Air controllers, government still negotiating

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government and the air traffic controllers union negotiated past the strike deadline of midnight Sunday, the first hopeful sign a nationwide walkout by the controllers might be averted.

At press time Sunday, no decision had been made

The Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization set a strike deadline of 10:59 p.m. Sunday, with a walkout due to begin with the Monday day shift if no agreement was reached. There are 17,000 controllers; 14,800 are union members.

Union President Robert Poli told reporters at the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service headquarters Sunday night he would be willing to extend the deadline if there was some movement in the bargaining.

"If I feel we're making progress, we'll talk after midnight," he said.

However, union locals began counting strike ballots by its members shortly after midnight, as the union said it would if an agreement was not reached by the deadline.

THE FACT that the talks continued past the deadline was the first indication during the day that progress was being made toward averting a strike that could cripple the nation's air traffic. Neither side was highly optimistic

As federal employees, the 17,000 controllers are forbidden to strike.

The White House kept close tabs on the negotiations. On President Reagan's return from Camp David in mid-afternoon, Reagan's chief of staff. Jim Baker, called Lewis out of the "I'm not optimistic or pessimistic," Lewis told reporters before the meeting began. "We have nothing new except we want to try to work this thing out to the advantage of the government and the air traffic con-

Both Lewis and Poli confirmed there had been no new money added to the $40 million package offered by the FAA last week and rejected by the union. Lewis said both sides were seeking other ways to move around the money in the package.

A STRIKE could take out as much as 85 percent of the work force. With a full walkout, FAA supervisors could handle perhaps half of the nation's normal daily commercial traffic and about 30 percent of normal overall traffic.

The government kept up its tough stance against a walkout.

White House communications director David Gergen said while the administration would do everything it could to avert a strike, the Justice and Transportation departments were drawing up injunction papers in "the unhappy circumstance a strike should

Union representatives at the nation's approximately 500 control towers and 20 continental air route traffic control centers would be asked to tabulate the ballots and report the results to union headquarters.

As federal employees, controllers' basic wages and hours are the province of Congress; the contract with the FAA mostly covers working conditions and fringe benefits.

Pay increase causes controversy at UI

A pay increase for two state employees has caused controversy at the UI. Staff and faculty members agree with the reasons for the raise but not the amount of the increase.

Presidents of the UI and Iowa State University were each awarded a $15,344 raise Thursday by the state Board of Regents. This increases the salary of ISU President Robert Parks and the successor to UI President

Willard Boyd to $82,500 next year. "We have staff members working for less than the increase," said Don Winter, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Local 12.

"The main problem is with the rationale behind it," he said.

THE BOARD'S reasoning behind the increase is that the presidents' salary have not kept pace with those at comparable universities and the increase may help draw a suitable replacement for Boyd, said R. Wayne Richey, executive secretary for the regents. The increase will bring the presidents' salary into third place among 11 other universities in the Midwest.

"I do think we have to have a strong person as university president, but I don't know if money will necessarily ensure that," Winter said. The AFSCME workers were given an 8 percent pay raise by a state arbitrator

Chairman of the Presidential Search Committee, Derek Willard, said the increase may "enhance" the appearance of the job but it won't necessarily ensure a strong president will be hired.

"WE CAN'T hope to attract good leadership without it," Willard said of the increase. Although a high salary does not ensure top quality, a low salary "could count against you," Wayne Franklin, Organization for Faculty Action member, agreed with Winter, but said the actions of the new president will determine whether the raise is money well-spent.

"I wouldn't wish that job on anyone in the world, but I don't know if money will make up for that ... If it gets us a president who will indeed make faculty salaries his highest priority then it is worth it," Franklin said.

Although Winter said he did not begrudge the president a pay increase he did question the size of the increase. "They (each president) got a 23 percent raise and the president has a house provided for him. That's a pretty good chunk of money, especially when the state has been pleading poverty for the last year," Winter said.

"I THINK sometimes we lose sight of why we're here - this is supposed to be an institution of learning. The faculty has been telling them all along See Salary, page 7

Confidential student information just that

By Jackie Baylor Staff Writer

UI students do not have to worry about their confidential school records being released without their permission — in most cases, UI Registrar W. A. Cox said Friday.

Grades and transcripts are controlled information and must have authorization from the student to be released to prospective employers, other universities and UI personnel other than the student's adviser and the dean of the college, he said.

The state Board of Regents announced June 18 at its monthly meeting at the Iowa Lakeside Laboratory in Milford, Iowa, that it will review the confidential student records policy at the regents' institutions after University of Northern Iowa Student Association President Russell Martin said that the UNI administration had sent student grade information to the UI Reserve Officers Training Corps.

THE REVIEW will determine whether the regents' institutions are improperly releasing confidential information, Regent Peg Anderson said. Casey Mahon, assistant to UI President Willard Boyd, said she was unaware of UI students' confidential records being released to the UI military science department. "It has not come to my attention,"

Mahon said it is "not that easy" for school officials to receive access to student academic records. A school official must prove "legitimate educational interest" to be permitted to look at a student's record.

