The umpires filed suit because their salaries will be cut off in two weeks if the strike continues.

'There was no agreement reached Thursday and the parties still have their differences," said Ray Grebey, head of the owners' negotiating team. "I'm encouraged by the discussion ... but I don't think that the situation has changed. There was very lengthy discussion, but some of it was very destructive.'

BOB BOONE, the chief spokesman for the players, also said the bargaining was going slower than expected. "I just think we should be at least approaching a settlement," Boone said. 'We feel they are moving at such a snail's pace that we are not encouraged

The early part of Thursday's bargaining concentrated on the players' response to the owners' first new proposal on free agency since the strike began June 12.

Alcoholism increasing, solutions difficult

Have you ever missed class because of a hangover?

Have you ever forgotten what happened the night before? Does drinking make you feel more at ease with a date? If you can answer yes to any of these questions you may be one of the increasing number of young people with

"I think alcohol (use) is at an all-time high," said Steve Shuett, education prevention coordinator for Johnson County Mid-Eastern Council on Chemical Abuse.

Approximately 400 people a year go to MECCA for aid, Shuett said. "We see about one new person every day." However, "about half of the people who come in don't have problems with alcohol themselves," Shuett said. Many of these people are concerned about the chemical dependence of a friend or family member.

THE IOWA CITY Crisis Center dealt the use of alcohol and drugs among with an estimated 223 alcohol-related cases during 1980. That figure is up from 188 cases in 1979.

Figures reported in the center's 1980 annual report showed that 77 percent of the people who called or walked-in for alcohol counseling or referral were concerned about themselves. The other 23 percent were concerned about a friend or family.

Counselors at MECCA, the Crisis Center and members of Alcoholics Anonymous acknowledge the rise in college students. But, they said it is difficult to give specific reasons for the increase ecause each case is different. However counselors are able to pinpoint some common causes of substance abuse, Shuett said. "All the conditions are right - the economy and family structures are changing and kids today have tougher decisions to

Ayatollah Beheshti killed in explosion

ANKARA, Turkey (UPI) - Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti, one of three members of Iran's ruling presidential council, was killed Sunday when a series of explosions demolished the Islamic Republican Party headquarters in Tehran, an aide to Iranian Executive Affairs Minister Behzad Nabayi said.

The explosions, which killed 24 other people, occurred during a weekly party meeting of about 90 members of the cabinet and parliament. Both are controlled by the Moslem fundamentalist party which two weeks ago forced President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr from office and began a wave of executions.

The aide said Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai and Nabavi escaped injury because they left the building a few minutes before the bombs exploded.

ALSO killed along with the parliaenvironment and a deputy minister of commerce. The blast wounded 30 others. Pars said.

'More bodies are expected to be discovered," the official news agency Pars said.

Fifty ambulances were dispatched to the scene of the blast which came at 8:50 p.m., the news agency said. Pars blamed the explosion on 'counter-revolutionaries.'

Beheshti was appointed to the presidential council, along with Rajai and Hojatolleslam Rafsanjani, after the dismissal of Bani-Sadr.

The blast came a day after a bomb hidden inside a tape recorder exploded in a south Tehran mosque and injured a close aide to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Saved Ali Khamenei.

Khamenei, 43, was reported out of danger Sunday.

FIVE more people were executed at dawn Sunday and nine were arrested in a continuing purge of Bani-Sadr's supporters. Bani-Sadr has been in hiding for 19 days. In other developments, Mir Hossein

Musavi, 39, an architect and editor of the ruling Islamic Republic Party's newspaper, Jomhouri Islami, was appointed foreign minister. Musavi's appointment was proposed by Prime Minister Mohammed Ali Rajai after another moderate, Sadegh Ghotbzadeh resigned under fundamentalist pressure last summer. Bani-Sadr blocked the appointment and the post remained vacant for nearly a year. Confirmation of Musavi's appointment is considered a formality.

The UI administration has been able to generate an additional 1 percent increase in the amount of faculty salaries for next year by not filling vacant positions. "We have done much greater planning and we use our money whenever possible to increase salaries," said May Brodbeck, vice president for Academic Affairs.

