Funeral directors criticize regulation

By Constance Cullinan

Local funeral directors are objecting to a Federal Trade Commission proposal that would make it easier for people purchasing services and supplies from funeral homes to compare prices and services.

"We've been doing it for quite a while," said William Lenox, owner of the Iowa-Pipestone Funeral Association. "If we don't have the full extent of the ruling, but said innovation is "an important step forward" for the funeral home industry.

The FTC ruling requires funeral homes to provide information that lists the total price of the funeral and funeral home services, and the cost of each item, including funeral directors' fees, embalming, flowers, and transportation. The ruling also requires funeral homes to advertise prices and services in a manner that is clear and easy to understand. The FTC said the new regulations were necessary to protect consumers by ensuring that they receive accurate and complete information about the costs of funerals.

The Iowa-Pipestone Funeral Association is arguing that the new regulations would be costly and time-consuming for funeral homes, and that they would not be able to compete with non-profit organizations that are not subject to the same regulations. The association is also concerned that the new regulations would not be enforceable, and that there would be no way to ensure that funeral homes are following the rules.

A spokesman for the association said that the new regulations would be "costly and time-consuming," and that they would not be able to compete with non-profit organizations that are not subject to the same regulations. The association is also concerned that the new regulations would not be enforceable, and that there would be no way to ensure that funeral homes are following the rules.

The association is seeking a court order to suspend the new regulations, and is also considering legal action to challenge the FTC's decision. The association is also considering legal action to challenge the FTC's decision.

Emmylou puts on strong concert
By Jim Wexler

Emmylou Harris indicated a homepage, albeit modest, in her performance on Thursday at the West Liberty United Methodist Church. She was supported by Jack Nitzsche and the Nighthawks, a group of players that have been together for decades. Their sound was reminiscent of the late 1960s, with Harris' voice soaring above the instruments. The concert was a celebration of her long career in country music.

Music

In the foreground of this image, Harris is seen playing guitar. The background features a stage with various microphones and musical equipment. Harris' voice is clear and powerful, with a distinct twang that is characteristic of country music.

Union of Bo and Tarzan not a perfect 10
By Rosanne T. Miller

The Union of Bo and Tarzan may not be a perfect 10, but it's certainly worth watching. The story follows the adventures of two unlikely companions as they navigate the challenges of life together. The chemistry between the characters is palpable, and the humor is both clever and relatable.

Films

Three scenes stand out: a comedic sequence where Bo and Tarzan accidentally switch bodies, a heartwarming moment where they rescue a lost child, and a thrilling chase through the jungle. The visual effects are impressive, and the acting is top-notch.

Group gives single parent
a place to go

By Lisa Barker

Single parents no longer have to raise their children alone. An organized family or an organized home is at their disposal. Parents who are divorced, widowed or never married may have a helping hand through an organization known as Single Parent Partners. The organization can serve as an extended family to single parents who are divorced, widowed or never married. Children of single parents are becoming more common as more women enter the work force.

The organization can be an outlet if you had a bad day and you want to adult to confide, said a recent member. The organization run as an extended family for children of single parents. Wood said. CASTRO BLAMES U.S. FOR EPIDEMIC

Havana, Cuba—(AP) — In a news conference Wednesday, Fidel Castro blamed the United States for the spread of dengue fever in Cuba, saying the island nation has more of the mosquito-borne disease than ever before.

"The United States is responsible for the epidemic," Castro said at the news conference. "They have introduced the mosquito that carries the dengue virus into our country." Castro said the United States had故意引入这种蚊子来传播这种疾病，以摧毁古巴的经济。

CASTRO said that the U.S. has an "unfair advantage" among superpower weapons and charges that U.S. military bases in the Caribbean have helped spread the disease. He also accused the United States of "economic warfare" by embargoing Cubas sugar, tobacco and banana exports.

"The lack of sugar, the revolution, the lack of the government of the United States has given Cuba the opportunity to spread dengue fever throughout the country," Castro said.

ALSO CASTRO spoke of the "unfair" treatment of his brother Raul, a gene that he gave his brother for his assassination attempt on the Cuban leader in 1992.

"The problem is that the government of the United States has not punished the Raul Castro regime for the assassination attempt," Castro said.

The press conference was held at the presidential palace in Havana, where Castro is expected to hold a series of forums on the subject. Castro said the forum would be held on October 12, which is Cuba's Independence Day.

CASTRO'S comments come as the United States and Cuba are trying to normalize relations after more than 50 years of Cold War hostilities.

"The United States is responsible for the epidemic," Castro said. "They have introduced the mosquito that carries the dengue virus into our country."

Carlucci, Jones happy in minors

By Brad Parese
Special to The Daily

After a three-year hiatus, former U.S. baseball players Jeff Jones and Rich Carlucci have been activated again. The two former teammates are now playing in Connecticut for the New Britain Bees, a minor league baseball team.

Both players believe their minor league baseball has a lot to offer. Each player can develop skills that can be used in the major leagues, but they want to be good right now and stay focused on the game.

ALFRED T. Dan overtones

One of the major issues that Carlucci and Jones are focusing on is the turnover by the major league teams. Although they have played in the majors, they are still young and learning how to handle the pressure of the major league game.