Lt. Col. Michael Bartelme, of the UI Army ROTC office, said Thursday the UI department receives confidential student information such as grade point averages only in connection with scholarship applications.

MAHON SAID the legitimate educational interest test is met when confidential student records are requested for use in evaluating the qualifications of scholarship appli-

Pontiff may have infection

ROME (UPI) - Pope John Paul II's doctors said Sunday he may have a liver or lung infection and may remain hospitalized two weeks or more because of a persistent fever that has slowed his recovery from last month's assassination attempt

The doctors said the pope, 61, spent a day of almost total rest in his 11th floor suite in Gemelli Hospital after being re-admitted Saturday evening.

Reagan popularity slipping

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A new poll shows a sharp drop in President Reagan's popularity in the last month, but Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said Sunday he doesn't believe the slide means "anything at this point.

The new Gallup poll, conducted June 5-8, shows 59 percent of the 1,515 people questioned approve of Reagan's performance, down from 68 percent in a May poll.

Figures for other presidents after four months in office are Richard Nixon, 63 percent approval; John Kennedy, 71 percent; and Dwight Eisenhower, 74 percent.

Dramatic escape staged

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) - Five Romanians hid between the ceiling and roof of a passenger train for 21 hours without food or water in a dramatic escape to the West, Austrian authorities said Sunday.

The two women and three men arrived at a Vienna rail station Saturday night, exhausted from their ordeal, police said. They told officers they wanted political asylum.

Begin surges in popularity

TEL AVIV. Israel (UPI) - Prime Minister Menachem Begin, riding a crest of popular support from the raid on Irag's nuclear reactor, surged ahead in two opinion polls published Sunday, 10 days before national elections.

If voting were held now, the poll in the English-language Jerusalem Post said, Begin's Likud bloc would receive 49 of the 120 seats in parliament, compared to 43 seats it won in the 1977 elections.

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) - Two former CIA agents being sought for illegally selling arms to Libya have been linked to the theft of radar equipment from a naval test site in China Lake, Calif., it was reported Sunday.

The report named Frank E. Terpil and Edwin P. Wilson as the subjects of a federal investigation into the theft of "friend or foe" radar equipment from the U.S. Naval Testing Center.

Both men are being sought in federal fugitive warrants on charges they sold large quantities of weapons and sensitive military equipment to Col. Moammar Khadafy's Libyan government.

PARADISE, Wash. (UPI) - Tons of ice broken off from a glacier thundered down the slopes of Mount Rainier Sunday, burying as many as 10 climbers, officials said.

Gary Gregory, a Park Service spokesman, said the situation remained "highly dangerous" with visibility at 50 feet, snow falling and parts of the glacier continuing to roll down the mountainside

Elections begin in Italy

ROME (UPI) - An estimated 9 million Italians began two days of voting Sunday in local elections that could influence the makeup of Italy's new national government.

Results of the balloting will be announced after the polls close Monday afternoon.

The voting came as Premier-designate Giovanni Spadolini, head of the small Republican Party, was in the final stages of forming a new Cabinet that would be the first national government not headed by the Christian Democratic Party since 1945.

Handgun prohibitions not likely here

By M. L. Myers

Iowa City residents appear to be content with the state's current handgun registration law and will not take action similar to that taken by a Chicago suburb last week to outlaw the sale and possession of handguns.

Two Iowa City Councilors said they had not considered instituting a similar ordinance here. Councilors Mary Neuhauser and Robert Vevera agreed there are undoubtedly local supporters on both sides of the handgun issue, but the controversy is not a pressing concern in Iowa City.

"We've never been approached about it on the council," Neuhauser said.

Iowa law requires that a purchaser apply for a handgun permit at the county sheriff's office. Record checks are run on the answers given on the application. Approved applicants are given a permit, which is not valid until three days after its date of issue.

A POTENTIAL handgun owner must then fill out a second questionnaire at the store selling the handgun. If any of the questions on the second form have been answered incorrectly, by law the seller does not have to sell the customer a handgun. Neuhauser said she favors banning handguns at the national level because a potential handgun purchaser could go from a community restricting sales to a neighboring community permitting sales. "It's futile to try to do it on a city-by-city basis."

Vevera said he opposes banning the sale of handguns, saying people who wish to obtain guns for violent purposes will find a way to get them.

Roger Mildenstein, manager of Fin and Feather Sports Center, 943 S. Riverside Dr., said the store sells 50-100 handguns a year. "It fluctuates with the availablity of the pop-

HE SAID THE violent nature of people prompts problems with handgun use, and the issue of gun control is "more complex than just saying we're going to take the guns

John T. Wilson, manager of the John Wilson Sporting Goods, 408 E. College St., said June 17 he did not have an available handgun for sale. Wilson, who said he sold fewer than a dozen handguns last year, said he often waits six to eight months for an order to arrive

Russell Ross, a UI professor of political science, said,"I haven't seen any demonstration in Iowa City of a strong sentiment to ban the sale of guns. Many people in Iowa feel the present state law is effective."