Brodbeck said the additional 1 percent amounts to about $1 million.

The gunfight in the FBI's 10th floor office took place as Special Agent John Glover and two top Atlanta police officials briefed reporters on the situation in the first floor lobby.

As the news conference ended, Glover rushed to the door and away from reporters. Outside, observers saw medical attendants carry the two men to a waiting ambulance in

GLOVER said there were fewer than a dozen hostages taken, but he did not know exactly how many. Bell said earlier there could be "five or six."

Glover said negotiators had talked to the man by telephone and that he had made no demands for money or tranportation.

He said among the "very minor demands" the man made were that press coverage be kept to a minimum and that he be allowed to talk to person he asked for by name.

'He wants someone to come and be with him at this time," Glover said. "I don't know the relationship. He had asked for an individual by name.'

Bell had said earlier the man asked to see a priest.

Ray sets remap deadline

DES MOINES (UPI) - Gov. Robert Ray has signed a bill to set July 28 as the deadline for drafting a new reapportionment plan for consideration by the Iowa Legislature.

The legislature last week rejected the second redistricting plan, forcing a new special session to redraw the boundaries for legislative and congressional districts. The new special session is expected to be held in early August.

Brooks' 'History' is full of low humor

The Daily Iowan/Jennifer W. Morrow

By Roxanne T. Mueller Arts/Entertainment Editor

If you did not appreciate Mel Brooks' true worth from his last couple of movies, History of the World, Part I proves beyond a doubt that he is little more than a leering, sneering dirty old man with few original thoughts on

There's a place for low humor like in sleazy nightclubs and bathroom walls - but occasionally it finds its way to television (as in the "new" "Saturday Night Live") and the big screen (all Cheech and Chong movies). Anytime the punchline of a joke depends on someone urinating, you tend to question the intelligence of the jokester. Brooks uses it no less than three times. The idea of presenting a comic vision of world history is a terrific one, but Brooks uses so much humor that's old hat, you wonder if he's gone to any movies but his own in the last decade. In the section on the Roman Empire, a kick to the groin is treated as brilliantly innovative. Few scenes end without one character mouthing an expletive. Dom DeLuise as the Emperor Nero burps and farts his way into another classless performance. There isn't a section that goes by without a trunkful of homosexual jokes.

BROOKS HAS THE interests of no one at heart, especially women. A human chess game in the French court of Louis XVI ends in a gang rape of the queen. A virgin, in exchange for her father's freedom. begs a fake king to "ravage and humiliate" her.

To be fair, Brooks does get in a few satiric jabs, that, though they may be offensive to some, are funny. As a fleeing Roman, Brooks takes a job as a waiter at the Last Supper. A few moments later, Leonardo da Vinci stops by to paint a group portrait. To show the misery of the French peasants prior to the Revolution, street vendors sell dead rats and apple cores.

If there's one thing Brooks does right in this film, it's his employment of dozens of comics and personalities who sneak on the screen in cameo roles and break the tedium. You can spot Bea Arthur, Charlie Callas, Paul Mazursky, the late Henny Youngman, Hugh Hefner, John Hurt (as Jesus), Jackie Mason, Jack Carter, Jan Murray and more. The terrifying moment comes at the end when History of the World, Part II is promised.

'Buried Child' keeps audience engrossed

By Roxanne T. Mueller Arts/Entertainment Editor

Sam Shepard is at the forefront of contemporary playwrights who have traded the conventions of narrative for the incisive investigation of character. The result, like Buried Child, which had its first UI Summer Repertory Theater performance last Friday, is a situation that leaves audiences wondering about messages and squirming to figure out symbolism.

