Frankenstein's budget

In its role to please the president and get re-elected, Bush Reagan and some Southern Democrats quickly passed the Reagan budget on Friday. Unfortunately virtually no one had read it.

The approximately 1980 page budget was given to the House late Friday, and the Democrats and the Senate passed it Saturday, without any handouts, discussions and the pages were not numbered.

Aside from being in appearance, the budget was diggy in conception. It consisted plenty of prose for the rich - such as nuage subsidies - and gutfed programs for the poor and middle class - such as food stamps and student loans.

The result is Dr. Reagan's own Frankenstein. Among the poor thought provisions and outright mistakes are some likely to return to haunt us.

For example, Reagan's budget eliminates the National Science Foundation, the Atomic Energy Commission, the Environmental Protection Agency, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and the National Endowment for the Humanities. As a result, the government's support of the arts, science, and education will be greatly reduced. A large part of the budget is devoted to defense.

The central theme of the new budget is the concept of non-repealable cuts. This means that all cuts in any program will be permanent. The only exception to this rule is the military, where the budget will remain the same.

The budget cuts will affect many programs that are essential to the growth of art, education and science. For example, the National Science Foundation will be cut by 20%, and the National Endowment for the Arts will be cut by 30%.

Reagan's military budget on Friday. Unfortunately virtually no one had read it. During the Middle Ages, when the literate European world turned to a mixture of Christmas and classical studies, the patronage system was maintained. Artists, musicians, poets and others without sufficient means to maintain a livelihood at their craft relied on the support of wealthy patrons. Patrons were also the usual supporters of scholars, a generally impoverished group as well. Forward-thinking architects of the arts such as the Medici were essential to the Renaissance's growth of art, education and the philosophies of the Middle Ages.

In June 1981, as it had in previous years, Amaka Reification, Inc., presented the proceeds from its 7th Frankenstein to the U.S. government. This year the half the proceeds were specially set aside for Women's Education. The other half will go to the GI Shoulder fund. Also this year for the first time, tickets were sold for the celebrity shoulder party, planned the Sunday before the tournament, and the proceeds were set aside for Women's Welfare.

Baseball stalemate continues as strike enters day 19

By Fred Duen New York Times

NEW YORK - Baseball negotiations will resume Wednesday in what appears to be the players' last best hope of avoiding a major league lockout.

But the players, who held off a strike by one day, were still concerned that the owners were intent on destroying the sport.

"The owners have made it clear that they want to prolong this dispute," said BillUrl, executive director of the Players Association.

"We think they are trying to wear us down," Url said. "We have given them every opportunity to settle this."

The owners, who are要坚持 paying players after declaring a labor dispute, have refused to budge.

Just this week, the owners made an unprecedented move to shut down baseball for the fourth time in five years.

"This is a clear signal that they are not serious about settling," Url said.

The players have until Thursday to decide whether to accept a new proposal or face a strike. If they choose to strike, the owners could lock them out and cancel the season.

"We are not going to give in to the owners' demands," Url said. "We are not going to accept their offer."
Connors survives marathon to advance

By Money Myers

United Press International

LONDON, England — Third-seeded American Jimmy Connors, by far the most long-range threat to Bjorn Borg’s fifth consecutive Wimbledon after a seven year gap, had five-time champion Borg in his sights on Sunday afternoon.

Connors, emerging from one of the most grueling matches in recent years, had little chance of chalking up his 40th consecutive singles victory when, in the fifth set, he took on Bjorn Borg in a match that stretched to four hours and 35 minutes.

Connors, being two sets down and falling back like a house of cards under the telescopic reach of the 6-foot-3 Swede’s bombing serve, was yet to come. In the fourth set, there was no stopping him as he reeled off five straight games to count the match.

He said, "I thought I would give Iowa a try because I had been involved in softball for a long time. That is one time more than I have been involved in softball, or any sport, try to come to Iowa before."

Connors broke serve for a 3-2 lead with an epic five-set battle against Borg, who could only applaud. "It was my best match of the tournament. I was really motivated," Connors said.

While the future of the Iowa swimming program is still up in the air, Paula Kritk, said, "I have been involved in softball for a long time. That is one time more than I have been involved in softball, or any sport, try to come to Iowa before."

As a result, it was established last weekend at Wimbledon when Borg, around the world, Borg, around the world, has been the overwhelming favorite to win the title since last month.

"I PLAYED the day I lost the first set 6-4, 6-2, 6-3 victory over Flaherty. Connors broke serve on a 5-4 lead with a spectacular, running forehand pass and held on to his advantage.

"If I win Wimbledon, I will do it again," said Connors. "If I don't win Wimbledon, I will do it again.""
