Cuts favored — in general

President Reagan's budget proposal to Congress this week is expected to meet with much resistance among American lawmakers. The president's program, which envisions deep cuts in domestic programs and a major increase in defense spending, is likely to be the first meaningful test of the new Republican majority's resolve to push through its domestic priorities. The Senate Finance Committee is scheduled to take up the budget proposal next week, and it is expected to make significant changes to the legislation.
Windfall asks to sell directories

By Diana McNeely

The Windfall student marketing and institutional relations group plans to approach UI students this week to ask that they support the group’s efforts for the organization.

Tom Condon, Windfall director, and Tim Turner, Windfall student shares director, said that the group has been working on the project for several years and has made some progress.

"The sales director for next year’s campaign is Tim Condon, Windfall said. "We have been working on the project for several years and have made some progress."

The Windfall proposes to sell directories, a compilation of student information, to raise funds for the organization.

"To sell the directories, we are proposing to sell them at the University Bookstore at a price of $10 each," Condon said.

"We are trying to sell the directories by means of a survey of student opinions and distributing the survey to the student body."

The possibilities of the sale of the directories also were assessed.

Reapportionment plan

The new reapportionment plan for congressional and legislative districts comes as a close at panel could be examining the balance of population among low districts and the "one-person, one-vote" standard of fair representation. The plan should not be scrapped just because one of the voters transferred to another district happens to be in the 1st District Rep. Jim Leach.

Leach recently criticized the plan as gerrymandering because it would move him into the 2nd District — the same district as the Legislative Service Bureau, which bas the problem of what to do with the 1st District.

Interest rates stun markets

By Mary Tinsley

NEW YORK - Soaring interest rates stunned the market Monday. Major banks raised their prime rates to 14 percent, and small banks raised theirs to 15 or 16 percent.

The move was in reaction to new Federal Reserve tightening of credit, aimed at stemming inflation. Federal funds were quoted at 13.5 percent in New York, 12.7 percent in Chicago and 12.5 percent in San Francisco.

The prime rate boost sent stock and bond prices sliding, large discount houses dumping mortgages to avoid higher interest costs. By midday the Dow Jones industrial average plunged 87 to 982.96.

The Federal Reserve Board, in a move expected to cost $3.5 billion in increased interest income for banks, raised the cost of overnight loans on a daily basis from 11.25 percent to 12.5 percent, effective today.

Banks are expected to pass the extra costs on to customers, raising long-term rates by up to 10 percent.

The move came after months of credit easing by the Fed, which had made it easier for small businesses to borrow.

Raising short-term rates in the latest effort to maintain interest rates in the high-12 to high-13 percent range.

In the move, banks were being asked to set aside a larger percentage of deposits for reserves. They would be required to put up a larger percentage of deposits into reserves.

Banks must now set aside a larger percentage of deposits for reserves.

ALONG WITH NEW rates in short-term money inside, long-term bond markets pushed prices down Monday on the first try.

In the market for long-term notes, a 9 percent note due in 1990 sold at 94.89, down from 95.29. A 9 percent note due in 1995 sold at 92.83, down from 93.08.

Banks did not want to allow increases in a 5 percent single mortgage rate, but they were able to increase it by 5 percent.

Blind citizen to ride in annual Bike-A-Thon

By Natalie Burness

Approximately 50 people, at least 10 of whom are sighted, have applied to ride in the annual Bike-A-Thon. The event will be held on Sunday, September 27, from 8:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. at the State Capitol in Des Moines.

K-Mart, a leading retailer of home appliances, and other businesses have donated prizes, including radios, game equipment, and other items to encourage participation. The fees for riders will be $5.00 per rider, with the proceeds going to the American Federation for the Blind.

Riders are encouraged to form teams of four or five, and the team that raises the most money will receive a trophy. The team that raises the least money will receive a trophy as well, promoting fairness and participation.

The event is open to all ages, and riders must be able to ride for at least one hour. Registration will begin at 8:00 a.m., and the ride will start at 8:30 a.m. Riders must be at the starting line by 9:00 a.m.

The day will include live music, food, and activities for families. The event is sponsored by the American Federation for the Blind, with support from local businesses and community organizations.

Court reverses sentencing order

WASHINGTON (AP) - The court reversed the original sentencing order of the defendant who was convicted of murder. The original judge had sentenced the defendant to 20 years in prison, but the court found that the sentence was too lenient.

In a 5-4 decision, the court ruled that the defendant should receive a life sentence without parole. The decision was made after a thorough review of the evidence and arguments presented during the trial.

The defendant was found guilty of murder in the first degree and is currently serving a sentence of life without parole. The court's decision will have a significant impact on the defendant's legal status and the ongoing case.

Education groups push budget

WASHINGTON (AP) - A coalition of education and teachers' organizations has called for increased funding for the state education budget. The coalition is made up of over 500 local and statewide education groups and is supported by educators from across the state.

The coalition is concerned about the lack of funding for education programs, including teacher salaries, textbooks, and technology. They are calling for increased funding to ensure that all students have access to a quality education.

The coalition is urging the state legislature to increase funding for education by at least 5%. They are concerned that without increased funding, schools will be forced to cut programs and reduce services.

The coalition is also advocating for a legislative review of the state education budget to ensure that funds are being used effectively and efficiently.
Dig It wins two volleyball titles

The men’s and coed 1981 intramural volleyball champions have a lot in common, each in the name of their teams. Dig It won the men’s volleyball title hands down, while Dig It II was the coed final.

Obviously, this was no coincidence. The cool change had four of the six members of the men’s title.

Flegen was a Pittsburgh native and broke his ankle in that 1978 and 1979 seasons, and then in a personal vendetta. The Big Ten is the moral equivalent of a personal vendetta.

The Big Ten said it would threaten to sue Illinois for breach of contract. Wilson's lawyer, Robert Kramer, threatened to sue the Illini in a series of damages in the university. We'd like to see the Illini press conference for the Big Ten semifinals, the Celtics refuse to take the Rockets lightly. Boston just bought a $20 million player in Larry Bird and is playing well.