Shepard's plays aren't meant to be digested in two hours and then dismissed with a burp. He laces the action with comedy and then challenges the viewer to mull over meaning. Director Phil Bosakowski has described the play as being about a young man who comes back to his Midwestern roots to claim his heritage. Within that structure, however, Shepard intertwines themes of decay, rootlessness, religious hypocrisy, horror and a thin curl of

Shepard is a master at presenting situations that are so ordinary and recognizable, they become surreal. The play opens with an old man named Dodge (Scott Smith) watching television and carrying on an irritable conversation with his wife Halie (Sharon Mitchell) who's upstairs and out of sight. In this absurdly normal setting, we learn as much about Dodge as we need to know. He defiantly states he hasn't had contact with the neighbors for 57 years. He doesn't know who they are and he doesn't want to know. Even his name gives a clue to his irascible, Dodge's family barely function. Tilden (Ray Holloway), Dodge and Halie's son, is a gentle but brooding man who's been the source of unnamed trouble in the family. Another son, Bradley (Michael Janowiak) is so disturbed and mean-spirited, he once took a chainsaw to his leg and sawed it off. Halie, alienated from normality and heartbroken over the past, pours out her laments in monologue and is completely ignored. Into this strange, stuffy world comes a free spirit named Shelly (Kelly Sue Hitch) and Dodge's grandson Vince (Vern Nopartak). No one recognizes Vince. In fact, the only link between him and his father, Tilden, is the dark glasses both of them wear. The visit is what ultimately pries open the horrifying secret of the family's past - the newborn child who was buried in the backyard a generation ago. SHEPARD'S CONCERN is not so much the revelation of the secret, but how that secret has disrupted a family's life, how it has splintered unit onto the edges of insanity. Is Halie mad? Is anybody not mad?

Bosakowski has directed seven actors into a smooth ensemble, each of them bringing a remarkable sensitivity and understanding to their somewhat bizarre characters. The actors' interpretations, along with John Weygandt's slightly off-kilter set, keep the viewer solidly engrossed. Whether Shepard's comments on familial disintegration leave one outraged or confused, Buried Child is worth in-

1,200 on waiting list for campus housing

By Jackie Baylor Staff Writer

Approximately 1,200 fall UI students coming freshmen, transfer students and upperclassmen - are on waiting lists for residence hall housing assignments, said George Droll, director of UI Residence Services.

New UI students and fall sophomores will receive top priority for rooms, Droll said Friday. Upperclassmen have a lower priority.

The housing crunch is being caused by the approximately 9,000 applica-tions that have been filed for the 6,248 spaces available, he said.

Spaces available include 322 temporary housing spots in the residence halls as well as 420 spaces leased from Mayflower Apartments, 1110 N. Dubu-

The housing figures are not final because the UI housing office is still receiving housing requests as well as cancellations, Droll said.

HE SAID it would be "premature to state with any certainty" the number of students that may be forced to seek housing outside of the UI residence hall system during fall 1981.

About 1,100 students were turned away from campus housing during the fall of 1980, Droll said.

The anticipated fall housing shortage caused UI administrators in May to set aside 58 spaces in an Oakdale campus building formerly used by the UI

Hospitals' vocational rehabilitation

The Oakdale housing is considered an "extension of residence halls" and will be assigned to upperclassmen who lived in dormitories during the past academic year, Droll said.

The Oakdale housing is co-ed and primarily double rooms, he said. It will be staffed by resident assistants and the costs of housing and food service will be "the same as if on campus," he

THERE ARE 34 spaces available for men and 24 spaces for women because of the building's configuration, Droll said. Thirty men and 20 women have reserved spaces.

We anticipate it to be filled shortly," he said.

Droll said that the eight open spaces at Oakdale could be filled by transfer students who are on the waiting list for UI dormitory housing if no more upper-classmen or graduate students apply for the Oakdale housing.

Modifying the Oakdale building to bring it up to dormitory housing code standards will cost $20,000, he said.

The Oakdale building was used during the past academic year by the Rehabilitation, Education, and Services Branch of UI Hospitals, Droll said. The building was used as a nurses' quarters before vocational rehabilitation moved into the building

Author Maupin waits for heavenly shuttle

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) - Gospel prophecy author Bill Maupin, his wife Liz and a handful of followers waited Sunday for a trip to heaven.

