Sheriff defends film confiscation
By Rachael Scott

The Black Hawk County Sheriff’s Office confiscated a film Thursday night after a Black Hawk County Justice of the Peace found the film had not been approved by the Iowa State Film Commission.

The sheriff, speaking from his home, said the sheriff’s department had received a call around 7 p.m. from someone who said they were going to do a “demonstration.”

The sheriff said the film was not allowed under Iowa law and that it was being confiscated because it was not approved by the Iowa State Film Commission.

The sheriff also said he did not believe the demonstration was going to happen and that he wanted to make sure the film was safe.

Medfly spraying expanded into new community

Life cycle of the Medfly

1. The M homosexually pairs itself with a receptive female.
2. The female then rejects the male.
3. The male then becomes attached to the female and follows her.
4. The female begins to seek out a suitable place to lay its eggs.
5. The Medfly then lays its eggs on the fruit in a specific area.
6. The eggs hatch into white maggots that tunnel into the fruit.
7. The maggots feed on the fruit, causing it to become discolored.
8. The maggots then pupate into adult flies.
9. The adult flies then mate and the cycle repeats itself.

Ul scientist’s research may lead to sickle cell therapy

By Cole Rogers
Special To The Daily

A UI researcher’s findings may lead to the first practical drug therapy for sickle cell disease, which affects as many as 80,000 Americans.

Dr. Joseph W. Walder, assistant professor of pharmacology, recently received an $80,000 grant from the National Institutes of Health which will fund a continuation of the work he began last year.

Walder’s research, which applies techniques from biochemistry and molecular biology, has the potential to provide a “pocket” treatment for sickle cell patients.

The disease is characterized by the formation of sickle-shaped red blood cells, which can get trapped in the blood vessels of the body, causing pain and organ failure.

Walder’s method involves removing one unit of a patient’s blood at a time and treating the red blood cells with a molecule that can ‘diagonally’ cross-link certain sickle cells, causing them to lose their sickle shape.

This process, called ‘diagonalization’, has the potential to provide a more practical, and available on a wider scale, therapy for sickle cell disease.

While Walder’s research will require more testing, the potential for a practical, effective treatment is promising.

The determination of the best cross-linking molecule can no longer attach to itself, making it a dimensional molecule consisting of an analog of kidney of hemoglobin, the protein in red blood cells, which can no longer function because the molecule is trapped in the small blood vessels, cutting off blood flow and killing patches of tissue.

This potential treatment could produce a new class of drug therapy for sickle cell disease.

The class of chemical compounds now under study are those that are analogs of kidney function because the molecule is trapped in the small blood vessels.

Sickle cell disease is a hereditary blood disorder that affects about 100,000 Americans, especially those of African descent.

Early signs of the disease, even in the first months of life, can be a sign of the disease, and the disease can cause organ failure.

For more information, contact the National Hemoglobin Society, which is at the top of the list for one of the most severe sociological problems.

Sickle cell trait is less severe and is more common, affecting about 8 million people in the United States.

Defanging Title IX

The Education Department’s civil rights director said this week that the department’s position is to determine that schools found guilty of sexual-orientation discrimination should not be prosecuted under Title IX. This would be an absolute plus to women in education and likely to be a high priority for all kinds of educational institutions.

In the past, schools faced the threat of losing federal aid or facing the prospect of a lawsuit. The government could also have found itself in violation of Title IX, which would have had a significant impact on the school’s reputation.

This means that women in education who are victims of sexual-orientation discrimination would not be protected under Title IX. It is likely that this will have a significant impact on the ability of women to report and address instances of discrimination.

However, it is important to note that this does not mean that Title IX is no longer a valuable tool for protecting women’s rights. It simply means that it is not as effective as it once was.

Letters

To the editor:

I love your column today! You have hit the nail on the head. We need to be reminded of the importance of Title IX and its role in protecting women’s rights.

I think that it is important to continue to promote Title IX and its importance. We need to be reminded of the importance of protecting women’s rights and ensuring that they are treated fairly and equally.

Letters

To the editor:

I recently read your column on Title IX and I was very impressed. I thought it was a great article and I agree with your stance on the importance of Title IX.