Neil Cashman, who sponsored the handgun ordinance in Morton Grove, Ill., said the local law was necessary because Illinois handgun laws are not strict enough.

The laws are adequate for honest citizens, Cashman said, but handguns acquired during burglaries are often used to commit violent

OBVIOUSLY, CASHMAN said, hander thieves do not register stolen property. It is necessary to ban the sale and possession of handguns to prevent violence, he said.

"Handguns are the main cause for fits of anger leading to fatalities," Cashman said He said he hopes Morton Grove's ordinance will have a "domino effect" all the way to the national level.

Illinois law requires that a handgun owner have a firearm registration identification card, said Michael Vujovich, chief deputy of criminal division at the Illinois Attorney

The card certifies that the holder is an]. linois resident who has received state clearance to own a handgun. Anyone with the ID card can buy a handgun, but the law requires the purchaser to wait 24 hours before picking the gun up from the store.

as constitutional Gun restriction defended

By Marc Stiles

Special to The Daily Iowan

The constitutionality of a law passed by a Chicago suburb restricting the sale and possession of handguns has been defended by a UI political science professor who teaches constitutional law and politics.

"If the Illinois state constitution provides for localities to pass ordinances against smoking marijuana or spitting in the street, a locality could pass ordinances prohibiting the sale and possession of firearms," said Gregory Caldeira, associate professor.

"The only objection I can imagine is the owners of firearms and people who sell guns in stores could argue the government has taken away their property without due process of the law," said Caldeira.

SUCH AN objection is true of any regulatory mechanism, Caldeira said.

Caldeira said those opposed to the Morton Grove law could argue it infringes on the right to bear arms, guaranteed by the Second

Caldeira said he believes the Second Amendment, written in the 18th century, is not applicable to 20th century circumstances.

The Second Amendment was written to protect the state and colonial militia from the power of the central government. Caldeira said. He said many of the writers of the U.S. Constitution feared a strong central government and included the Second Amendment to provide for the states' maintenance of their own militia.

"THERE IS really no complicated legal question involved," Caldeira said. He said he believes the handguns control issue involves how much regulating power the government

ney who is a member of the Illinois Rifle Association and who is acting as a private citizen has filed an injunction challenging Morton Grove's power to restrict the sale and possession of handguns

The Morton Grove law allows citizens 90 days to turn their handguns in, according to a member of the Village Board of Trustees. "We are not going to go into people's homes and confiscate their handguns," said Trustee Neil Cashman, who introduced the legislation to the board.

CITIZENS OF Morton Grove will be allowed to own handguns for target practice at shooting ranges, Cashman said. But the guns will have to be stored at the shooting ranges, he said.

Morton Grove residents will retain the right to own long guns for hunting, and gun collectors are exempt from the law, after a gun store opened in Morton Grove. He said he was tired of nothing being done to stop the spread of handguns at any level and thought it was time something was done about it.

Cashman said he hopes the ordinances will be a starting point for other governments to pass similaar laws banning the possession of handguns. He said he would be pleased if Chicago officials considered a similar ordinance and said Morton Grove would appreciate legal help from Chicago in upcoming court battles. Add Emmy to list of dancer's awards

By Roxanne T. Mueller Arts/Entertainment Editor

If Jeff Mildenstein misses dance class more than two days in a row, he gets depressed.

"I don't feel right," the North Liberty native said. "It's like what a jogger feels when he misses a day of running. The body runs down."

Only 24, Mildenstein has already garnered a list of credits and awards a veteran twice his age would envy. A week ago, he was shocked to learn he had won one of television's Emmy Awards for a dance program aired on IPBN. The program was a film of a dance called "The Rehearsal" choreographed by Gus Giordano, whose Chicago-based company Mildenstein was with for seven years.

"The film was beautiful, but I don't like myself," Mildenstein said. "It's a very theatrical piece and I had been dancing it for years for Gus. The people who filmed it are the ones who do Soundstage. It was a half-hour program but it took forever to tape. They cut it into 10 different sections and we danced each segment about 10 times each."

NOT ONLY DID Mildenstein carry away an Emmy for his individual performance, but the show itself received one as did the choreographer and director. He's not quite sure what kind of clout such an award will carry when he heads for New York City later this summer. "Emmy," as he said, "is only four little letters on my resume."

Before returning to Iowa this month to conduct workshops at Dance Studios I and II — the place where he got his start 10 years ago — Mildenstein spent the last year as the principal dancer in a Las Vegas showroom. It was a unique opportunity, but one which obstructed a chance to appear in a movie directed by one of his idols, Gene Kelly.

The film, One from the Heart, is reported to be producer Francis Ford Coppola's venture into old-fashioned musicals. Though offered the chance to be the principal dancer in the movie's dance corps, Mildenstein was unable to break his contract with the Las Vegas

HE IS HEADING for New York later this summer not necessarily to stay but to "get acclaim and get backers." Interested in choreographing and Mildenstein eventually hopes to form a company of his own. "I would like to see something big coming out of the Midwest. So far, everything originates on one of the coasts. New York is crowded and dirty and in Los Angeles there's too much emphasis on television with not enough talent."