Maupin sat in his backyard giving a television interview as about six members of his fundamentalist sect answered the telephone to assure callers "rapture" would occur Sunday as predicted.

Maupin, 51, predicted people who are "saved" would be spirited aloft into heaven, rising into the clouds like balloons and "raptured" into heaven

Maupin said the trip to heaven would be "one-way for six or seven years, but we'll be coming back." He said the return would coincide with Christ's return to Earth.

Maupin published 10,000 copies of his life's work, The Key to the Book of Daniel, not for profit but to leave the book behind "for the people ... left here

Satan's legions will rule from December 1984 to May 1988, preceding the Second Coming of Christ and 1,000 years of peace on Earth, Maupin said. IT WAS against the background of a world supposedly about to be besieged by the Anti-Christ that some of Maupin's 40 to 50 disciples quit their jobs, sold their homes or declined to renew apartment leases. Maupin said: "When ... groups of international bankers and very powerful people in the world — Satan's followers - are in control, communism will be under a one-world system too. The world system is satanic. Communism and the U.N. are controlled by groups that are set up by the Council on Foreign Relations.

World's oldest celebrates 121st

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) - Arthur Reed, the world's oldest man whose age is authenticated on record, quietly celebrated his 121st birthday Sunday.
His birth certificate, on file with the Social Security Administration, lists his date of birth as

That makes Reed five years older than the Guinness Book of Records' "oldest" man of "authenticated age," who died last year in Japan at Reed, who said he was feeling "real fine" but would not celebrate with cake "cause I had too much Friday," spent a quiet day Sunday, marked only by "lots of interviews with these reporters who want to know everything.'

Reed, who can't remember where he was born but recalls President Lincoln, admitted he is just a little fuzzy on the names of presidents since then, but his favorite was Theodore Roosevelt.

After leaving Iowa City, Glesne said he plans to return to Ardmore, Okla., which he considers his home, with Lady of course.

His advice to anyone with a dog: 'Hang on to it if you ever get a dog that's good to you."

Ingvald Glesne's dog, Lady, has been with him for more than 15 years. This week, Glesne, a traveling salesman, is in Iowa City seeking treatment at the Veterans Administration Hospital.

The Daily Iowan/Dirk VanDerwerker

The treatment offered at MECCA consists of outpatient and residential treatment for the chemically dependent and their families. MECCA services also include drug and alcohol counseling, education and prevention programs.

The outreach workers at MECCA refer people to such places as the Voss Recovery House - a halfway house in Iowa City for substance abusers hospital inpatient treatment or Alcoholics

The Iowa City Crisis Center also provides information and makes "extensive referrals," said Kay Duncan, director of the Crisis Center. In many cases the center is the first place a chemically dependent person will go to get help, Duncan said.

ALCOHOLICS ANONYMOUS, a fellowship of men and women who help each other stay sober, also plays a part in aiding the chemically dependent. The A.A. motto "one day at a time," is a "technique for turning your life around 180 degrees," said one A.A. member. "We are able to help ourselves by helping other people."

A.A. meetings are held several times a week in various places around Iowa City. Any person is welcome to attend the "open meetings" in which speakers relate their experiences and advice on alcoholism to others.

Some closed meetings are held solely for ALTHOUGH "sobriety is not always an enjoyable experience," said another A.A. member, it is reality and "fellow A.A. members help me face that reality.'

Many of the people who seek help from these agencies come on their own, Shuett said. Others came at the insistence of friends, family or employers. And "many of the adult clients are court-referred,"

Although the local substance abuse agencies work to "reach more college-age students." Shuett said. there is reluctance for some students to seek help. Some students will not seek help for alcoholism because of apathy, lack of information and fear.

"It's hard to put a finger on the extent of student alcoholism," because many college-age people have yet to "recognize" their addiction, said one A.A.

Young people who are chemically dependent often take "a while to bottom out" before they seek help, he said. "But if it ever happens that you think you're becoming an alcoholic - there is a place to go here.

vice president is hired. Brodbeck said the system is set up to ensure faculty members are treated "fairly and equitably."

