst and Linette Wieland

But the "one-bad-inning-syndrome" again plagued the Hawks in their final Big Ten game against Michigan State Saturday afternoon. This time it was the first inning as the Spartans took an early 4-0 lead off Iowa's Hunt.

The relief pitching of Deb Schneider, combined with a determined Iowa squad almost resulted in a comeback for the Hawks. After scoring in the fifth and sixth innings, the Hawks rallied in the top of the seventh to come

IOWA'S KRIS ROGERS nearly tied the game with a double just six inches short of sailing over the leftfield fence. The side was retired, however, with Rogers left on base.

Their (Hawks) potential is much higher than what people have seen," Parrish said. "But all the games have given us a little more confidence."

Iowa gains confidence from conference play

By H. Forrest Woolard

EVANSTON, Ill. - As Iowa catcher Melanie Ruth put it, the Hawkeyes 'had nothing to lose" when they entered Big Ten softball competition over the weekend here.

The Hawks carried an 8-14 record into the tournament, and had experienced losses to such teams as Grandview and Northern Iowa. To say the least, there was a little frustration in the Iowa ranks

'We couldn't figure it out at first," said Iowa centerfielder Polly Ven Horst of the Hawks' troubled season. But we talked and talked, trying to pinpoint the problems, and now everyone knows where everyone else is coming from.

OUT OF NINE Iowa starters, six did not compete for the Hawks last season. Also, this is the first season Ginny Parrish has coached at Iowa. No wonder they've had a little trouble adjusting to one another.

But Iowa's third-place Big Ten finish did prove one thing: The Hawks can schools, and engineer a comeback if We've known all along that we're better than our record showed," Ruth said. "We also knew that we couldn't iust believe it - we had to show it."

According to Ven Horst and Ruth, the big differnce was "defensive confidence." Ven Horst said it's easier for her to relax at bat when she knows the defense will come through.

Shortstop Carla Smith said she has also noticed more confidence in her teammates lately.

WE'RE CONFIDENT that if someone makes a mistake, someone will make up for it," Smith said. Everyone is beginning to realize the ability is there

As for the effect Iowa's third place will have on the remainder of the season, Ruth summed it up in saying,

RBI record by Garton; lowa rolls

By Betsy Anderson Staff Writer

On a day better suited for football, the Iowa baseball team completed a successful weekend Sunday by defeating Northeast Missouri State, 15-7, at the Iowa dia-

The Hawkeyes began the weekend on a good note Saturday, sweeping a pair from Loras (3-0, 4-3). Iowa is now 29-11 on the year.

Ed Garton highlighted the weekend, breaking the Iowa runs-batted-in record of 50, set by Brian Jones in 1975. He tied the record Saturday with one RBI, then smashed the mark with five RBIs in Sunday's nine-inning game.

GARTON, WHO went 3-for-5 Sunday, finished the weekend batting

In Saturday's opener, the Hawks could have saved themselves some trouble by not playing the last 51/2 innings. After scoring three runs in the bottom of the first, the game turned into a pitching duel.

"It's tough to get up against a team like Loras," Head Coach Duane Banks said. "We weren't real intense, but we did get good pitching in our first game.

The Iowa offense revived again, however, in the nightcap. Catcher Dick Turelli led things off with a RBI single to right field.

Loras then tied the game in the third on a two-out solo home run by designated-hitter Cory Soukup.

Loras increased its lead when Neil Rima walked, and then scored on a double by Terry Cain who went to third on the throw home. Soukup then hit a suicide bunt down the first-base line, scoring Cain and putting Loras ahead, 3-1

IOWA RESPONDED to the challenge and scored two runs of its own in the bottom of the fifth. The Hawks scored the winning run in the sixth after Mark Tate singled to score pinch hitter Brian Charipar from third

Jeff Green, who replaced starting pitcher Mike Hoeg in the sixth, faced only seven batters the last two innings. He struck out the last four.

"We seem to only play well enough to win," Banks said. 'We're a good team when we get down, but we need to play better when we're ahead.

Iowa turned the Northeast Missouri game into batting practice, pounding out 16 hits. Both Garton and Tony Burley went 3-for-4.

Left fielder Lon Olejniczak hit his first home run of the year to lead a three-run sixth inning. Olejniczak also plays at tight end/punter for the Iowa football team.

According to Banks, Sunday's nine-inning contest with Northeast Missouri was the first pitching appearance since the spring break southern trip for both Brian Hobaugh and Jeff Ott. The two have been out with sore arms.

"Ott responded well, though Hobaugh didn't do as well as we had hoped," said Banks.

Ableman impressive at U.S. Open

By H. Forrest Woolard

Randy Ableman, Iowa's NCAA onemeter diving champion, once again represented the Hawkeyes with every bit of form credited him, finishing second overall in the U.S. Open Diving Championships held last Wednesday through Saturday in Columbus, Ohio.

The three-meter comeptition was the meet's highlight, and according to U.S Diving President Dr. Ray Hain, it was probably the greatest event in the champion only totaled 540.

Greg Louganis, a former teammate of Ableman's from Mission Viejo, Calif., won the event with a record score of 715 points. He is the only diver to ever break 700 points in any event.

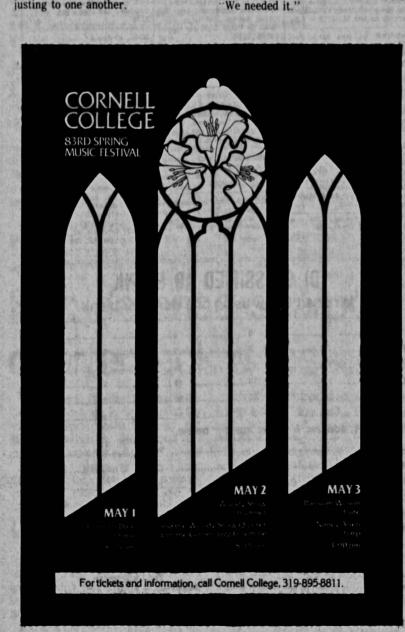

ABLEMAN TOTALED 661 points for second place, and now shares honors with Louganis for scoring higher than any U.S. Open diver in the three-meter event. A comparison with the NCAA results revealed that the collegiate formances on the three-meter board in any competition," Iowa Diving Coach Bob Rydze said. "The president of U.S. diving even said that the three- and one-meter events were two of the best he had ever seen in his life."

In the one-meter event, all eight finalists scored more than 500 points apiece for the first time in the meet's history. Louganis, considered to be the greatest diver who ever lived by experts, won the event. Ableman placed Cup.

BRUCE KIMBALL, a senior prep sensation from Ann Arbor, Mich., won on the 10-meter board. Louganis and Ableman finished second and third, respectively.

Ableman's next competition will in May at the International Diving Meet in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. He will also travel with the U.S. team to China for a dual meet. In June, the Iowa junior will compete in the prestigious Swedish