Despite his youth, he talks of setting deadlines and reaching goals within the next few years. He encourages others to do the same. "I tell my students not to aim for the corps de ballet, but to aim to be a star. I'm honest with them, though, and if I feel they lack the talent, I tell them.'

Mildenstein, who moves easily among the modern, jazz and ballet idioms, thinks of all dance as one, "as total movement. I like animalistic

Jimmy Cliff's sound is vibrant, unique

America's introduction to Jimmy Cliff came at the New York World's Fair in 1964. He was then the teen-aged front man for a Jamaican ska band. Shortly after that, ska as a form of pop music died out.

Few people wandering through the Jamaican Pavilion took any notice of Cliff or ska other than as sorts of tropical curiosities. But ska was very real in the streets of Kingston's ghettos and by the time Cliff resurfaced in the early 1970s as the star of the film The Harder They Come, ska had evolved into a new form: reggae.

Reggae seemed to have everything backwards. The emphases were on the wrong beats. There were unexpected silences and the whole form was quite confusing to the non-Jamaican mentality. But there was something about the music, something in its manic energy that drew in non-believers. Perhaps it was that energy, a commodity severely lacking in popular American music at the time.

EVEN AS REGGAE was being coopted by Americans, it remained essentially true to its roots. It was street music directly paralleling the American folk-rock movement of the 60s and '70s; it was the medium of political expression for Jamaica's

Cliff took the energy and the politics, added a little rhythm and blues and some commercial slickness, and came up with his own unique sound. It's a will go away disappointed.

Reggae hasn't much caught on in the United States. A few East Coast roustabouts made some noise about it being the next big thing, but it never spread much west of the Hudson, It became, however, a major influence. It's hard to find a rock album these days that doesn't have a hint of Jamaican rhythm on it.

BUT WHAT OF that elusive popular success? True, Bob Marley had his mansion in Kingston and Cliff isn't starving to death, but aside from Eric Clapton's anemic cover of Marley's "I Shot the Sheriff," there's been no sign of a reggae Top-40 hit.

The chances of reggae becoming a dominant contemporary musical form are small. The carnival is on its way out of town; the new wave is here, complete with reggae influences. Strange things are off on the horizon, but reggae is missing in action.

Despite all this, Cliff is important and a vibrant performer. Seats are still available for his concert at 8 tonight at Hancher Auditorium. I doubt anvone

Man of Steel returns with box-office smash

By Roxanne T. Mueller

Superman's back and Lois's got him. Lex Luthor moves from the No. 1 criminal spot to No. 4. The Fortress of doubles as a love nest

That's Superman II in a nutshell, a lively continuation of the Man of Steel's adventures. While not an exciting piece of filmmaking, it is nevertheless entertaining - especially so when the cameras concentrate on Christopher Reeve's hunch-shouldered Clark Kent shyly greeting everyone in the Daily Planet office only to be ignored, or his gentlemanly Superman. locking his sky-blue eyes on Lois's

Having taken care of the character introductions and the outline of Superman's origins in the original film (both of which served to degenerate the action into tedium about halfway through), director Richard Lester sets his sights on high comedy, sentimental love and satiric commentary on some of the more obvious excesses of popular culture.

SUPERMAN'S MAIN foes are the three arch-villains who were sent into the Phantom Zone last time around, imprisoned in a mirror-like prism hurled into space. The irony is that Superman inadvertently causes their escape from the void.

Their nastiness is innate. Ursa (Sarah Douglas) pulls off the patch of an astronaut poking around the moon and kicks him into oblivion. General Zod (Terence Stamp) haughtily orders the President of the United States to kneel before him. The giant Non (Jack O'Halloran) is an ogre of few words and violent action. The trio can match Superman's power stroke for stroke, and things look pretty grim not only for the superhero but for the world.

Films

Lester, master of the comic touch in A Hard Day's Night, Help, The Three Muskateers and others, heaps satiric abuse on such things as plastic pink honeymoon suites, where Clark and Lois are sent to expose the honeymoon racket, and redneck bravado in dusty Western towns. In a climactic battle between Superman and the terrible trio, Superman collapses into a Marlboro truck, Non is thrust into the middle of Times Square's giant neon Coke sign, and a couple munching on Burger Chef French fries gets blown away by the trio's collective Super

'Buried Child': offbeat offering

By Roxanne T. Mueller Arts/Entertainment Editor

If you think acting is easy, try rehearsing three different plays for three hours each in one day. It's what the troupe of the UI's Summer Repertory Theater has been doing for the last few weeks.