"It is important for this office to see that faculty members are treated fairly," she said.

A faculty member can make a final appeal on promotion or dismissal to the Judicial Commission, which hears faculty disputes when faculty members feel they have been dealt with unjustly.

Most disputes never get this far because informal discussions with department chairs, deans and the vice president usually settle the matter, said Ron Allen, UI Faculty Senate president.

Brodbeck said the number of faculty disputes on tenure, reappointment and promotion ranges each year from none to three.

Solbrig is familiar with "arbitrary standards" used by department chairs because she filed a dispute several years ago over a denial of tenure, and the review procedure dragged on for months.

A SETTLEMENT was reached and Solbrig was promoted with tenure, but she said the settlement stipulated that she not discuss the affair.

The merit system is used at almost all universities to determine faculty tenure decisions and the general criteria used during evaluations does not safeguard against the discrimination of women professors, Solbrig said.

"Most chairmen are trying not to be manipulative but it is never fair, you always bring your feelings into it. It is open to politicking," she said.

Solbrig said she "went exactly by the book" during her dispute which was "her strength. It was long and it was hard, but I followed the procedures."

"You have to remember though that if you want to stay somewhere you have to work with these people"

SINCE the Solbrig case the faculty dispute procedures have been revised to make them less costly and less time consuming.

Allen was on the review committee and said that although the new regulations have not been tested yet they are an improvement over the previous

"The primary problems were with time and expense and we tried to respond to these major concerns. We tightened up and expedited the

'This is not a case of dictatorial power. You have to have some method and this is what we have. Our system is perfectly fine, but you have to make sure that system is working as it should," he said.

Fox decided to cross Canada to raise $1 million for cancer research "even if I have to crawl every last mile," he wrote later to sponsors.

His "Marathon of Hope," began April 12, 1980, when Fox dipped his artificial leg in the Atlantic Ocean at St. John's, Newfoundland, and headed for his home town of Port Coquitlam, British Columbia, more than 5,200 miles away.

Tennis fees barely cover court's administrative costs

By Rochelle Bozman

UI Recreational Services charges fees for using the UI's outdoor tennis courts to fund court resurfacing, but the fees barely provide enough money to cover the administrative costs of charging the fees. Harry Ostrander, director of Recreational Services, said his office began charging for court time after the courts were resurfaced about five years

Students pay 50 cents per hour of court time for a singles game, faculty and staff pay $1.50 an hour while the general public pays $2.00 an hour.

The courts need resurfacing about every five years and the UI administration informed Ostrander the UI could not afford the $2,000 a court price tag. Fees were established to pay for resurfacing and for lights, playground equipment and a concession stand at the west-side courts.

"WE HAVEN'T even netted enough to pay for the facilities we already have." Ostrander said.

"And now it's time to resurface the courts again and we don't have the money. We haven't generated anywhere near the amount of money we had hoped to from this program." he said.

The fees bring in about $20,000 each year, but collecting the fees costs about $18,000, he said. Eighty percent of the collection costs are the salaries of the part-time students which work in the booths taking money and selling concessions. "This program helps create part-time jobs for 15 to 20 students." Ostrander said. To add to the problems, tennis activity has fallen the court and operate the concession stand.

off in the past few years. "It has dropped off, there is no doubt about that, but it's not real severe like 50 percent or anything. It's more like 10-15 percent,"

AT LEAST one faculty member does not appreciate the fee system. Robert Kemp, assistant professor of Speech and Drama, believes that the fees should be dropped. "The fee was imposed four or five years ago and prior to that people just called down and told them what court they wanted to play on. There was a fair amount of tennis activity, certainly more than there is now," Kemp said.

"It is a silly system," he said. "It's a built-in system which no one really pays much attention to, but costs thousands of dollars per year.

"It gives jobs to some rec-majors, but they must have better ways to spend their time and I certainly have better ways to spend my money," Kemp said.

NANCY FRAGA, programming coordinator of Recreational Services, said the fees do not generate much money from individuals but do earn more money from the sports schools.