Ellen Boorstein

The Women’s Hall of Fame will be recognizing these women for their contributions to the nation. The ceremony will take place on Saturday at 7:00 PM.

Religion and the schools don’t mix

Public schools have always been a target for protests and demonstrations. Many groups believe that the separation of church and state is not being respected in public schools.

For example, the ACLU has filed lawsuits in favor of ending prayer in public schools. They argue that this is a violation of the First Amendment.

The government has responded by saying that it allows students to pray at school if they wish. However, the ACLU argues that this is not enough and that the schools should not be promoting religion in any way.

To the editor:

I think that the separation of church and state is an important issue that needs to be addressed. I agree with the ACLU that public schools should not be promoting religion.

I think that the schools should focus on teaching students about different religions and allowing them to learn about them. This would help to promote a better understanding of different cultures and beliefs.

Club pushes for Watt resignation
By Jack Foreman
Editor in Chief

Iowa City residents are planning a national petition drive that calls for the resignation of U.S. Senator and Iowa Governor James I. Watt.

The Johnson County Club at a meeting Tuesday evening authorized a national Amicales petition drive that is expected to have as many as 2.5 million signatures already have been collected in congressional lines with about 300 from the Iowa county.

Chicanism is denied in areas where Club members will set up a booth in River Park Sunday from 1:30 to 4 p.m. The Club expects many of Watt's supporters to flock there, too. But Club officials are confident that the campaign to have Watt's resignation is picking up steam.

Old pipe organ gets its first restoration

By Leslie Barlowe

The 100-year-old pipe organ at St. Mary’s Catholic Church in the village of Luxembourg is in need of a thorough cleaning. The church’s organist, Leslie Barlowe, said the organ has been neglected for many years and needs to be restored.

The organ, which is located in the north transept of the church, was built in 1921 by the Oliver Organ Company of Chicago. The organ was originally installed in a church in Chicago, but was later moved to St. Mary’s Church in Luxembourg.

Barlowe said the organ is in need of a thorough cleaning and restoration. She said the church has received several quotes for the work, but none have been accepted.

Barlowe said the church is hoping to receive funding from the National Park Service to help with the restoration. The church has already received a grant from the National Park Service to help fund the organ restoration.

The church is hoping to begin the restoration work in the fall of 2023. Barlowe said the church is hoping to have the organ back in operation by the end of the year.

Chicago panel okays mass transit bailout

CHICAGO — A Chicago city council panel has approved a $300 million bailout for a struggling transit system.

The transit system, which includes the CTA and Metra, is in need of funding to keep the system running.

The Chicago Transit Authority, which operates the CTA and Metra, requested the bailout from the city council.

The bailout will be used to pay for the cost of operating the transit system, as well as to make upgrades to the system.

The Chicago city council voted 40-10 to approve the bailout.

The bailout will be paid for using money from the city’s general fund.

The CTA and Metra have been struggling with budget issues in recent years.

In May, the CTA announced it would be laying off 300 employees.

Old pipe organ gets its first restoration

by Louise Niederer
From the Daily News

The 1898 organ, which was recently restored at the St. Mary's Hospital, is the oldest pipe organ in the city. The organ was the largest of its kind in the state when it was built in 1898. It was installed in the old Main St. Church, which was later converted into the St. Mary's Hospital. The organ was moved to its current location in 1962. It is being restored as part of the hospital's centennial celebration.

The project is planned to restore the organ as closely as possible to its original condition, according to its designer, Arthur P. Rogers. The organ has been in storage for many years. According to Rogers, the organ has been reassembled and is ready for use in the hospital's new wing. The organ will be dedicated on the hospital's centennial anniversary, October 15, 1988.

The organ is expected to be the centerpiece of the hospital's centennial celebration. It will be played by the hospital's organist, David Quimby, and other musicians from the community. The organ will be used for concerts and other events.

The organ is located in the hospital's new wing, which is being constructed on the hospital's current site. The new wing will include a large auditorium, a lecture hall, and a museum dedicated to the hospital's history.

The organ is expected to be in use for many years to come. The hospital is planning to use the organ for concerts and other events, and it is expected to become a centerpiece of the hospital's cultural activities.