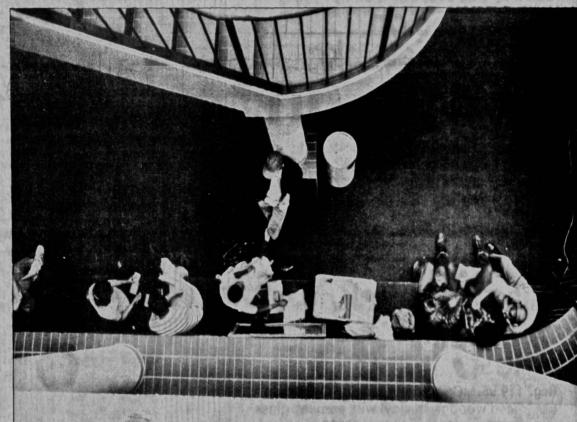

The season opens Thursday with Moliere's prose comedy, The Imaginary Invalid, followed the next night with the opening of Sam Shepard's Pulitzer Prize-winning Buried Child, which in turn is followed by the opening of the musical fantasy The Robber Bridegroom June 30. A UI Opera Theater production of Mozart's The Magic Flute will round out the summer rep season beginning July 23.

Buried Child is perhaps the most offbeat offering, concerning, as it does, long-hidden family secrets of an unusual Midwestern family. Says director Phil Bosakowski, "We're going into a super-realistic play that dictates a style so strongly, I wonder what I'm doing there sometimes."

BOSAKOWSKI, who served as acting director of the Playwrights Workshop this year, worked with playwright Shepard in San Francisco last year at the Bay Area Playwrights Festival. "Shepard has a healthy attitude toward his work," Bosakowski said. "He started in the New Wave theater tradition but is becoming more accessible all the time. I think Buried Child is a very conservative play about a young man who leaves the West Coast to claim his heritage in the Midwest."

The play is populated with bizarre characters, including one who Bosakowski says is lobotomized and another whose wooden leg is carried around by another character for a good part of the third act. "I'm working with Midwestern actors and I said to them, 'This play is yours. It's speaking to your generation.' They had no problem at all with the text and the meaning. I told them not to worry about the contradictions in the text - let the audience worry about those."

BOSAKOWSKI INTENDS to bring

Bosakowski plans to return to San Francisco in August where a script of his will be developed. He likes the give-and-take artistic atmosphere of the Bay Area. "There's a lot of cross-fertilization out there. It's like everybody is part of a collective."

Regents suspend UNI parietal rule, consider health service funding plan

By Rochelle Bozman and Diane McEvoy

The state Board of Regents voted Friday to suspend the parietal rule for freshmen at the University of Northern Iowa and to continue the suspension for an additional two years for sophomores.

Vienday, June 28, 1881 - Towns Citic lows

The decision by the board at its June meeting at Iowa Lakeside Laboratories in Milford, Iowa, means that students at the three state-funded universities are no longer required to live in a residence hall during their first years on campus.

The parietal rule requires underclassmen to live in the dormitories. The rule ensured that the residence halls had enough occupants to keep the dormitories solvent.

The board suspended the rule in 1979 for sophomores at UNI and the UI for a twoyear trial period with the understanding that the rule would be reinstated after the two years unless futher action was taken by

IOWA STATE University has never had a parietal rule, ISU President Robert Parks said Sunday. "We have always run very full and overflowing. We have a very good residence hall system in Ames."

The rule was suspended for freshmen at the UI beginning with the 1980-81 academic year. In January 1981, the board extended the suspension of the rule at the UI for three years beginning with the 1981-82 academic

UNI President John Kamerick said the only reason for maintaining the parietal rule is that it requires students to experience the educational experience of living in a dormitory. "It is on the basis of educational benefits that we have a parietal rule - over-educational benefits of living in a dormitory are not available anywhere else and should be experienced by all incoming freshmen.

"Two years ago UNISA (UNI Student Association) wanted to abolish the parietal rule altogether but the students' Residence Hall Association was in favor of maintaining the rule for freshmen.

We went with the Residence Hall Association's recommendation since they are the group most closely related to the situation. This year the Residence Hall Association decided the rule should be suspended for everyone so that's what we recommended," Kamerick said.

THE BOARD ALSO approved a UNI request for closing the campus during part of the Christmas-New Year's semester break. "It's pretty close to a total shutdown. We keep open the radio station, the security office, and emergency things," Kamerick

A similar reduction of 16 days last year resulted in a savings of approximately $43,000 for the university.

The 11-day period this year is expected to save the school $35,000. An additional $15,000 savings is anticipated by operating the university at a partial reduction during the remainder of the winter break.

In other action, the board received a report on the Statewide Health Service Programs at the UI presented by John Colloton, director of UI Hospitals.

IN CONJUNCTION with the report, the board agreed to recommend to Iowa Gov. Robert Ray and the Iowa Legislature that any block grants received from the federal government for state health services be placed directly into the regents' budget for use by UI Hospitals administrators.

The administrators from UI Hospitals would work directly with the legislature to allocate the federal grants. The proposal is designed to protect the

If health service block grants are handed down without any specific designation for their use, the children's programs may suffer, Fred Smith, UI head of pediatrics, said

LOBBYING GROUPS would work for shares of the money and "children really don't have much pull or influence." he said. "That would mean that there would really be nothing out there as far as consultation or family service go.'