The 16 students make between $3.35 and $3.65 per hour and work about 10 to 12 hours a week, she said. "I don't know if it's even worth the cost of staff-

Fraga said But Ostrander said there are no plans of disbanding the fee system because, "we can't operate a facility like that without some money coming in." Ostrander said the student employees also perform a service because they can handle problems on

City negotiating for land to build Hickory Hill dam

By Cherann Davidson

Iowa City is currently negotiating with six area landowners to purchase land to build an earth dam east of Hickory Hill Park, which is located in northeast Iowa City.

The dam would be a retention facility to contain excess water in the event of a flood from North Ralston Creek, said Frank Farmer, assistant city engineer. The city is now negotiating with Regina High School officials to buy land northeast of the high school for the dam, and is also negotiating with five other landowners for casement rights which would mean that water could flow onto that land if Ralston Creek flooded, said Andrea Hauer, a planner with the city's development division. Those lands are fields, Farmer said.

The proposed structure would be a dry bottom dam with an earthen top and concrete pipe and gate to "lessen the impact" of water flow, Hauer said.

Dam, is the third part of the Ralston Creek storm water management plan for the city, Hauer said. The 'nuttiest preacher' sells aroceries for God volves the city acquiring land from local residents who live on the floodplain which is east of the Iowa River. The creek bed would then be widened along the channel to alleviate water overflow. Hauer said. THE LAND acquisition will be funded through Community Development Block Grant Funds with an estimated purchase cost of $200,000. The dam will cost about $500,000 to $600,000 to construct, and will be funded through local monies such as general obligation bonds where the city is "backing" the money, Hauer said. The city received final approval for the North Branch project from the Iowa Natural Resources Commission in April. The Iowa City Council approved a resolution for land acquisition last October, and is required by federal law to offer fair market value for any Fromm respectively.

BUT THE BIGGEST opening day upset, which overshadowed the shock results, was John McEnroe's No. 1 court outburst during his match against compatriot Tom Gullikson.

The New Yorker, seeded second, called umpire Edward James an "incompetent fool," a remark heard by millions on live TV, smashed his racket on the back of a linesman's chair, and insulted tournament referee Fred Hoyles before winning the match. He received a $1.500 fine with a threat of suspension and a $10,000 fine if he had

McEnroe admitted the fine was justified. In his three matches since, he has been a changed player, controlling his temper, hardly querying a decision and grudgingly earning the respect of suffered unduly and his path to his second successive final was cleared of seeds remarkably quickly.

With 1979 runner-up Roscoe Tanner ousted by Brazilian Carlos Kirmayr in round two, only Hungarian Balazs Taroczy, seeded 15, remained in McEnroe's half of the draw by Friday.

But Taroczy was upset by 1972 champion Stan Smith in three sets, leaving McEnroe a clear run to his scheduled July 4 final with defending champion Bjorn Borg, chasing his sixth successive title to equal Willie Renshaw's

All-Star game's fate on line if strike continues

NEW YORK - Ray Grebey, the chief negotiator of the owners, says he intends to be in Cleveland July 14 for the All-Star Game.

But with the major league players' strike having lasted 17 days and negotiations at a standstill, Grebey may have to pass on baseball's midsummer classic and settle for the Cleveland Browns' training camp in Grebey's optimism, however, is not shared in all quarters.

"We're no closer to settlement now than we were two weeks ago," Rusty Staub of the New York Mets said following the last negotiating session

But with each fruitless day at the bargaining table, the All-Star Game and even the entire season become more seriously endangered.

In view of that, the Los Angeles Herald Examiner reported over the weekend that a promotional booking agency learned that the season would resume July 7 and the All-Star Game would be pushed back to July 30.

BUT GREBEY and Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association, discounted all such talk "It's a complete surprise," Grebey said. "Don't know what the source is; don't know what it means.' "I can't picture how anybody, even in a key role, could tell you when there's going to be a settlement," Miller said. "It's just impossible ... it's Grebey said the owners would be "doing homework" during the break in negotiations.