The proposed plan for controlling the of the federal money is also an attempt to cope with a 25 percent cut proposed for all federal block grants that will be awarded during the next fiscal year, Smith said.

Specialized child health services at the UI received about $3.3 million in federal funds last year. Colloton said Sunday. A 25 percent cut would amount to approximately $825,000 less in grants for the program.

The change in administration of the grants would save more money for the health services program by cutting out "bureaucracy and administrative costs,"

THE FUTURE OF federal block grants to the UI is uncertain because the grant program is under Congressional committee consideration, he said.

Statewide Health Services programs are now financed with categorical grants that earmark funds for specific outreach programs such as those for crippled children and hemophiliacs.

'The major impact of this will begin in the 1982 fiscal year" because some of the categorical grants have already been received by the UI, Smith said.

The board also approved preliminary operating budgets for Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa Friday. The ISU general university budget for 1981-82 was approved at $114,191,000; $24,177 less than the general university budget approved for the UI. The UNI preliminary operating budget was set at

The three area transit systems may be able to afford the seven buses they need if a federal regulation requiring wheelchair lifts changes before the buses

Bids for three new Iowa City buses, two Coralville buses and two UI buses were opened in May. Iowa City Transit Manager Hugh Mose said federal guidelines instructed the three transit systems to combine grant applications.

But transit officials have notified the city that federal regulations mandating wheelchair lifts on the new buses have pushed the price of seven new coaches beyond the amount of federal grant money available to the area transit systems.

The Iowa City and UI purchases of five buses are being threatened by the added cost of the wheelchair lifts. The two transit systems together are short $20,000 in funds if they are required to purchase lift-

Transit officials recommended June 19 that bids for the purchase of six lift-equipped buses be awar-ded to the lowest bidder. But federal and local officials also recommended the bids be awarded with a "seventh-coach option."

THE COUNCIL June 15 informally agreed to reject the bids for seven wheelchair lift equipped buses after transit officials noted in a June 10 memorandum the transit system could benefit from a delayed

Officials confirmed that Iowa City, acting as lead agency for the three transit systems, can award bids for six lift-equipped buses if funds are not available for seven of the specially modified coaches.

The low bidder, Neoplan-USA, has agreed to accept an alternate award for six buses with wheelchair lifts. But the area transit systems could still receive the seven buses because transit officals expect the wheelchair requirement to be rescinded by the federal government within 30 days.

Not having to put the wheelchair lifts on the buses will reduce each coach's cost $6,500 from Neoplan-USA's bid price of $158,900 and reduce the project cost so the seventh coach could be purchased. LOCAL, STATE, AND and federal administrators have "agreed that this is the best direction to proceed," the June 19 memorandum said.

Councilors' expressed concern that Neoplan-USA has yet to manufacture its first bus. But Lundell said the Rockford, Ill., transit system is the manufacturer's first customer and will receive 20 buses.

He said it will be eight to nine months before the area buses are built. The local transit systems hope to have the buses within one year if the council approves the bids, Lundell said.

The City Council will consider a resolution to award bids for six lift-equipped buses with an option to change the bus order to seven buses without lifts; a small "Bionic" bus for the UI; a two-way radio and and the Iowa City Council, transit officials reported ten bus shelters at its June 30 regular meeting.

Gay Pride Week began Sunday and in Iowa City it was kicked off with a picnic.

Yesterday afternoon the Gay Peoples Union sponsored a picnic at City Park "just to get together and enjoy each other's company," said Bill Bateman, co-moderator of

The picnic is an "Iowa City tradition," Bateman said. "It is a quiet remembrance of what's been gained in the last years."

Gay Pride Week will last through June 28 with the highlight of the week starting Friday

Michael Blake, co-moderator of the Lesbian and Gay Affiliates of Iowa, said there will be a coffee house Friday. On Saturday there will be a brunch before a statewide march which begins at 1 p.m. The march will start at the statehouse and end at Nollen Plaza, he said.

SATURDAY NIGHT a series of cultural events, which include "gay and lesbian music" and poetry reading, are scheduled at the Thoreau Center, Blake said.

To end the weekend, a group from Ames is sponsoring a brunch on Sunday, he said.

Gay Pride Week is nationwide celebration and is always held the last week in June to commemorate the time in 1969 when a group of men "resisted police harassment" in a 'gay area" of New York City on Stonewall Street, Blake said.

That event was the "birth of the modern gay rights political movement," he said. The week is to commemorate the event and "take pride in the advances that have come since then," he said.

In large cities like Chicago, 15,000 to 20,000 people are expected to march in a parade, Blake said. In San Francisco, which has the 'highest concentration of open gays," 150,000 are expected to be at the pride march, he

He estimated that 200 to 300 people will be at the march in Des Moines.

Blake said Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne has declared that Gay Pride Week is to be held in that city during the last week of June. The picnic is the only event scheduled locally, said Liz Newbury, co-moderator of the Gay Peoples Union. All other pride week activities are scheduled in Des Moines.

Football weekends mean foot patrols and extra hours for Iowa City police, but even during summer's calm Iowa City officers keep from getting bored.
On fall weekends with home football games, Iowa City police work overlapping shifts and patrol the downtown mall on foot. During the summer, those patrols are eliminated and, because of vacations, the night shift seldom has as many officers as during the fall. "We're not as busy during the summer, so we encourage people to take their vacations then," Police Captain Donald Strand said.

DOWNTOWN can be trouble for short-handed police shifts. On June 11, Iowa City police were summoned downtown late at night by reports of a large fight on the 200 block of East Washington Street. Although the fight broke up as police arrived, Iowa City police requested assistance from Campus Security and the Johnson County Sheriff's Department in order to have enough officers present to handle the disturbance.

One person was charged in connection with a broken display window shortly after the fight broke up. Downtown did not really quiet down until two hours after officers arrived.

Alternative school stresses 'whole person' education

Nestled in a quiet Iowa City residential neighborhood stands an eight-room '... 'e house with a large willow tree in the front ye.' The only difference between this house and any other on the block is the "Willowwind" sign on the front porch and the number of children who consider it a home away from home.

Willowwind School, 416 E. Fairchild St., is a modern version of a one-room schoolhouse. It offers an "alternative" form of education to the approximate 25 children from kindergarten through eighth grade who attend classes in the red and white house.

The idea of "whole person" education was the philosophy behind the founding of Willowwind School in 1972. This is still practiced at Willowwind 10 years later, said Michael Cecil, a teacher at the school. In "whole person" education the teacher deals with the child's emotional as well as academic growth, he said.

IN ADDITION to the basic courses taught at Willowwind - mathematics, science, language arts, literature and social studies, "enrichment" is offered, said Joy Schaeffer, co-director and teacher at the school

Willowwind's enrichment includes fine arts courses not offered in public elementary schools. Interpersonal relationships are also stressed, Schaef-

French instruction begins in kindergarten and Latin a few years later. Students at Willowwind have the opportunity to garden, cook, participate in dramatics, art and photography. A twice-a-day "group discussion" to talk over the day's troubles is a basic part of the Willowwind group dynamics.

Another part of Willowwind's enrichment is development and use of "social and emotional tools," Schaeffer said.

"WE BELIEVE one of the ways for children to become mature is to help them become decision makers," she said. "Our big rule is respect for each Children attending Willowwind range from the exceptionally bright to "slow learners" and "a few who are emotionally disturbed," Schaeffer said. Willowwind students are not delinquents or misfits. Most of them are from households where parents are "real involved in their children's education and self-develop at their own individual rate," Schaeffer said. The four teachers at the school don't hand out grades or report cards, so the only pressure put on Willlowwind students is "to work their hardest every qay," Schaeffer said.

SELF-MOTIVATION at Willowwind is facilitated by the approximate 8-to-1 student-teacher ratio hich allows for individual attention, Schaeffer said In addition, a "partner system" was established so 'older kids work with the younger kids," she said. "Children really have a lot to offer each other as far as teaching goes."

Tuition for a year at the nonprofit, tax-exempt school is $1,600, a cost that is "prohibitive" for many people, Schaeffer said.

To reduce the cost of tuition, a "work exchange program" has been implemented whereby a parent with a skill will exchange some working time at the school for some of the child's tuition. Willowwind currently has four parents helping with art, woodworking, science and field trips.

ALTHOUGH Willowwind is not a fully-accredited school, it is state approved. To become accredited the school would have to hire a principal, Schaeffer Willowwind is inspected several times a year and has no trouble remaining "approved," Schaeffer said. She said she would like to see the school become accredited to enable it to receive state finan-

Each spring the children at Willowwind take the Iowa Test of Basic Skills. The students regularly score in the top 10 percent of the nation, Schaeffer SCHAEFFER and Cecil both said they decided to teach at Willowwind because of the "sense of community" shared by the teachers and students, Schaeffer said. Teachers at Willowwind are paid directly from the students' tuition so their salaries flucuate from year to year. If a child leaves "we have to take a salary cut," Schaeffer said. "Generally we work below scale, but we're optimistic - the school's getting stronger."

Schaeffer has remained at Willowwind for the past seven years despite the tenuous pay because she believes in what the school stands for. "Our kids always want to come to school," she said, and that

Discussions, poems, part of school day

A new record was broken at Willowwind School Friday afternoon when it took only two seconds for the 24 education school to become quiet for the afternoon gathering called "group" discussion.

As the children sprawled on the floor, sat at the wooden table and lay on the big overstuffed pillows, instructor Joy Schaeffer called for everyone's attention. She threatened to "send kitty out of the room." if the children other kids. in the back would not quit playing with him. Kitty got to stay.

The blackboard behind her was covered with lists of activities and the names of children who had just signed up for them. Colorfully printed were the categories: wish poems, cinnamon rolls, kitten care, feed fish, painting and swimming. There were enough activities to keep 24 lively children occupied for the remainder of the after-

ARDMORE, Pa. — Very possibly, David Graham won the U.S. Open Championship on the first two holes

Playing head-to-head, and shot-forshot with leader George Burns, the poised Australian immediately took psychological control with a 30-foot birdie putt on the first hole and a two-foot birdie putt on the second.

"The two birdies got me off to a good start and got me into the tournament," said Graham, who became the first Australian and only the fifth foreigner ever to capture the U.S. Open.

Tourney ends short for Callas at AIAW's

By H. Forrest Woolard

Firing an 84 Friday for her last 18 holes of golf for Iowa, Elena Callas failed to qualify for Saturday's Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women final round in the national championships at Athens, Callas completed the three-day, 54hole playoffs with a 246 (79-85-84). The cut was 238.

Iowa Coach Diane Thomason was disappointed she's losing the threetime national qualifier. But considering the contributions Callas made to Iowa golf, the coach certainly couldn't

"I HAVE ALWAYS been able to rely on E for a good score," Thomason said. "She's one of the few golfers I have who has a decent short game."

Returning to her Moline, Ill., home before the AIAW tournament had ended, Callas is preparing for the Illinois State Amateur championship which begins Tuesday. The past two years Callas has missed her state tournament because of the AIAW event.

But the Illinois Amateur is only Callas' first challenge after completing her college career.

Thomason said Callas will probably join the West Coast mini-tour. Other Big Ten players such as Sue Hertel of Michigan use the mini-tour as a step toward the LPGA tour, according to the Iowa coach

"THE MINI-TOUR will be a good test," Thomason said. "She can see if she can make it and if she really likes it. Not everyone can handle living out of a suitcase.

As far as money goes, Thomason said the purses are much smaller than the LPGA's. "You can make a little money if you win, though,'

BURNS, ALTHOUGH he still led by a shot at this point, never recovered, and he managed only one birdie all day, and that came when it was too late.

"He put the pressure on me right out of the box," the dejected Burns said. "I was busy scrambling for par and you just can't do that with a player of David's caliber.

'David Graham won, but I helped him. I didn't lose it, he won it, but I helped him. I played stupid at times." Graham, the 1979 PGA champion, put together another pair of back-toback birdies on the 14th and 15th holes. taking the lead for the first time in the tournament at No. 14. He then came home with a three-under-par 67 for a seven-under total of 273.

Burns, meantime, bogeyed the final hole, his fourth of the day, for a 73 that dropped him into a second-place tie with Bill Rogers, who closed with a 69.

"IT WASN'T any bad breaks," said Burns, who had carried a three-stroke lead over Graham into the final round. 'I just didn't play right to win."

As calm and collected as he was in beating the difficult 6,544-yard Merion Golf Club, Graham appeared anything but, moments after sinking his winning

"I'm shaking like a leaf," he said as he walked into the clubhouse and bummed a cigarette. "I don't know how I managed a 67 when everyone else was having trouble. I'll figure it out

Graham, who earned $55,000 for his second victory of the year and seventh since joining the tour in 1971, then gave one clue by saying he was able to stick to his game plan, which was to hit irons off the tees.

"I wanted to keep the ball in the fairway," he said.

GRAHAM SAID HE wasn't sure of his victory until he hit his second shot on the 18th hole. "A two-shot lead wasn't enough at Merion going into the last hole, let alone the last nine holes," he said. "I wasn't happy with a two-shot lead. "I was worried about 18. In three

At stake for the professionals is a $25,000 purse and two Buick Skylarks. The Skylarks are given away to the pros closest to the pin with tee shots on two par-three holes, the eighth and 13th. Of the $25,000, $20,000 is divided up on individual scores with the remaining $5,000 going to the team event. A drawing held Sunday night decides which professional will play with each foursome.

AMANA OFFICIALS were working on alternative transportation plans for the professionals in case an air traffic controllers strike goes into effect midnight Sunday. Amana charters a plane to fly many of the professionals from Ardmore, Penn., site of the U.S. Open, to Iowa City. The pros are then transported to Memphis. Tenn. for the Memphis Open.

Free parking and shuttle bus service is available to spectators from the Iowa City West High School and UI Recreation Building parking lots. The shuttle service starts at 7 a.m. and runs continuously throughout the day. Spectators will also be allowed to park on both sides of Mormon Trek Road, which borders the west side of the Finkbine course.

Celebrities warmed-up for the Amana tournament Sunday in the annual softball game held at the UI Baseball diamond. Minnesota Vikings linebacker Matt Blair, who powered three home runs, led the Amana VIP's past the UI All-Stars, 20-11.

Strike talks halted but owners insured

By Peter Finney Jr.

NEW YORK - With major league baseball owners set to begin collecting on a $50 million insurance bonanza in three days, spokesmen for feuding players and owners refused Sunday to speculate when the deadlocked strike talks would resume.

The $50 million insurance policy, which will pay the owners $100,000 for each canceled game, will take effect Wednesday after 153 games have been canceled by the players' strike. The owners would not exhaust their insurance until Aug. 4.
